Somerset Record Society.

REPORT.

THE last year has not produced any great changes in our work. The number of subscribers is one less than before, since we have only obtained eight new names to take the place of nine that have been removed. This probably is satisfactory when we compare ourselves with other societies engaged in similar work ; but it is also a reason why all our members should endeavour to increase our numbers by enlisting new names. It should always be remembered that our work is not so much of a popular as of a permanent character. It is work that is necessary for the formation of a new County History. The many popular and illustrated volumes that are so pleasing to the eye but so ephemeral in their influence should not be allowed to interfere with the progress of work so enduring as our own. Somerset men should help us first, and certainly if they did so at all generally our volumes would appear with greater frequency, and we would the sooner accomplish much that now calls for our attention.

Next year we hope to issue the Bruton and Montacute Chartularies under the editorship of Mr. J. Batten. We are now also able to announce that through the kindness of the Bishop of Bath and Wells and the Registrar of the Diocese, Mr. Harris, we are enabled to take in hand the transcription and publication of Bishop Ralph's Register 1329-1363. This will appear, it is hoped, in 1895. It is a MS. of 482 closely written folios, and the expense of transcription and printing will be so great that nothing but the most generous assistance of our present subscribers and a large increase of their number can secure success. This register is full of most interesting matter concerning the County during a very critical period, and it is hoped that much valuable information will appear concerning the development of the Cathedral body. All important documents will appear in full, and nothing will be omitted except the common and repeated phraseology for institutions, licences to study, and such-like common events. It is not intended to be a calendar, but on the contrary will be a complete copy of all the information to be obtained from that Register. The work will be edited by the Honorary Secretary.

Introduction.

ONE side only of the history of an English Benedictine house, that which presents the Convent as a society receiving and managing property of various kinds, is the main subject of the documents printed or calendared in this volume. The two parts of the volume set before us the two principal extant Chartularies, or Registers, of the Priory, or the Abbey as it was during the earlier portion of its existence, of St. Peter at Bath. They were of course compiled in the Scriptorium, or writing-room, of the House. Much work was done in a monastic Scriptorium, and it is impossible adequately to express the benefits derived by the world of letters from the labours of the scribes of the Benedictine Order. A great part of their work consisted in copying books for the use of their own Convents; for even in the earliest days of the Order, when the monks largely employed themselves in manual labour, reading formed an important part of their daily duties; for St. Benedict hated idleness of any kind, and, recognizing that mental exercise was the best safeguard against temptation, declared that a library was an armoury against the enemy. Gifts of books were highly valued by the monks. At Bath the Convent had down to its last days books said to have been presented to it by King Athelstan,¹ and grateful remembrance was made of gifts of books from Bishop John of Tours (1088-1122), Bishop Godfrey (1123-1135), and Bishop Reginald (1174-1191).² Chief among the books that the monks copied was the Bible, and they often added to their copies of the sacred text a mass of patristic glosses, so that some of their Bibles present, along with the Holy Scriptures, a complete synopsis of commentaries upon them. The service-books of the house, with and without music, were also usually written by the brethren. Some of these books were handsomely bound, and splendid with illuminations in gold and various colours. Of such a kind was, no doubt, the Pontifical presented to Bath by Bishop William Button I (1248-1264), which was bound in scarlet leather.³ Other books of all kinds were borrowed and copied, books on theology, grammar, rhetoric, philosophy, history, and medicine; and the volumes thus made were given out to the brethren, each of them having a book to read, and being able of course to change it. All the books were collected once a year, so that the librarian, who was generally the precentor,¹ might see that his charge was complete and in good order.² Many books too were lent to schools, to clergy, and to great people of literary tastes. How various were the contents of a monastic library, though this may be learned far better elsewhere, may be inferred from the titles of the few Bath books noted by Leland. They were "Isagoge Joannicii," "Libellus Galeni ad Mæcenatem," "Hipopnosticon Laurentii Dunelmensis," "Galenus de Morbo et Accidenti," "Liber de febribus, quem transtulit Constantinus monachus Cassinensis ex lingua Arabica," "Commentarii Cæsaris."³ Besides the books copied in the Scriptorium, many were composed or compiled by the brethren of a Benedictine house. Chief among these were Chronicles and Histories, but the work accomplished by the Benedictines in this line cannot be entered on here. There were however certain books and documents, written in a Monastery, and more or less presenting the history and daily life of a Convent, that more properly belong to our subject. In the Consuetudinary of a Monastery will be found directions for the performance of Divine Service, together with various customs and rules to be observed by the brethren. Of these books we have a specimen, though a poor one, in the Historia de Abingdon (Rolls Ser.). The contents of the Book of Benefactors are sufficiently described by its title. One of our Bath Chartularies has a list of benefactors and their gifts which was probably taken from a fuller record of the same nature, such as we have in the "Liber de Benefactoribus Monasterii Sancti Albani."⁴ Akin to these books are the Martyrologies or Necrologies of Monasteries, wherein were entered the deaths of saints, and of the brethren and benefactors of the house that owned and compiled the volume, together with their obits. Two or three references to the Martyrology of Bath will be found here.⁵ Many manuscripts were written in a large religious house relating to its secular concerns. Terriers, Custumals, and Rentals giving an exact account of the manorial and other lands of a monastery, and of the rents and services due from its tenants, were drawn up from time to time, and specially when a new head of a zealour spirit had lately been elected. Some valuable specimens of books of this sort belonging to Glastonbury Abbey have been printed, one of them by the Somerset Record Society.⁶ The elaborate system of financial administration adopted in the larger Benedictine houses, by which the temporal duties and responsibilities of conventual life were divided amongst various obedientiary officers, working independently of one another—a subject to be noted again later—supplies another class of manuscripts in the form of Comptus Rolls, or as we may call them, account-books, such as those already printed from the records of St. Swithun's Priory at Winchester, and Abingdon

Abbey.¹ Again, the general business of a Convent entailed much writing; conveyances, leases, deeds of presentation to benefices, and a vast number of other documents were drawn up by the brethren, and were generally written with much skill. They were carefully preserved, and with them were kept the charters of the house, which were often the only satisfactory evidence that a Convent could produce of its right to its estates; indeed it sometimes happened—we have two notable instances in these Registers²—that the power to produce a charter enabled a Convent to win an important suit, or successfully resist some burthensome claim. As, however, these and other documents, written as they commonly were, each on a small piece of parchment, were liable to be lost, to be destroyed, and to perish from damp or other causes, it was the custom of the monks to copy them into books called Chartularies and Registers, which, as they contained copies of all deeds relating to the secular affairs of a Monastery, afford materials for its history so far as such affairs are concerned. Two of such books belonging to the Priory of Bath are now before us.

While then this volume will, it is hoped, be found to afford much information with respect to the financial condition and general business of the Priory during a long period, readers must not imagine that these things took up all the time and attention of the monks. To speak as though such books as these Chartularies, or even documents like Compotus rolls, gave a picture of the life of a religious community, and to argue that, because they tell us little or nothing about monastic devotion, study, or charity, the monks were generally either occupied in the things of this world, or passed their hours in gossip or torpor, that they did nothing for the poor or for society at large, would be foolish and unfair. Step for a moment outside the narrow area covered by these Chartularies, and—to take one point only—think of the stated daily calls on the time and strength of the monks of such a house as Bath. In all seasons alike the monks rose from their beds at midnight, and went into a cold church—think how terribly cold it must have been in the depth of winter—and there went through a service, or rather two services, Matins and Lauds, which were mostly sung, and lasted about an hour and a half. They then crept back to bed again. At 7 a.m. they again assembled in their Church for Prime, and at its close there was a short meeting in the Chapter-house for the ordinary business of the house and specially its discipline. After that, one of the monks in priest's orders would, in his turn, celebrate our Lady's mass, while others would be reading or talking in the cloister. At 9 a.m. came Tierce, which was followed by High Mass and Sext. Dinner time was in the fourteenth century probably 11 or 11.30, and during the meal some lesson would be read aloud. After dinner came Nones, and while most of the monks were engaged in that Service, the Conversi, or lay-brethren, and the monks who had in their turn served the others at dinner, sat down to their meal. Then came a time of sleep, which was followed by active employment of different kinds, specially in the case of the officers, by study, or recreation. Vespers were sung at 3 p.m. Supper was at 6, and was followed by a reading from some book of edification. At 7.30 came Compline, and then at 8 the brethren went to the dormitory to sleep, until they were roused for Matins. It was in the intervals of these stated duties that the officers of a great Benedictine house transacted its manifold business, and that other brethren did such work as has already been indicated.¹ Some of course did little work, yet even so their lives can scarcely be said to have been slothful as compared with those of many cathedral dignitaries of our own day.

As regards the charity of a Monastery we have no right to expect anything to be told us in a Chartulary. Nor indeed are even Computus rolls likely to give us much information on this head; for it must be remembered that the poor would during the middle ages usually be relieved by gifts of food and clothing rather than of money. Nevertheless the later of our two Chartularies does afford us some indications that the monks of Bath were not negligent of the duty of Christian charity. And the entries that bear on this, and some other subjects not generally illustrated by a Monastic Register, and lying somewhat outside its proper scope, invest the Register belonging to the Honourable Society of Lincoln's Inn with a peculiar interest. On nineteen days at least in the year, at the commemorations of certain great benefactors, we find that the monks fed a hundred poor persons,² and they bore no small part in the maintenance of the hospital of St. John the Baptist at Bath, founded by Bishop Reginald in order to enable the poor to derive benefit from the famous waters; indeed as an acknowledgment of their liberality they received the right of appointing the Master of the hospital, and were thus, to use a modern phrase, constituted its Governors.³ Some at least of the many corrodies granted by the Convent, about which something must be said later, though not bestowed on people of the poorest class, were almost certainly charitable gifts. There can be no question that the daily allowance of bread and ale made to Matilda, the anchor of Stapleton,⁴ must be so considered, while other allowances of the same kind seem to have been assigned to aged persons, no longer able to work. So slight, however, are the hints concerning the internal life of the house that are to be found in the documents before us that we must be mindful, while we notice them, not to suppose that nothing remains behind, and that this or that circumstance of which we catch a glimpse is all that we should see if we had a complete view of the doings of the Convent. For example, no one will refuse to admit that every large Benedictine monastery, and specially those situated, as Bath was, on frequented roads, entertained crowds of strangers and pilgrims, of whom the greater part were too poor to make any return for the hospitality they received. Yet, as these records are not concerned with such matters, the only faint echo that we catch here of the words of welcome and the bustle of the guest-house is conveyed in the mere name of the building set apart for hospitality, the hostry of the Priory.¹ An indirect illustration of the spirit that pervaded the customs of such a house as Bath may be found in an incidental notice of the beautiful ceremony performed on Maundy Thursday,² when the Cellarer called into the Priory as many poor men as there were monks. All were ranged in two rows, the monks on one side, and the poor on the other. Then, after the antiphon "Dominus Jesus" had been sung and some prayers offered, each brother went up to his poor man, and knelt before him, adoring Christ in the person of his poor representative. Then he washed the poor man's feet, and kissed him on the mouth and eyes, and set him down to meat and served him.³

With this Maundy Thursday observance are closely connected the rules of the house relating to the death of any of its members. These rules were not generally different from those of other Benedictine houses. In order fully to understand them we must bear in mind the spiritual fellowship that existed between the religious of the same Order, and was indeed often extended to those of other Orders. A remarkable illustration of this fellowship is given us in the bond for prayer made between the Abbot of Bath and six other heads of Benedictine Convents, of the date of 1077, in which the parties agreed to pray for one another and their brethren, and to be loyal to the King and Queen, "with one heart and soul."⁴ It will be observed that two of the Abbots were of the conquering race, and their union with their English brethren is pleasant to contemplate. A like sentiment of fellowship stirred the Convent of Bath in 1243 to offer a share in the benefits of their prayers to all who should help to convey fresh water to the sister house of Muchelney.⁵ Unions for prayer between different Convents were frequent in the case of prayers for a deceased brother, and in these the number of masses to be said was a matter of agrément. Bath, it may be observed, had agreements of this kind with sixteen English convents and one if not both of the two abbeys at Caen founded by the Conqueror and his wife.⁶ When a monk of Bath died each of the brethren of the house submitted to a penitential whipping, which would probably be administered in the Chapter-house, while the "De Profundis" was sung. A messenger was then hired by the Chamberlain, and was dispatched to all the religious communities from which prayers were due, and indeed to many others, with a mortuary roll having at the head an announcement of the death, and a short account of the deceased.⁷ Each community acknowledged receiving the roll by writing upon it an inscription or "title" (titulus) containing a promise of prayer for the soul of the departed, and as a rule a request for similar prayers for their deceased brethren and benefactors. Sometimes the recipients added some verses to their title. An example of this occurs in the inscription of the Bath Convent on the mortuary roll of Matilda, daughter of William the Conqueror, and abbess of Holy Trinity at Caen. The title written by the Convent runs :—

“Titulus sancti Petri Bathoniensis ecclesiæ. Anima ejus et animæ omnium fidelium defunctorum per misericordiam Dei, in Christi nomine, requiescant in pace. Orate pro nostris.”

To this the “scholars of Bath,” of whom something must be said later, added :—

“Vox scholarium ejusdem urbis.”

“Quid furitis nonnæ? Quid amatis carmen inane?
Dicite rem tandem, rem tandem dicite plane.
Quid nos buccicrepa sermonum mole gravatis?
Quid teritis tempus, ventosaque verba rogatis,
Insuetos versus et ploratus pueriles?
Quid mors, sera licet, venas irrupit aniles?
Nonne pudet, queso, nobis indicere fletum,
Quod defecit anus, subiit quod femina lætum?
Certe jure subit lætalem femina sortem;
Importavit enim muliebris suasio mortem.
Addo quod illius fertis super æthera vitam,
Nec dubitatis eam solio regni redimitam.
Hoc igitur quantum careat ratione videtis,
Quod vos de domina, cum gaudeat ipsa, doletis.
Propterea, moneo, mœrori ponite metas,
Et manibus plausus, et laudes edite lætas.
Sin lacrimis plenas huic indulgetis habenas,
Dandum livori, non vero credo dolori.
Nam mala si mors est, subit illam femina jure;
Si bona, non illam patitur bona femina dure.”

On receiving the mortuary roll of Vital, founder and abbot of Savigny, who died Sept. 16, 1122, the Convent simply inscribed it with the title :—

“Anima ejus et animæ omnium fidelium defunctorum requiescant in pace. Concedimus ei beneficium loci nostri. Orate pro nostris.”¹

Masses and other services were performed at Bath for a deceased brother for thirty days, and special rites were due on the thirtieth day.² Like observances, popularly called the “month’s mind,” a term which came to be used only of the observances of the thirtieth day, were commonly practised in the case of deceased persons of all conditions. For a whole year the usual allowances of food were drawn on behalf of the deceased, and were given to the poor, and the deceased monk had his poor man apportioned to him on the Maundy Thursday after his death as though he were present. On the anniversary of his death a distribution of bread and ale was made to the poor. Additions were made to these observances by Prior Robert de Clopcote in 1316, who, besides ordering that masses for the deceased should be celebrated in the octaves of ten festivals during the year after his death, provided that his effects should be distributed "for the good of his soul," which meant no doubt generally to the poor, in the place where he died, whether at the Priory of Bath, or at one of its cells.¹ In a later ordinance on the same subject arrangements were also made for fitting observances on the death of one of the "Conversi" of the house.² These Conversi were lay brethren, who had taken the vows of religion, but were exempt from the duties of study and the choir, being employed in manual labour. They appear first in England in Carthusian monasteries, and were later, and gradually, admitted into Benedictine houses.

The benefits of the prayers and good works of the brethren of Bath were granted to a large number of benefactors, and others besides the great were able to obtain this privilege. A yearly payment of a not very serious amount, such as a pound of wax, seems to have qualified a man or woman to be received, if otherwise fitting, into the number of "fratres" or "sorores" of the Convent.³ Those so admitted knew that the divine sacrifice was daily offered for them in the church of the monastery, and that prayer was continually made for them while they lived, and that after death the welfare of their souls would be the subject of special intercession. If we can put ourselves in the place of these persons, and, whatever our own religious opinions may be, try to think their thoughts, we shall not fail to see that there was something beautiful in the tie between them and the Convent, they giving temporal things that they might, in the midst of their daily life, often rough and hard as it was, know that they were receiving spiritual things. The strength of this tie and its effect on the mind are shown by the desire often expressed by those rich enough to claim the privilege that they might be buried in the monastery to which in life their loyal affection had been given. So Hugh Witon, of the house probably of Roger Witon, or de Corcelle, lord of Freshford, Stoke (Rodney Stoke), and many other manors in the Conqueror's reign, and one would like to think an ancestor of the ill-fated Richard Whiting, last Abbot of Glastonbury, and Strangia his wife, bequeath their bodies to the Convent,⁴ so Sir Hubert Huse and his wife Hawisa were laid in the chapel of St. Leonard in the Priory church, and there the brethren, mindful of the benefits they had received from Sir Hubert and his family, said special masses for their repose,⁵ and so the third John lord Mohun and Ada his wife were buried in the Priory of Dunster, which had come to the Bath Convent by the magnificent bounty of the founder of the Mohun family in England.⁶ It is abundantly evident from these Chartularies that the Priory held a high place in the esteem of its neighbours, at least from the eleventh to the fourteenth centuries. It was not of course one of the more famous houses of England, like the monasteries of Christ Church, Canterbury, Glastonbury, St. Albans, or other foundations that might be named, and numbered very few among its beneficiaries that were not more or less closely connected with it by neighbourhood, tenancy, or hereditary ties. At the same time the number of families among the baronage and country gentry of Somerset and Gloucestershire, whose members regarded the community with interest and affection, was certainly large. Among such families we may note the Mohuns of Dunster, the house of the powerful lord Walter de Douai, and his son Robert, baron of Cary and of Bampton in Devon, the Paynels who inherited from Walter de Douai, and the Cogans whose wide possessions in Ireland won by the famous "Miles Coganensis," could scarcely have been so valuable as the lordships of Huntspill and Bampton where they succeeded the Paynels. The connexion of Patrick de Cadurcis with the Priory formed another tie between it and its richer neighbours, and seems to have given it a claim on the good offices of a family descended from the baronial house of Baalun. Among its friends were the Hosats—the varieties of the name almost baffle enumeration, and it is enough here to say that Sir Hubert Huse bore it—who held Charlcombe of the Convent, the house of Alexander de Anno—again the forms of the name are various—at Camely and Long Ashton, which gave it a Prior in the person of Walter de Anno (1261–1290), the rich and bountiful lady of Batheaston, the wife of one of the Champflurs, the Montforts of Farleigh, the family of St. Lo of Newton, and the Cotels at Camerton. The name of Walter de Anno, who was Cellarer before his election as Prior, suggests that the monks were in some cases men of good social position. This was by no means uncommonly the case in Benedictine congregations, and, combined with the fact that their Convents owned extensive territories, was the cause of the honourable title "Dominus," or Dom, often prefixed to a Benedictine's name, a distinction to which the two main branches of the parent tree planted by St. Benedict, the Cluniac and Cistercian Orders, are also entitled.

The number of professed monks belonging to the Bath Convent at its most flourishing period seems (exclusive of the Prior) to have been forty, for so many signed a letter to Pope Innocent III., printed on a later page of this Introduction. A century and a half later this number had only slightly dwindled; for though in a power of attorney granted by the Convent in 1344 only thirty names follow that of the Prior,¹ yet we must add to these the Prior of Dunster, and three or four monks of Bath residing there, and the Warden or Prior of the Irish cells of the Convent. Accordingly there were at Bath four officers bearing the title of Prior, for the Priors of a Convent were the monastic deans of an earlier age, and one of these officers was appointed for every ten monks, so that the number of Priors in a house enables us to arrive approximately at the number of its monks. At Bath we have the Prior, or Prior major, of the Convent, a Sub-prior, a tertius and a quartus Prior.² It is true that in the Bond of 1077 only seventeen monks are named besides the Abbot,¹ but it is not to be supposed that these were the only professed brethren in the house, and it seems probable that in these seventeen we have the number of monks then in priest's orders, and therefore capable of fulfilling each his share in the undertaking by the celebration of masses. As we shall see the Great Plague reduced the number as it was in 1344 by at least half,² and though in later years there was a slight rally, the number was always much smaller than before that awful visitation. Of the chief monastic, or obedientiary, officers of the Convent we find notices here of the Sub-prior, Precentor with a Succentor inferior to him, Sacristan, Cellarer, Chamberlain, Refectorian, Infirmarian, Almoner, Kitchener, and Master of the Works. Elsewhere we meet with the third and fourth Priors, the Treasurer, the Pittancer, and the Granatarian, or Granary-steward. And besides these there were of course a Guest-master, and a Master of the Novices. Several illustrations will be found of the division of the finance of a Benedictine monastery into separate departments, each managed by its own officer, sometimes with the assistance of a subordinate, and with its independent endowments and proper responsibilities. Thus the Sacristan, who had a Sub-sacrist, had assigned to him as the "portio" of his office certain annual payments, or pensions, from the churches of Bath Easton, Bathwick, and St. Mary de Stalls in Bath, and also apparently from the church of Cameley, for an annuity of a mark granted by the Convent had to be paid by him from the revenue of that church.³ So too the Almoner, who also had a subordinate, received the rent of a house by the bridge across the Avon at Bath, and two marks and a quarter of a mark from three churches belonging to the Convent.⁴ The Prior had his separate revenue derived from specified sources.⁵ Each officer had to meet the expenses proper to his office out of the revenues assigned to it. Nor was this all, for it was the custom when any extra annual expense was undertaken by the Convent to portion it out as far as possible between different departments, some managed by obedientiaries and others by lay officers, and to burden each with such proportion of the whole sum as it seemed able to bear. An example of this will be found in the grant of a retiring pension to Prior Robert de Sutton in 1332.⁶ Some idea of the special administrative duties of most of the obedientiaries can perhaps be gained from their official titles. It may however be worth while to note that, as the Prior of Bath was from the twelfth century the virtual head of the house as regards its daily life, the Sub-prior was a far more important person there than in houses ruled by a resident Abbot. Although the number of Priors was determined by that of the monks, it is not to be supposed that every ten brethren were under the special supervision of a Prior in, say, the twelfth and later centuries, though this may have been the case in earlier times. At Bath the Prior of the Convent had the duties and responsibilities of an Abbot, while it seems probable that the other and lesser

Priors had each the supervision of a separate class among the brethren, one being appointed to look after those in priest's orders and so on. The Cellarer held a more important office than is perhaps signified by his title; he was indeed the chief of the domestic officers, and fulfilled the duties both of a manciple and a butler; providing generally the necessary food and drink for the house, and having charge of all the table-utensils. He was, we find in the Rule, to be "the father of the whole congregation," and to be careful over each member of it, and above all over the sick.¹ To the Infirmarer of course pertained the special charge of the sick, and he had a separate cook and kitchen for the infirmary.² Some knowledge of medicine and surgery was common among Benedictine monks, probably every monastery had books on these subjects, and some famous English physicians belonged to the Order, while others were secular priests. Bishop John de Villula, famous in the annals of our house, acquired great wealth by his skill in medicine, and two Benedictine Abbots who were contemporary with him, Baldwin of St. Edmund's and Faricius of Abingdon, were also notable physicians, and brought no small gains to their respective houses by their attendance on great people. If at any time one of the Bath monks was skilled in medicine, he would no doubt attend the sick in the infirmary. Otherwise the Convent would engage a physician, contracting with him to supply medicines. Master Arnold, who appears to have been the resident physician of the house early in the thirteenth century, may have been a member of the Convent.³ About a hundred years later we find the Convent agreeing with Master John of Bath, evidently a secular clerk, to attend on the infirmary and supply medicines, in consideration of receiving board and lodging in the Priory.⁴ The Chamberlain had to provide all the clothes, shoes, and beds needed for the Convent and allowed by the rule of the Order, and all shaving utensils, to keep the windows of the dormitory glazed, and the horses of the Prior, and of any guests, shod, and to find any monks that were going on a journey proper clothes for the occasion. Moreover, once a year he was to re-stuff the beds of the brethren with clean hay.⁵ The Pittancer seems to have had to make various special payments to the brethren and servants of the house, and probably to meet expenses connected with certain Anniversaries. His office too had its revenues from independent sources.⁶ No such elaborate system of accounts was in use during the Middle Ages as that carried out in a Benedictine monastery. In some respects this system was highly beneficial to a Convent; for, so long as it was thoroughly and conscientiously carried out, it secured for each department of expense the undivided attention and control of an officer who must soon have become perfectly master of his work. At the same time it was not without its dangers. When one of the departments had a surplus there must have been a temptation to burden it with some charge—some pension or corrody—without much thought of the possibility that another department might fall into arrears, through some accident such as fire, or some lack of good management. Indeed, to put the objection in another form, the departmental system must have tended to favour extravagance, and to keep the common fund of a monastery unduly low, so that any extraordinary expense would have to be met by raising a loan. And when the number of monks in a Convent was diminished, and several departments of expenditure were, as at Bath in the fifteenth century,¹ placed under the control of a single officer, the system of separate accounts would almost certainly work badly, and would possibly lead to confusion and consequent waste.

In any notice of the ordinary expenditure of a Convent a conspicuous place must be assigned to corrodies and other allowances, such as pensions and grants of clothing. A corrody (Lat. corredium) was a grant to some person either for his or her life, or sometimes during the fulfilment of certain duties, of food, drink, and clothing. In some cases clothing was not included in the grant, while a grant of clothing alone should not be called a corrody. The most usual form of a corrody was, so far as food and drink are concerned, a daily allowance similar to that of a brother of the house. Some corrodies, however, were only the rations of a servant of the monastery, while others were on a grander scale than a monk's allowances or commons, and had attached to them various privileges such as the maintenance of one or two servants. These grants are often treated as merely an ingenious and extravagant device for raising ready money by life annuities. This is an unfair way of dealing with the subject, and one that suggests only a partial comprehension of it. It is true that corrodies were sometimes sold,² and when this took place a Convent, in consideration of the receipt of so much cash, bound itself to a constant expenditure for an indefinite time, until, that is, the death of the purchaser. Sales of this kind may well have been prejudicial to the interests of the community, and when a Convent was in pecuniary difficulties it is easy to believe that the monks must have sometimes made a bad bargain in order to relieve themselves of instant pressure. Yet it is going too far to assume that even these sales were always unprofitable. In themselves they were transactions of precisely the same kind as grants of immediate annuities which may at the present day be purchased of many first-rate Insurance Companies, and we may be sure that the monks, except when they were hard driven for lack of money, tried to do the best for themselves. At the same time it may be conceded that, considering the temptation to abuse inherent in these transactions, as well as the chance that the sellers might be mistaken in their calculations, the sale of corrodies was by no means to be commended. There appears no reason to believe, except perhaps in one instance where it may be suspected,³ that any of the numerous corrodies noted in the later of our two Chartularies was granted for a cash payment. Indeed these sales were probably rare, and the system of corrodies must not be dismissed with a sweeping condemnation merely because it was occasionally abused. Some corrodies which were also matters of business were, it may fairly be assumed, good bargains for the house that granted them. A man would determine to endow a Convent with his land, and yet be unwilling to leave himself, and perhaps some one dependent on him, without any means of subsistence. It might be extremely advantageous to the Convent to obtain immediate possession, and as the freedom of alienation by will in respect of land, which was enjoyed before the Conquest, was restrained, it was necessary that an intending benefactor should make conveyance of his land during his life. It was therefore not uncommon that a Convent, in consideration of entering at once, and without risk of disappointment or dispute, upon lands given to them, should assign to the grantor, and sometimes also to others who had an interest in, or claim upon, the property, a maintenance for life by way of corrody or pension. So far was such an arrangement from being prejudicial to the interests of a monastery that there can be no doubt that it was often extremely profitable. Of such a nature we may fairly assume was the somewhat complicated bargain by which the Bath Priory obtained possession of certain lands at Berwick and Widcombe, near Bath, in the time of Prior Gilbert.¹ In this case provision was made for the two sisters, apparently unmarried, of a clerk who made over lands to the Convent, partly by a rent and partly by a corrody.

Sometimes a corrody was granted in lieu of wages in money. For example, the income of the vicar of the Convent's church of Dunster was eked out by a corrody for himself at the table of the monks at Dunster, and another for his boy, that is, his servant and attendant in church, of the same food as that supplied to the boys in the Priory at Bath.² Several instances occur of the domestic and other servants of the Prior and the monastery being paid in this way.³ One grant deserves special notice. In 1316 the house was in want of a plumber and glazier. Lead roofs, though virtually everlasting, need, as the parson of many a country church can testify, pretty constant repairs, and there is some reason to believe that the condition of the Priory church, and probably also of the other buildings of the house, was not at the time very satisfactory. A certain John Wulfrich—the name in the modern form of Woolfries is still to be met with in East Somerset—a tenant of the Convent, was an adept at plumbing and glazing. He was a villein on the conventual estates, holding his land by bond-service, and he would consequently be unable to devote himself to a mechanical employment, or to leave his holding, without becoming a fugitive. The Prior and Convent therefore manumitted him, enabling him to leave his holding and its services, and making him a free mechanic, and at the same time they engaged him to do their work, and paid him by the grant of a corrody.⁴ Now and then a corrody was granted by a Convent as a provision for an old servant, or the widow of some one who had, either as a servant or in some other capacity, been useful to the house. When about 1258, Prior Thomas and the Convent of Bath granted a corrody to their servant Stephen of Englishbatch, it evidently was doubtful whether he would continue to serve them much longer ; if he did he was to receive a wage in addition to his maintenance, which must therefore be taken as a pension for his old age.¹ There was nothing surely extravagant in grants of this kind. Some corrodies were, as we have seen, more or less in the nature of alms. One recorded here is pleasant to notice. In the time of Prior Robert a corrody was granted to the then aged mother of one of his predecessors in office, Prior Hugh, who, though he seems to have held the Priorship only a short time, evidently left behind him a fair memory.² It is however undeniable that corrodies were sometimes granted foolishly, extravagantly, to unworthy persons, and for unworthy motives. We can for the most part only guess when this was so. When the number of such grants seems abnormally large, and specially when this is the case at a time when the monastery was deeply in debt, as Bath was in the middle of the fourteenth century, we may suspect that there was culpable extravagance. Two grants of lodging and other privileges—not of corrodies—made in the time of Prior John de Iford, a man of bad character, when the house was in debt and generally, as is probable, in an unsatisfactory state, seem specially open to suspicion.³ Much that has been said of corrodies is applicable to money pensions, allowances of clothes, lodging, and the like, though grants of lodging within the monastery have a bearing on the number of monks at the time, which may conveniently be noticed in the course of an attempt to gather up and arrange chronologically some facts in the history of the Priory. The retirement of a Prior was of course an occasion on which a large pension would be granted, and its amount was sanctioned by the Bishop of the diocese, not as being in loco Abbatis at Bath, but in virtue of his episcopal office.⁴

One class of corrodies has been reserved for separate notice, because it has nothing to do with the character or conduct of the society that made the grants. These are corrodies granted involuntarily, and often sorely against the will of the monks. The founder of a monastery and his representatives claimed the right to compel the Convent always to support some one, a man or a woman according to the sex of the society, of their nomination. It is easy to see how the claim arose. It was often the case that when a great person founded a monastery, he or she would do so expressly intending to retire from the world and serve God in the new foundation, watching over its interests and dwelling amongst its inmates as one of their number. A founder was not infrequently the first abbot or abbess of the house, or, as often happened in the case of royal foundations, the founder was represented by a son or a daughter. At all events it was natural enough that when a man desired, or a boy was destined for, a religious life, he should enter a society founded and enriched by the devotion of his ancestors, and that its members should gladly receive him, feeling indeed that they were bound to do so, and the same would happen in the case of a nunnery. Gradually, and to no small extent in consequence of the spread of feudal ideas respecting rights and obligations, the representative of a founder came to look upon the society that his ancestor had founded as legally liable to support a nominee of his own. No son of his wished to become a monk, but he had, it may be, an old retainer for whom he wished to provide. The man had no vocation, perhaps was utterly unfit, for religious life, still his lord would think "my house might well support him in return for all they have from us," and so he would send the man down requesting the monastery to grant him the allowance of a monk. Before long a right was held to be established; the representative of the founder claimed that when his nominee for a corrody died, he had a right to appoint a successor to it. It was a monstrous abuse; it diverted that which had been consecrated to the service of God to the maintenance of old and decrepit servants, and so saved their lords the expense of providing for them out of their own substance, and it sometimes laid an extra burden on a society which was already in straits for money, and therefore anxious to keep its number low until it had passed through its difficulties, and it was likely enough to introduce worldly conversation and ideas among persons whose thoughts and words should have been directed heavenwards. The claim to a corrody was a general fundatorial right, but we meet with it more frequently in the records of a royal, than of a private, foundation. Private families sometimes died out, or their right was forgotten, or successfully disputed. A king succeeded to all the rights of his predecessors; it was seldom that he managed to live "of his own," and the claims of the Crown were not often allowed to slumber for many years, and were hard to resist. When Margaret, the Queen of Edward I., requested the Convent of Bath to receive into its number Brother Eugenius, formerly an abbot in Germany,¹ she was not asking for a corrody, or demanding a right of any kind, but it was of course impossible for the monks to refuse her request. It seems likely that Eugenius had left his abbey and come to England to attend on the new queen, possibly as a physician, for Margaret had only lately been married when she obtained a provision for him at Bath. Other inmates were sometimes added to the Convent without its leave, for the Bishop, in virtue of his episcopal office, claimed the right to nominate a new monk in each or any of the Benedictine monasteries in his diocese during the first year of his pontificate.

An attempt was made to lay a double burden on the Priory of Bath by demanding sustenance for two persons at once, both nominated by the Crown. The first notice of the exercise of the king's asserted right to nominate a person to receive a corrody from the Convent was, so far as we can learn from these records, in 1302, when Edward I. obtained one for one of his servants named John of Windsor.² This man had fallen into ill-health, and his disease was declared to be one that could not be cured except by using the Bath waters. He was unfit for further service at Court, and the king determined to provide for him at the expense of the Priory. This was just what we should expect from Edward I.; for, though he was a godly man, he never scrupled to bear hardly on the religious houses. Of course the monks grumbled when they received the royal letter, perhaps one or two with some knowledge of law and of the history of their house told the rest that the king was going beyond his rights, that the monastery was founded in free alms, that no kind of service was due from it on account of its foundation, and that there was among their muniments a charter that would prove their words.¹ But others shook their heads. It would be best, they said, to oblige the king; and indeed it was ill disputing with Edward I. The man is sick, they urged, and it would be an act of charity to enable him to live near our famous baths, which will be sure to relieve him; it is not as if the king was demanding this of us as his right, he is asking us to do him a favour.² With this way of looking at the case, we may be sure Prior Robert de Clopcote concurred, for he was inclined to be extravagant and careless about money matters. Besides, he was only just elected, and would be unwilling to be embroiled in a quarrel with the king at the very beginning of his priorate. So John of Windsor had his corrody and lodgings in the house, and the Bath waters must have agreed wonderfully with him, for he seems to have lived at the Priory for about thirty-four years,³ and all that time was kept at the expense of the Convent. That was bad enough, but the worst of it was that a dangerous precedent was established. In 1330 Edward III. had a servant for whom he wished to provide. This was John of Trentham, also called "le Harpour;"⁴ he was no doubt one of the king's musicians. He had probably served the king's father, and had for some reason become unfit for further work. If any voices were raised in the Chapter-house against compliance with the royal demand, the objectors would be silenced by the remark that it was not a time to run any risk of exciting the king's displeasure. "Has not the king just had a suit against us about this aid that his lawyers advised him to claim from our house? It is true that eight weeks or so ago the jury at Sodbury⁵ pronounced in our favour—had we not charters to show?—but these suits are expensive and troublesome, and, remember, the case is hardly over yet, and we had better show ourselves willing to oblige the king, at least until we hear that the Sheriff of Gloucestershire has received a writ informing him that the royal claim has been dropped, and all danger of distraint upon our manors at Olveston and Cold Ashton has passed by."⁶ Whatever was said in the Chapter-house, the result of the monks' deliberation was that the corrody was granted, and another burden was laid upon the house. John, whom we may call "the Harper," also lived—as indeed pensioners will—a long time, for we do not hear of his death until twenty-three years after he had received his grant. In 1337 John of Windsor, the old servant of Edward I. died, and by his death the monks must have felt that they were relieved of an expense that they had borne too long. They must have been disagreeably surprised when a certain William Joye came to the Priory—little joy did his appearance cause there—bringing a letter from the king recommending him as a successor to John of Windsor.⁷ This was more than the Convent could stand, and no doubt after anxious deliberation in the Chapter-house—an answer was returned by the brethren, pointing out to the king that they had granted John of Windsor a corrody, not because they were bound to do so, but to enable him to use the Bath waters, which were the only cure for his disease, and that the present case was altogether different, and as for any fundatorial right that the king might assert, they plainly said that there was none; for their house was held in pure and perpetual alms, and owed no such service. The king bade his Chancellor, John Stratford, Archbishop of Canterbury, ascertain the truth by legal process, by the sworn testimony of a Somerset jury.¹ A commission was issued to three judges, two of them members of Somerset families, to hear the case. The “inquisition” was held at Bath by a jury of twelve men—two of them were knights—and of the twelve four at least were likely to take as favourable a view as possible of the plea of the Convent. The monks produced a charter granted to their house by Henry I. in 1111—we have it in this volume²—and the jury declared that the Convent held their Priory in pure and perpetual alms, that King Henry did by the charter before them remit all claim upon it, that John of Windsor had his maintenance as of favour and not as of right, and that no king had ever obtained sustenance from the Priory for anyone as of right. So the monks were completely successful and the king issued a writ, commanding William Joye to give them no further trouble.³ Nevertheless sixteen years later he made another claim of the same kind on the Priory. John the Harper had at last died. It is likely enough that some of the monks were sorry to lose him; for he probably now and then gave them some music of a livelier kind than they heard in their church, and told them tales of the last king, the ill-fated Edward of Carnarvon, and his wicked queen, of the splendour of the court, and sad stories of the deaths of kings. But we may be sure that the wiser among them were glad to be relieved of the cost of keeping the old man; for the Convent had fallen upon evil days and was terribly in debt. The king however bethought him that, though he had failed to get John of Windsor’s corrody for William Joye, another royal corrody had fallen in by the death of John the Harper, that on this occasion the monks could not plead that the grant had been made on account of the sickness of the recipient, that a charge of this kind once created became part of the rights of the Crown, and was not to be allowed to lapse, and that at all events the thing was worth trying. Accordingly he wrote a letter to the Prior, requesting that one of his servants, Andrew de Brooks, might have John the Harper’s corrody.⁴ In some respects the time for the demand was well chosen. The then Prior had some years before brought disgrace upon himself and his house by his misconduct, and had that very year been cited to appear before the King’s Justices to answer to a serious charge. Moreover, a law-suit with the Crown, which afterwards caused the Convent much trouble, was just beginning, and the monastery was overwhelmed with debts. The monks seem to have thought that it was not a time for them to defend the rights of their house, and to have been afraid even to assert them. In answer to the royal demand they simply replied, "We cannot, the substance of our house is exhausted."¹ Their plea seems to have been accepted, but not the less was it a betrayal of the interests of their house, and might in future years have been used against it. No evidence has been found that it was so used, and it is possible that the Crown made no further claims of the kind upon the Priory.

A study of the history, or even of the dry documents, such as we have here, of a religious house suggests the question, "What place did the society hold in the world of its time, what kind of influence, if any, did it exercise on the lives of neighbours?" That the Priory was during a long period highly esteemed by the great people of the neighbourhood we have already seen; they were constantly mixed up with its affairs; many of them were benefactors or descendants of benefactors, and some at least looked upon its church as the place where they hoped that their bodies would be laid. The influence of such a house as this was by no means confined to a few great families, for it must be remembered that Benedictines are not kept immured within the walls of a monastery. The monks of Bath could go whither they would, so long as they avoided places and persons likely to bring scandal upon them, and were present to perform their duties in the choir and elsewhere. For a sufficient cause they might obtain leave of absence to visit their friends or transact any business that they might have to do; a provision is made for such occasions in the Constitutions of Archbishop Lanfranc, where, among other regulations of the same kind, it is ordained that if a brother on setting out on a journey intended to be absent for more than one night he was to receive the benediction.² Sometimes a monk would receive permission to be absent from his house for a long time, it may be to visit the Roman Court,³ or to study at one of the Universities. Wherever he went he was bound to observe the rules of his Order, and, though some small change in dress was prescribed for a journey, to wear the habit. The service of the Cross, however, outweighed all obligations of dress, and two Bath monks who set out on a crusade in 1324 were allowed to assume a secular garb.⁴ There was always of course a good deal of passing to and fro between the Priory of Bath and its dependencies at Dunster and in Ireland, and we have one notice of the absence of the Prior in Ireland, and of his duties being performed by the Sub-prior.⁵ Although the estates of the Priory do not seem large if we compare them with those held by some of the more famous monasteries of England, they were fairly extensive, and the officers of the house, and specially the Prior, must often have had to ride abroad to visit them, and in one way or another to look after the interests of the Convent. Indeed we may be sure that, whether intent on business or simply on recreation, the monks must often have been seen on their manorial lands, and have been well known to every man, woman, and child upon them. There is nothing in these records to show that they were other than good landlords, the presumption is the other way; they were certainly not backward in manumitting their villeins. In the streets of Bath their black gowns and hoods were familiar objects. The connexion between the Priory and the city was close; for during a part of its existence the Convent were lords of Bath, and long derived a good income from it. Of the terms on which the two bodies lived we have little means of knowing anything, though there are some indications that they were generally friendly. In the fifteenth century there was a dispute between the Convent and the city about the ringing of bells, and that seems the only notice of any discord between them.¹ Some part of the prosperity of the city may well have been owed to the monastery, for Henry I. gave Bishop John, as its head, the right of holding fairs on the festivals of St. Peter, the patron of the house, and two other fairs were granted by Edward I.² At such fairs as these the larger part of the internal trade of the country was carried on, and merchants from foreign lands resorted to them. The right of holding a fair and taking tolls at it was very profitable. These fair-times must have brought plenty of bustle to the Priory; the guest-house would be full to overflowing, and many an old acquaintance, not seen it may be for a year past, would be welcomed by the brethren as he rode up to the house with three or four stout pack horses behind him, laden with merchandise that he was bringing for sale. The Cellarer would be inquiring the price of herrings and other salted fish, and bargaining for pepper and spices, and the Chamberlain would be discussing prices with the tanners and shoemakers of Bristol. More important business, however, than the purchase of goods for its own consumption would be transacted by the Convent, probably by the Prior himself, and certainly under his control. It is said that the Convent dealt in wool and encouraged the manufacture of cloth, to which the city and other places in the neighbourhood owed much of their prosperity.³ This is certainly true; for though in the early years of the fourteenth century no fewer than a hundred and eighty religious houses in England supplied the Florentine and Flemish markets with wool,⁴ Bath Priory does not appear among them; such wool therefore as it bought must have been for home manufacture. The policy of Edward III. gave so great an impetus to this manufacture that he may fairly be said to have planted a new industry in the country, though there were weavers, it must be remembered, in many towns in England in the twelfth century. Now about the time that many Flemish weavers were induced by the king to settle in England and establish their industry here, we find Prior Thomas buying first three hundred, and then six hundred, sacks of wool from a dealer of Marlborough,⁵ while a bond for £40 that the Convent gave to the Abbot of Malmesbury⁶ may have represented a like transaction; indeed a suggestion may be hazarded that some part of the enormous liabilities incurred by the house in the fourteenth century may have been on account of bills given in the course of trade.⁷ The frequent grants of cloth, robes, and fur made by the Convent at that period to its clerks and others may perhaps be taken as in some degree illustrative of its dealings in wool.¹ In another way, too, the monastery would be brought into connexion with the world outside its walls, by bearing its part in the work of education. Like other houses it had boys among its inmates, who assisted in the divine services.² Some of these were no doubt offered by their parents to the monastery, and others were perhaps orphans who were taken in out of charity, and in both cases they would in time become brethren of the house.³ They were not as a rule admitted until ten or twelve, and did not become professed monks until eighteen years of age. It was not however necessary that every boy taken into a monastery should become a monk; had it been so the supply of boys might sometimes have run short; others were admitted if there was need, and people could also send their sons to the monks for education, which was sometimes given freely, and sometimes paid for, as in many Convents now. For these boys a schoolmaster was appointed. Of course the records before us throw no light on the educational work done by the Bath monks, but there is reason, as we shall see later, to believe that at one period of its existence the Convent did much for education, and it is probable that whatever learning—beyond such as was merely elementary—there was in Bath during the greater part of the Middle Ages was due to the monks. Nor was learning utterly neglected by them even at a time when the condition of the house appears to have been unsatisfactory, for we learn incidentally that a Bath monk was studying at Oxford in 1447.⁴

Enough probably has been said to show that the monks came into frequent contact with people of all sorts and conditions, and that the monastery must therefore have exercised an influence, either good or bad, on the society round it. Was that influence good or bad? The question cannot be answered categorically. In the first place it was an influence that excited to devotion. The lists of the relics owned by the Convent in the eleventh century, which are given at the end of this Introduction, show that efforts were made to attract people, to quicken their faith, and, we may add, to stir them up to the pious work of contributing to the funds for the support and enrichment of the conventual church. So, too, there was an attempt at the time of the completion of the church to establish a custom of pilgrimage to Bath on the day of the Exaltation of the Holy Cross, to worship before a cross that was placed there.⁵ While Bath never became famous as a place of pilgrimage, perhaps because it was too near to Glastonbury, one object of veneration in its church, most likely a group of figures above the altar of the Blessed Trinity, had a local celebrity; for in 1459 Agnes, the wife of a baker of Philips Norton, who, in common with her husband, was infected with Lollardy, confessed that she had said that it was “but waste to offer to the Trinity of Bath.”⁶ It is, of course, easy to say that an influence to devotion of this kind was evil, but this devotion was part of the religion of the time, and it was surely better that men should practice it than have no religion of any kind. In other respects the character of the monastery's influence must have been determined by its condition. The monastic state being regarded for centuries as the highest kind of Christian life, it follows that so long as those who adopted it were true to their profession, they set an ennobling example. Their self-denial, chastity, and constant prayers were a standing protest against the violence, lust, and ungodliness of the society round them. But the rule corruptio optimi pessima holds good in this case. And if we believe that such a community as that of Bath did, when at its best, exercise an influence for good, we are bound to admit that when it was openly unfaithful to its profession it must have exercised, at least to an equal extent, an evil influence. There was a period when this was so at Bath. How long it lasted I cannot say. We shall see hereafter that during part of the fourteenth, and part at least of the fifteenth centuries, the Convent must have been in an unsatisfactory condition. What intervals of amendment there were—there were surely some—we have no means of knowing. Towards the end of its existence there was a distinct effort at reformation.

Of other points more or less connected with these records, some will be noticed in chronological order, of the rest one or two only can briefly be indicated here. Much is told us about the working of the system of appropriation of livings, and we can see how revenues that should have been used for the furtherance of the spiritual interests of the people were applied to the maintenance of a body not concerned with any such matter; for though a monastery certainly exercised an influence on society, its life was self-centred, and the object of the best monks—I am of course not speaking here of those who rose to be rulers in Church or State—was to improve their own community, not the world that lay outside its walls. The advowsons belonging to Bath were treated simply as so much property; the benefices were granted at a rent, and the money drawn from them was applied to the uses of the monastery, and was charged with pensions, or the payment of debts, and was sometimes given as wages for service rendered to the house.¹ All this was not peculiar to Bath, nor are the monks there, or elsewhere, at any one period to be held up to reprobation for the use they made of their churches. The system grew to its full extent by degrees, and was a general abuse. It was much ameliorated by the ordination of vicarages, by which in each case a fixed portion of the revenues of his church was secured to the parish-priest, the remainder being allotted to the monastery. Many of these ordinances are given in the later of our two Chartularies. The divisions made by them outlived the monasteries, and since the suppression their share has been held by lay-impropriators. Notices of villenage also occur frequently and in that connexion is a curious memorandum with reference to parentage.² Some of the grants of corrodiæ afford hints as to the ordinary diet of the monks.³ The number of days on which fish was eaten must have made the supply a matter of prime importance, and one manor was held at a yearly rent of fifty salmon.¹ A constant fish diet must have palled upon the taste, and made the use of condiments both necessary and acceptable ; mustard was commonly eaten, and pepper was highly valued.²

Before entering on an attempt to collect and arrange such notices of the history of the Priory as may be gathered from these records and a few other sources, it may be well to consider what authority is to be attached to certain of the early charters of the house. The genuineness of a charter is to be determined by its style, its date, and the names of the witnesses. A large number of charters purporting to have been granted before the Norman Conquest, and among them some in the Chartulary at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, have been marked as spurious by Kemble, chiefly because each has some fault in one or more of these respects. Yet it does not follow that because a charter, as we have it, exhibits some inaccuracy, it is therefore valueless. The number of original charters of an earlier date than 1066 is comparatively small. Most of those in such collections as the Codex Diplomaticus exist in manuscript only in Chartularies ; they are copies, not the real things. In deciding on the authority of one of these copies which presents some difficulties, we have therefore to make allowance for the possibility of inaccuracy on the part of the original copyist. What for example is more likely than that a copyist having accurately set down the description of one witness as "archiepiscopus" should append the same to the name of the next witness, who was only "episcopus"?³ Or that not being familiar with the persons whose names he was writing, he should sometimes make a mistake, and give us the name of some man who could not have been present at the grant, in place perhaps of another name ? As regards questions of date, another chance must be taken into account. Pride in his knowledge might tempt a transcriber who found only a year given to supply a regnal year in the case of a royal charter, or the epact, or concurrens, which he arrived at by calculation, and so a discrepancy might occur. Even in charters which have evidently been fabricated, there is often historic truth ; for some of them appear to have been written to supply the place of originals that were lost ; and they at least show us that at the time they were written the monastery was either possessed of, or laid claim to, the land to which they refer. As people often write and speak with some severity of "monkish forgeries," it may be well, as we have several charters before us that are marked "spurious" by Kemble, to consider for a moment what measure of condemnation is due to those who fabricated them. In the first place we must remember that men's actions are to be regarded in the light of their own time, and that in the age with which we are concerned the fabrication of documents was in itself by no means held to be so disgraceful as it would be now. When a writer wished to describe what he believed to have been the state of the law in some past reign he would do so by drawing up a series of laws, and ascribing them to the King and his Council. Of this we have examples in the Laws of Edward the Confessor, and in the Laws of the Conqueror, the latter having probably a large historical foundation.

In like manner a monastic writer would deal with the records of his house. He would, too, have a special motive for filling up any gaps in them in his jealousy for its honour. Could, for example, the Convent of Malmesbury boast that certain of its lands were held in virtue of a grant in which was preserved the record of a famous incident in the reign of Athelstan,¹ then accepted as historic, and was the monastery of Bath to be outcrowded as having no such charter to show? A Bath monk would set that matter right. His house held Priston and Cold Ashton, there was no doubt about its right to them—might they not have first come to it in the same way that Norton and Somerford came to Malmesbury? And, with this idea in his mind, he would either fabricate a false, or tack an addendum on to an already existing, charter.² The case is merely hypothetical. Both the Bath and the Malmesbury charters in question, though highly suspicious, may possibly be genuine, and granted on the same occasion, or the Malmesbury charter may have been copied from the Bath charter. There were however cases in which documents were forged with fraudulent intent, and those who forged them must of course bear the guilt of their act. Of such forgeries the most magnificent is the famous romance attributed to the pseudo-Ingulf. Are any of the early charters of Bath of this character? There is one that is perhaps open to suspicion of this kind. In a grant of land at North Stoke, there is a strange confusion between Cynewulf, or Cenulf, the West Saxon King,³ and Cenulf of Mercia.⁴ The grantor is said to have been the West Saxon King, but the date does not suit; it would do for Cenulf of Mercia, but then the witnesses belong to the time of Cenulf of Wessex. Now it is evident that the charter as we have it is intended to represent a charter produced by the Convent in 1121 in defence of its right to the land in question against a claimant.⁵ If therefore any one chooses to say that the charter was a fraudulent forgery, there certainly seems no means of disproving the assertion. On the other hand, I see no reason why our document should not represent a genuine charter used at the trial, and granted by Cenulf of Wessex, not of course in 808, which was after he was dead, but in 758. A Bath copyist would certainly be familiar with Cenulf of Mercia, the father of the sainted little King Kenelm, and he might not know the date of the West Saxon King. He would then be tempted to alter the date of the charter to match the Cenulf whom he knew, and who was, according to the Bath tradition, the donor of the land at North Stoke.

Bath Abbey was founded as a house of nuns by King Osric in 676.⁶ A legend that attributes the foundation of a monastery at Bath to St. David (d. 601?) arose probably from a misreading of the name of some Welsh place.⁷ Osric is noticed by Bede as King of the Hwiccii, the people inhabiting the Gloucestershire and Worcestershire of to-day, in about 691.⁸ An Osric, described as a follower of King Ethelred of Mercia, is credited with the foundation of the Abbey of Gloucester in 681, and it is asserted that he was the same as the Osric who became King of Northumbria in 718, and died in 729,¹ and that he was the son of Alchfrith, who was made under-king of Deira by his father Oswiu or Oswy.² Alchfrith was a warm supporter of Wilfrith, and took a prominent part on the Roman side in the struggle between the adherents of the Roman and Celtic Churches in his father's reign. He rebelled against his father³ and disappears from history. Bishop Stubbs suggests that he may have found shelter at the court of his brother-in-law Ethelred of Mercia, and that his son Osric may have been given the rule of the dependent kingdom of the Hwiccii.⁴ This supposition is however open to the objection that Osric of Northumbria appears to have been the son of Aldfrith, a natural son of Oswy, who came to the throne of Northumbria in 685 on the death of his half-brother Ecgrith, and died in 705.⁵ The identity of the founder of Bath and of Gloucester with the future Northumbrian King rests on questionable authority, but receives some confirmation from the tradition that the founder of Gloucester was a nephew of King Ethelred, who married Oswy's daughter Ostryth, and from the long connexion between that house and the see of York.⁶ According to the charter before us Osric on Nov. 6 declared that he gave a hundred manentes at Bath to the abbess BERTANA for the foundation of a house of nuns. One clause in his charter as we have it here, "pontificalem dumtaxat cathedram erigentes," savours somewhat of the twelfth century, when the assertion that the king's original intention had been to found a cathedral church would be pleasing to the Bath monks. On the other hand it will be remembered that at this date Archbishop Theodore was carrying on his work of diocesan organization, and that probably in the very year of Osric's gift a bishop was appointed for the Magasætæ, the people of the present Herefordshire. At all events there seems no reason for refusing to accept the fact of the king's foundation. Our monastery then at its foundation became one of the noble band of houses of saintly Englishwomen, "Godes brydes," as our forefathers called them, who gave up the joys of this world that they might meet the Heavenly Bridegroom with gladness, and enter with Him into the bride-chamber. Among its elder sisters were Whitby, where Hilda still ruled over monks as well as nuns, though she was soon to be succeeded by Oswy's daughter Ælfæd, then a member of the house, and Coldingham, also a double monastery, under Oswy's sister Ebbe, Minster in the Isle of Thanet under Mildred, daughter of the heathen king Penda, Folkestone, which had lately lost its founder and first abbess, Eanswyth, the daughter of King Eanbald of Kent, Barking, the house of Bishop Erkenwald's sister Ethelburh, and Ely, where Ethelthryth, daughter of King Anna of East Anglia, presided over a Convent of royal and noble ladies, among whom were her sister Sexburh, Queen of Kent, and Sexburh's daughter Eormenhild, the widowed Queen of Mercia, and Eormenhild's virgin daughter Werburh

(St. Werburgh), all three in turn abbesses of the house. To this band were soon to be added Gloucester, founded like Bath by Osric, and a little later Wimborne under Cuthburh, the sister of the West Saxon King Ine. If any one would know of what spirit the inmates of these houses were at this time, let him look at the account that Bede gives of the Convent of Barking under its first two abbesses, or if he would ask what one of them became at its best, let him turn to the life of St. Lioba, the young and beautiful Leobgyth, and see what Wimborne was in her day, before she left it to help St. Boniface in the evangelization of Germany. Let him picture to himself the young prioress, skilled in Latin literature, in patristic lore, and ecclesiastical discipline, and above all in the knowledge of the Holy Scriptures, which were ever in her hands save when she was at prayer, and the crowd of nuns, no fewer it is said than five hundred, who spent their days under her care in worship, reading, and work. It is true, indeed, that it was not so always, and in every house of nuns, in these early days; for some nunneries were used by their founders and their descendants not so much as places of religion, as comfortable mansions which they might bestow on the ladies of their family, by appointing them as abbesses, though they had never made a nun's profession. Under one of these secular rulers the nuns would naturally become frivolous, careless, and worldly, and sometimes even immoral.¹ To which of these two classes the Bath nunnery belonged, or what fate befell the house, we have no means of knowing. Only two other records belong to this period of its existence, and both are of doubtful authority. One² tells us of a gift of land apparently on the river Cherwell made in 681 to an abbess called BERNGUIDIS (Anglice Beorn-gyth), and a nun Folcburga or Folcburh, who was probably the decana, or as she would be called later, the Prioress of the Convent. The mention of the two names, which we should not be likely to find in a mere late forgery, seems to indicate a foundation of fact in this grant. The other record³ in which the name of Bernguidis also appears may be dismissed at once as spurious; for it purports to be of the fourteenth year of the reign of Wulfhere, King of Mercia (672), who died the year before the date of Osric's grant.

Bath was a house of monks at the date of our next notice of it.⁴ This is in or about 758—the date and authority of this charter need not be discussed further—when Cenulf or Cynewulf, King of the West Saxons, granted to the brethren of the monastery, which we now find dedicated to St. Peter, five mansiones of land at South Stoke. His grant was confirmed by Offa of Mercia. Though there are other instances of the two kings joining in a grant, their joint action was specially appropriate in this case, for the monastery was then, and probably ever since the decay of the Convent of nuns had been, dependent on the Mercian see of Worcester—the see that is of the Bishop of the Hwicci—being reckoned part of the bishop's possessions.⁵ In some respects this is a curious anticipation of a future phase in Bath history, though there were important differences between the relations of the house with the see of Worcester and the see of Bath, which will be evident when we come to the time of John, Bishop of Bath. This dependence on the see of Worcester was soon to come to an end. Heathored, Bishop of the Hwiccii, had some disputes with King Offa, and an arrangement was made between them at a synod held at Brentford in 781. Heathored surrendered to the King "that most famous monastery at Bath," to be enjoyed freely by him and his heirs for ever, and received in return a confirmation of other possessions of his see.¹ It is said that Offa rebuilt the monastery, which is not unlikely, and William of Malmesbury speaks of him as its founder.² There was also a tradition that Offa established secular clergy at Bath in the place of monks.³ For this there is no evidence, and the story is plainly unhistorical. The fact is that, in after-times it seemed to monks so monstrous a thing that their houses should ever have been in the hands of secular clergy, that they could not help believing that such a state of things must have been the result of some high-handed act. It is possible that there was no abbot at Bath in 781, either on account of a vacancy, or because the dependence of the house on the Bishop was so complete that the monks were as much his familia as the monks of Worcester. The house became the king's property, and we have seen that some fifty years before that, in Bede's time, the owners or patrons of monasteries treated them in a way that tended to obliterate their monastic character. The acquisition of the house by Offa may have quickened the decay of such Benedictinism as there still was at Bath, and so far the tradition already noticed, though groundless as an assertion of an event, may yet have had an element of truth in it. From Offa's time we have to make a long step to the reign of Athelstan (925-940), the King of the English—the taste and fancy of the monastic scribe give him more highly sounding titles—who gave the Convent lands at Priston and Cold Ashton.⁴ In a kind of appendix to the charter these lands are said to have belonged to the Etheling Alfred, who had been accused of treason, and sent to Rome to clear himself of the charge by oath before the Pope. He swore falsely, and fell dead before the altar of St. Peter. William of Malmesbury, who tells the story with reference to some lands granted to Malmesbury, also gives another and wholly different legend about Alfred's death. A rejection of this appendix need not prevent us from regarding the grant as genuine; indeed it receives some confirmation from a later charter. King Edmund (940-946) was believed to have enriched the Convent by granting to it Tidenham, Bathford, Corston, Bathampton, and five hides of land at Weston.⁵ Some part of his alleged gifts should apparently be credited to others. Only two charters of this king are given in our earlier collection, and in neither of them is the Convent mentioned; one is a grant of the five mansæ at Weston,⁶ and the other of ten at Corston,⁷ in both cases to laymen. About this time the fortune of the house seems to have varied, for lands were lost and regained. The reign of

Edwy was on the whole a period of temporal prosperity, for though the young king was led by female influence to engage in a personal conflict with Dunstan, then abbot of Glastonbury, he was not an enemy of religious foundations.¹ His grant of the land at Corston to one of the ladies of his court² may, when looked at in conjunction with the grant of Edmund, suggest a doubt whether later tradition was right in asserting that the property had previously belonged to the monastery, and the same may be said of the Bathampton land granted by him to one of his followers, who in the charter of donation, dated 956, settled it after his death on the Church of Bath.³ In another grant of the same year we find the name of the head of the Convent.⁴ This document is a grant by the King to St. Peter's monastery at Bath of a large estate, thirty mansæ in extent, at Tidenham, in the present Gloucestershire, and in spite of the tradition that the land had first been given to the monks by Edmund, there is nothing in this grant to lead us to suppose that they had held it before. At this time the monastery was ruled by WULFGAR, who is described as the king's sacerdos, or as the word would then be translated, mass-priest. There is no reason why one of the king's chaplains should not have been a monk or an abbot, for King Alfred speaks of the abbot Grimbald as his mass-priest, though if Wulfgar was an abbot it is strange that he should not be so called here. Edwy no doubt gave him the abbey of Bath, with no more reference to the will of the Convent than was made by Edmund, when he appointed Dunstan to the abbacy of Glastonbury.⁵ Bath Abbey had since the time of Offa been a royal possession, and on a vacancy the king would, at least in the tenth century, appoint the new abbot. As, too, when a vacancy occurred the lands of the house fell into the king's hands, and he would sometimes treat them as though they had reverted to him as owner, would grant them away, and perhaps in after years he or his successor would re-grant them to the Convent, it is impossible to draw up with anything like certainty a history of the advance of a monastery in worldly possessions at this period. Bath was not exempt from the common lot of English monasteries in the first half of the tenth century. Everywhere the congregations while holding monastic property, and often, if not always, bearing as at Bath the monastic name, had ceased to practice the common life. Many of their monasteries were in a ruinous state, and those who should have inhabited them lived in their own houses as married men. Gradually, we may safely believe, and not through a single act of any king, the monastery at Bath had fallen into the hands of a body of men little, if in anything, different from secular priests and clerks. Monachism had well-nigh died out in England, and the Benedictine discipline was altogether forgotten until Oswald brought the knowledge of it over from Fleury, and Dunstan, who had witnessed its working at Ghent, joined with King Edgar in enforcing its observance in English monasteries.⁶ At Bath the time of reformation was not far distant. The only other points in our history belonging to Edwy's reign to be noted here are his alleged restoration of the Convent's land at Alveston and Cold Ashton, previously granted by Athelstan and taken from it unjustly,¹ and his restoration of five mansæ at Weston, by a charter bearing, it will be observed, an impossible date.²

In the reign of Edgar (944-975) the possessions of the house were increased by the restoration of Corston, and perhaps of South Stoke, though the charter in its present form is doubtful, and by grants of lands at Stanton Prior, Cumpton, and Clifton. The Convent, perhaps in 965, and certainly in 970, was under an abbot named Æscwic.³ It was perhaps in his day that the reformation of the Convent began; for we can scarcely believe that Edgar, who was a zealous monastic reformer, would otherwise have chosen the church to be the place of his coronation. The king had fallen under ecclesiastical censure, and at the end of the period of his penance celebrated the establishment of his supremacy over the Danish and Celtic districts by an imposing ceremony of coronation which took place at Bath on Whitsun Day, May 11, 973. Edgar, who was then in his thirtieth year and in the fulness of his strength and beauty, was attended by a vast crowd of great men from every part of England. Two bishops led him to the church, walking one on either hand, and chanting the antiphon Firmetur manus tua (Ps. lxxxviii. 14). He wore his crown, but laid it aside as he knelt before the high altar. As he did so, Archbishop Dunstan began the Te Deum, which was sung by the multitude of monks and clergy. When the hymn was ended two bishops raised the king from the ground, and at the dictation of Dunstan he took a threefold oath, to guard the Church of God, to forbid violence and wrong, and to keep justice, judgment, and mercy. Dunstan then made a prayer, and this was followed by a prayer pronounced by Oswald, the Archbishop of York. After this the king was anointed, the full-voiced choir singing the antiphon which tells how Zadok the priest and Nathan the prophet anointed Solomon King in Zion (1 Kings i. 45). Then Dunstan placed a ring on the king's hand, girt him with a sword, put the crown upon his head, and gave him his blessing. Edgar also received the sceptre and rod, and lastly the Mass was sung. The glories of the day were brought to an end by a splendid banquet.⁴ Thus it was that the Abbey Church of Bath was made the scene of "a solemn typical enunciation of the consummation of English unity, an inauguration of the king of all the nations of England, celebrated by the two archbishops, possibly with special instruction or recognition from Rome, possibly in imitation of the imperial consecration of Edgar's kinsmen, the first and second Otto, possibly as a declaration of the imperial character of the English crown itself."⁵ The record of that great day sets us thinking what the church in which the coronation was held must have been like. We may be sure that it was built of stone. While many churches in those days were of wood, we know that several were of stone, and at Bath, if anywhere, this would be so; for there not only was stone plentiful and easy to work, but the ruins of the important Roman city of Aqua Solis must have afforded the monastic builders an abundant store of stones ready squared and worked. It was, we can scarcely doubt, owing to their use of these and other materials obtained from Roman buildings that the church of Bath was held in the tenth century to be of "wondrous workmanship." Whilst compared with the vast buildings of Norman times it would seem small, the fact of its being chosen for the scene of Edgar's coronation proves that at that date it ranked among the larger churches of England. It was probably of basilican shape, with massive piers, low round arches, and small and narrow windows.

During Æscwig's abbacy may perhaps be placed the coming to Bath of the man who was destined to complete the reformation of the Convent. This was Ælfheah, or St. Elphege, afterwards Archbishop of Canterbury. Elphege entered religion at Deerhurst, and left that monastery because he was dissatisfied with the laxity of discipline there. Intent on an ascetic life, he built himself a hut at Bath and lived there as a hermit. The fame of his sanctity brought him a large number of disciples, many of them of noble birth, who adopted the monastic life, and the abbacy falling vacant, perhaps by Æscwig's death, ELPHEGE became abbot. Both by example and precept he strove to make the members of the Convent monks not in name only, but also in their lives. He built a large monastery, the king supplying him with the means of doing so; for Edgar loved Bath both for its splendour and because he had lately been crowned there.¹ Before this we may suppose the monks had dwelt in separate houses; Elphege brought them together and made them live the "common life" of the dormitory and refectory. He did not himself dwell in the monastery; his hermitage was close at hand and he could not give up his ascetic life. In order to insure the observance of monastic abstinence from excess, he appointed a Provost for the Convent whose duty it was to serve out the supplies. But the old leaven was active, and the Englishman's love of eating and drinking overcame the religious zeal of the monks. Many of them adopted secular ways, despised the "common life," secretly brought food and drink into the monastery, and spent their nights in revelry. The ring-leader in these excesses died suddenly, and Elphege saw his body tortured by demons. He called the congregation together, told them what he had seen, and convinced them of their sin. A thorough reformation was the result.² In 984 Elphege was appointed Bishop of Winchester, he was afterwards translated to Canterbury, whence he passed to join the noble army of martyrs in the heavenly kingdom. He was perhaps succeeded as Abbot of Bath by ÆLFHERE, in whose time the Convent was enriched by the will of a rich neighbour named Wulfwaru.³ The next Abbot of Bath of whom we have a notice is WULFWOLD, who in 1061 received Ashwick from Edward the Confessor as private property with power of bequest.⁴ Wulfwold gave this estate together with his paternal inheritance at Evesty to the Convent.¹ About this date, and while Wulfwold was holding office, ÆLFWIG also occurs as Abbot of Bath,² and in 1066 we find that SEWOLD had succeeded him as junior abbot, and was sharing the abbacy with Wulfwold at the time of the Confessor's death.³ This arrangement of a divided abbacy, though unusual, is not without parallel; for when Ælfwine, Abbot of Ramsey, fell into bad health the Confessor appointed Æthelsige, then Abbot of St. Augustine's, to be co-abbot with him,⁴ and there also seem to have been two joint abbots at Evesham in 1077.⁵ No hint is given as to the reason of this remarkable arrangement at Bath, and as Wulfwold lived for many years after it was first set up, it may fairly be doubted whether he was incapacitated for the performance of his duties as abbot by bad health. Did he hold any office at Court which hindered him from residing constantly in the monastery? Whatever its cause may have been, the double abbacy was continued until his death far on in the Conqueror's reign; for, as we shall see, a successor was appointed to Sewold in Wulfwold's life-time. Both the co-abbots appear to have been equal in dignity, and the junior of the two would naturally become sole abbot on the death of the senior. So far as we know the Conquest did not bring about any immediate changes at Bath. The Conqueror granted the Convent land at Charlcombe, and in this grant the name of Wulfwold appears alone.⁶ It has been asserted that there was an Abbot of Bath named Stigand, who was taken by the Conqueror into Normandy in 1067, and died there.⁷ If such an abbot ever existed he would have been the successor of Sewold as joint-abbot with Wulfwold; but no trustworthy authority for the assertion seems forthcoming, and it was perhaps originally founded on a misconception of the meaning of a lease granted by the Convent to Stigand, Archbishop of Canterbury. The archbishop accompanied the Conqueror to Normandy, but lived for many years afterwards. Later in the Conqueror's reign we find that ÆLFSIGE was Abbot of Bath conjointly with Wulfwold. His name occurs alone in the bond of union for prayer already noticed;⁸ it was a matter that concerned the internal life of the house, and if, as has been suggested, the double abbacy was instituted on account of Wulfwold's non-residence, it would be natural enough that the junior abbot Ælfsige should in such a case appear as acting without him. It is perhaps because our copy of the bond is that which belonged to Bath that the obligation of the brotherhood there is specially noted in addition to that of the Abbot. The names of not fewer than seventeen of the Bath monks, probably priests, are attached to it, and it will be observed that they are all English names. In a later document which touches on the rights of the abbey, both the abbots (Wulfwold and Ælfsige) are spoken of as equal in authority.⁹ This document, which should be dated not earlier than 1084, is of peculiar interest, for it contains an agreement by which William Hosett, or Hosat, accepts a fee-farm grant of the land at Charlcombe with ten oxen, sixty sheep, and an acre's seed, at a yearly rent to the abbey of £2, pledging himself to answer to the king's ban, and to his tax, and to be an obedient tenant to both the abbots and the brethren in all things. On the death of Wulfwold, which occurred soon after this agreement, Ælfsige became sole Abbot, and ruled the house until his death in 1087.¹

Ælfsige's death is an epoch in the history of the monastery, for he was the last of the independent Abbots of Bath. In obedience to a conciliar decree made in the Conqueror's reign, and in accordance with papal ordinances and continental custom, several bishops had already removed their sees from villages to cities.² The Bishop of Sherborne and Ramsbury moved his seat to Sarum, the Bishop of Selsey his to Chichester; the see of Dorchester was taken to Lincoln, and the see of Elmham to Thetford, and the Bishop of Lichfield moved first to Chester, and thence, just before the death of our Ælfsige, to Coventry, where he obtained possession of the monastery and stepped into the abbot's place, and so the house thenceforward became a priory. A like fate befell the Abbey of Bath. In 1088 John of Tours, called de Villula, an eminent physician, who had gained much wealth by the practice of his art, was consecrated Bishop of Wells.³ He was a man of affairs, wise and witty, and greatly loved the society of learned men. It seemed intolerable to him to spend his life in a remote village like Wells, amid the marshes of Somerset, and in the society of ignorant canons, when there was in his new diocese so famous and fashionable a city as Bath. Situated as it was at the junction of two Roman roads, the Via Julia which led the traveller from Bath on to the Wiltshire Downs, and so enabled him to strike quickly into the line of road to London, and the Foss-way which connected Bath with Central and Eastern England, and seated on a navigable river, Bath was easily accessible—thoroughly in the world. It was in a rich and lovely valley, its climate was soft and warm, and from the Roman times onward it was famous for its health-giving waters, the hot springs from which came the various forms of its name. There the Bishop would be sure of society such as he loved, and there he might hope to enjoy it in a seemly and comfortable fashion; for the ancient walls of the city enclosed a fairly endowed monastery where he could make his abode, and where he might build a church worthy to be the cathedral church of his diocese. No sooner therefore had he been made bishop, than by the help of Archbishop Lanfranc, and of some white ointment, with which he is said to have greased the king's hands, that is of a good sum of silver money, he obtained from Rufus a grant of the monastery with all that belonged to it as an additional endowment for his bishopric and that he might set his see there.⁴ This grant was confirmed in January 1091. Accordingly he removed the see of the Somerset bishopric from Wells to Bath,¹ and the abbacy being vacant by the death of Ælfsige, stepped into the place of Abbot. The monastery thus became attached to his see, as in earlier days it had been an appendage to the see of Worcester, with this difference, that unlike the Bishop of Worcester, the Bishop of Bath, for that was John's new title, made it his abode and the place of his see. Wells was deserted, and its church sank to the level of a simple collegiate church belonging to the bishop. The monks of Bath became the Bishop's Chapter, and their church the mother-church of the diocese.² There never was another independent Abbot of Bath; the abbacy was taken by the Bishop, who became the persona of the house, as the Archbishop of Canterbury was at Christ Church, and other bishops elsewhere in their monastic cathedrals. Thenceforth the resident head of the Convent of Bath was a Prior, who was subordinate to the Bishop, not merely as his diocesan but as his lord; and took an oath of obedience to him as his abbot (abbati meo).³ Monastic chapters were almost peculiar to England; the arrangement was not a good one for many reasons, and specially because a chapter of monks was more easily bullied than a secular chapter by a Pope or a King that wished to dictate an election to a bishopric. On the other hand there was in our Benedictine monasteries a sturdy spirit of independence that showed itself, as on one notable occasion at Bath, in a manful resistance to royal interference.

When the Bishop of Bath went to take possession of the monastery he found the city and the church more or less in ruins; for Robert of Mowbray, one of the leaders of the rebellion against Rufus, had harried the king's city and burnt it.⁴ The monks must have welcomed the Bishop with heavy hearts, for their foreign master had come to destroy the independence of their house. On his side he thought them stupid and mere barbarians; he took all their lands into his own hands, and caused his lay stewards to dole them out their living. He had much before him to do, for he was a man of magnificent ideas. He bought the city itself of the king, with its mint and all that pertained to it, for five hundred pounds of silver, and at once began to build, so he wanted all that he could get from the revenues of the monastery. Gradually he got rid of the English monks, and filled his house with a new set, most of them no doubt foreigners like himself.⁵ When the Convent was thus changed to his liking he was liberal enough to it, and indeed acknowledged that he had acted unjustly. He appointed as Prior a monk named JOHN, evidently a foreigner⁶; for as he was lord of the house he set over it whom he would; indeed the right of election was not granted the Convent until 1261.⁷ Such other conventual offices as had separate endowments, like the offices of sacristan and cellarer, were also no doubt conferred by the Bishop, and some of them, certainly the offices of sacristan and precentor, remained in his gift in later times, and were occasionally granted "during pleasure."¹ Still the new brethren had no reason to be discontented; for in 1106 Bishop John gave back the lands of the monastery, together with some valuable estates—the five hides at Weston originally granted by King Edmund, and since lost, Claverton, Dogmersfield, Bath Easton, Warley, and "Hernemuda on the sea," which I take to be Arnwood on the Hampshire coast—bought some with the conventual revenues and others with his own money.² In connexion with this act of restitution it is interesting to note that King Henry spent his Easter that year at Bath,³ being no doubt lodged in the Bishop's new house; one would like to think that the Lion of Justice told the Bishop that he was wronging the Convent, but the grant itself could not have been made until later in the year, for it is attested by Archbishop Anselm, who did not return to England until the autumn. He, we may be sure, would urge restitution. Bishop John, moreover, greatly enriched the house with ecclesiastical ornaments, vessels of gold and silver, and with gifts of books. The revenues arising from the city he set apart "for the new work that he had begun"⁴; for he built a new church from the foundations, far larger and grander than the churches of Offa and Edgar; for the present church stands only on the ground covered by its nave. He is said not to have lived to finish it,⁵ and this seems implied by the entry that tells us that he built "the lower vaults" (inferiores testudines), as though that marked the extent of his work. These "vaults" were probably the vaulting of the aisles and other smaller areas; for the nave would at that date be covered with a wooden ceiling. Some fragments of John's church are still to be seen in the present building. He also built himself an official residence, or palace, part of which was in after times called "the Bishop's Bower";⁶ this residence stood on the south-west side of the monastery, and Leland saw "one great square tower of it with other ruins" when he visited Bath.⁷ Two great barons of Somerset assisted the Bishop in building his cathedral church and monastery, William de Mohun and Walter de Douai. William de Mohun gave the Convent and "its bishop" the church of Dunster and all that pertained to it, with other gifts, that "they might build and raise it."⁸ At a somewhat later time probably they made a cell at Dunster, and Priors were appointed by the Convent to rule it, and look after the property. These Priors were subordinate to the Prior and Convent, and they and the other monks at Dunster were of course members of the Bath Convent, and had a right when present to vote in the Chapter. There were probably seldom more than three or four monks there besides the Prior; in 1447 there were a Prior and three monks living there, and a senior monk of Bath staying on a visit.⁹ Walter de Douai, the Baron of Cary, also granted the Bishop and his monks the church of Bampton in Devon, and his brother and his steward likewise added to the possessions of the house.¹⁰ An attempt to deprive the Convent of its land at North Stoke was defeated by process of law in 1121, and the record of the trial is a delightful illustration of the civil procedure of the time.¹ The Bishop, who was much trusted and employed by Rufus, received from him a grant for an extensive warren near Bath.² From King Henry, to whom it is said that he paid the five hundred pounds of silver for the city, he obtained confirmations of the grants of the city with its farm and appurtenances, among which is specially named the hidage of the Barton, with privileges of exemption for the Convent from local jurisdiction, and with an important declaration that his grant was in free alms, of the licence for the removal of the see and of various possessions acquired by him for his church.³ A grant of confirmation obtained from Robert of Normandy, probably when he was in England in 1103 seems to point to a superabundant caution on the Bishop's part, but in those days confirmations of charters were freely multiplied.⁴

I regret to see when too late that I have in my notes once or twice inadvertently spoken of a prior as "elected" before 1261.

Nor was it in material prosperity alone that John advanced his monastery. He gathered round him a society of men of letters, and chose as his monks such candidates as were well versed in literature, and diligent in study and their other duties. Under him the monastery became a home and source of learning.⁵ A passing notice has already been given of "the scholars of Bath" in his time; we have seen that they were a recognized body attached, and perhaps to some extent belonging, to the Convent, and that they could write Latin verses, though it must be confessed that the extant specimen of their skill in this line is not more elegant than it was complimentary to the bereaved ladies to whom it was addressed. Among the scholars connected with the Convent under Bishop John's rule it is surely not presuming too much to reckon the famous philosopher, the English Adelard, or Æthelhard, of Bath, who returned from a sojourn among the Saracens of Sicily and Apulia to propound to Christendom the deep things of the science and philosophy of the Greeks and Arabs. William of Malmesbury speaks somewhat harshly of Bishop John, for he could not forgive his treatment of the English monks, and he must as a Benedictine have heartily disliked the Bishop's absorption of the Abbacy of a house of his Order. Yet there is some small ground for the historian's assertion, which by the way is generally condemned as erroneous, that the Bishop never made full restitution to the Convent; for we find John's successors restoring to it one or two manors which seem not to have passed to it by the grant of 1106. One loss indeed the house sustained in John's time through no fault of his; their estate at Tidenham was overrun by the Welsh. Nor was it restored to the Convent after it was reconquered, for it became part of the possessions of the Earls of Pembroke. It seems too that in one way or another Randolf Flambard got possession of Dogmersfield. It is impossible to picture to ourselves the work of Bishop John at Bath without seeing that in spite of the loss of the independence of the Convent, his pontificate was a great time in its history. This magnificent prelate died on Dec. 29,

1122, and was buried before the altar of the Blessed Virgin in his cathedral church of Bath.¹

On Bishop John's death the monastery in common with the other temporalities of the see fell into the king's hand, and it is to this period of the vacancy of the bishopric that we may refer three royal charters granting to the monks protection from exactions such as tolls and the like, and exemptions from jurisdiction.² In 1123 the king appointed Godfrey, the chaplain of his Queen Adalais, to the Bishopric of Bath. For the first time the Bath chapter exercised its right of episcopal election; for though the bishopric was granted by the king, not the less was the bishop canonically elected, and it was not until after the election that the king made the formal grant investing him with the temporalities.³ Pious and kindly,⁴ Bishop Godfrey was a good lord to the monastery; he obtained the restitution of Dogmersfield, which had passed into the king's hands, apparently on the disgrace of Randolf Flambard,⁵ and himself restored a manor which seems to have been kept back at the general restitution of 1106.⁶ Moreover like his predecessor he gave the house vestments and books.⁷ He died on Aug. 16, 1135, and was buried on the north side of the high altar of his cathedral church of Bath. During the vacancy the monks received a charter from King Stephen on the day of his coronation, Dec. 26, 1135.⁸ Stephen having no doubt signified his will, the monks proceeded to elect Robert, a monk of Lewes, as their bishop, and after canonical election the king granted him the bishopric in a fully attended court held at Westminster in the Easter of 1136.⁹ Soon after his consecration Robert dedicated an altar in the church of Bath to the Holy Trinity, which altar, or rather, as we may guess, some representation above it, became an object of popular veneration. On this occasion he gave a charter to the Convent restoring South Stoke to it, and also endowing it with other grants.¹⁰ On 29 July, 1137, the church of Bath was burnt apparently through an accident.¹¹ We need not suppose that this fire caused anything like a total destruction. The damage no doubt was great, extending probably as we shall see to the conventual buildings, and for a while little could have been done to repair it, for the Convent was to have its share in the troubles of the civil war. In the next year Bath was threatened by the Earl of Gloucester's garrison in Bristol, for Bishop Robert upheld the king. The Bishop armed his friends and tenants, and sallying from the city caught Geoffrey Talbot, one of the rebel leaders, as he was surveying the place in company with William Hosat, the Convent's tenant at Charlcombe, preparatory to an attack upon it.¹² Soon after this the Bishop was himself surprised and taken prisoner by the Bristol garrison, who threatened to hang him unless he gave up Talbot, which he did to save his neck. Stephen was very wroth at Talbot's release, and had a mind to take away the Bishop's pastoral staff, that is, to deprive him of his temporalities; he marched on Bath, but Robert met him at the gate of the city and made his peace. He left a strong garrison at Bath which carried on war against the Bristol men. All this must have hindered the restoration of the monastery, but as soon as he could the Bishop set about the work of repairing and completing Bishop John's church. Perhaps it was at this time that a citizen of Bath named Ralph, afterwards a monk of the house, completed the principal or central tower, and placed two bells in it.¹ The Bishop spent much money on the work and also raised new conventual buildings, a chapter-house and cloister, dormitory, refectory, and infirmary.² If Bishop John had done this before, his buildings must have been ruined by the fire. In spite of these expenses the Convent was able to purchase the manor of Cameley from Alexander de Alno, or Anno, in 1153. His grant was confirmed by Henry, Duke of Normandy, at some date between the treaty of Wallingford, Nov. 6 of that year, and Henry's coronation, Dec. 17, 1154.³ After Henry's accession he renewed his confirmation as king. Our last notice of Prior John belongs to 1122, and the next Prior we meet with is BENEDICT, who occurs about 1151.⁴ It was probably in his time that the work of restoration was brought to an end. The completion, and perhaps re-dedication, of the church seem to be marked here by the Bishop's dedication of a cross which was intended to be an object of peculiar veneration; for Robert himself, Archbishop Theobald, and the Bishops of Llandaff and Clonmacnoise granted indulgences for all who should make pilgrimage to it on the day of the Exaltation of the Holy Cross.⁵ There would be a special fitness in the sequence of events if we may believe—of course this is guessing—that the completion of the building was immediately followed by the application made by Bishop Robert to Pope Hadrian IV. for a confirmation of the estates of the monastery, and of the removal thither of the episcopal see.⁶ The confirmation gives us in a convenient form a list of the possessions of the Convent in 1156, and is interesting first, as proving that the assertion that the change of the see was "never approved or recognized by the Pope" is erroneous, and secondly, as illustrating the improbability that Robert had any idea of having "two head churches in his diocese."⁷ As along with the Pope's general confirmation the Bishop's messengers procured a confirmation of a comparatively unimportant recognition of title lately made in their house,⁸ it is fairly certain that they were Bath monks, and it is by no means improbable that Prior Benedict was one of them. He died—possibly like so many transmontane ecclesiastics either in Rome or at least in Italy—in that or the following year; for in 1157 we have a notice of his successor Prior PETER.⁹ Bishop Robert died on Aug. 31, 1166, and was buried before the steps of the high altar of his cathedral church of Bath.¹⁰ A contemporary writer observes that he left behind him a pleasant memory. Was his "the great fair marble tomb" of a Bishop of Bath, from which Leland was told "oyle did distille, and likely; for his body was embaumid plentifully"?

After Robert's death the see was vacant for nearly eight years. In that period we find the Bishop of Llandaff performing an episcopal function at Bath.

According to a Wells story, which has been accepted too readily, discord having arisen between the churches of Bath and Wells during the episcopate of Robert with reference to the removal of the see to Bath, the bishop obtained a papal decree that his see should be in both churches, and that he should use the names of both in his style, putting Bath first.¹ For this there is no sufficient evidence, and the story is indeed disproved by Robert's application to the Pope which has already been noticed. Nevertheless, it is certain that the canons of Wells must at least during the vacancy have asserted that they had a right to an equal voice with the Bath Chapter in the election of bishops; for when, in 1173, the Bath Chapter, having received the royal licence, elected Reginald FitzJocelin, the Wells Chapter likewise elected him, and sent a notification of their election to Pope Alexander III. for ratification. He ratified the Wells election, and further declared that in spite of the transference of the see, the Wells chapter was not to lose its right of election; but he recommended that for the sake of peace the two Chapters should elect jointly.² We can well imagine the disgust with which the Bath monks heard of this recommendation. Reginald was consecrated at S. Jean de Maurienne, and afterwards presented the Convent with a memorial of his consecration in the form of some vestments that belonged to one of his consecrators St. Peter, Archbishop of Tarentaise.³ During the early part of his episcopate I venture to think that HUGH was Prior of Bath; for he seems to have been contemporary with Richard of Spaxton, Dean of Wells (1160-1180?).⁴ He probably did not have a long tenure of office, and appears to have been succeeded by Prior GILBERT, who was contemporary with Dean Alexander (1180-1209).⁵ At this time the Convent was in a flourishing state, for it had a good friend in Bishop Reginald, who appropriated to it several churches, setting apart the revenues of one of them, the church of Bathford, for the maintenance of the fabric of the church of Bath. He also assigned the Pentecostal offerings of the diocese to the church of Bath as the head or mother church of Somerset, which shows that he had no idea of deposing it from its excellency.⁶ Prior Gilbert, who seems to have been a careful administrator, was during the lifetime of Bishop Reginald succeeded by WALTER, a man of great learning and holiness, who had previously been sub-prior of the monastery of Hyde.⁷ In his time, the Convent having liberally endowed the Hospital of St. John the Baptist which was founded by Bishop Reginald, the Bishop gave it the Hospital, and from thenceforth it appointed the Master. This Hospital was built near the Hot and the Cross Baths for the use of the poor who resorted to the waters.⁸ Bishop John is said to have built two baths, possibly these two, and to have dedicated one to the use of the public, the other being appropriated to the Prior. The Cross Bath evidently took its name from Bishop Robert's Cross in the monastery church. Walter brought the Convent into a perfect condition as regards monastic life. It was a time of special energy and high endeavour among the religious orders in England, for the Carthusian reform had reached this country and the more spiritually minded monks were deeply affected by it. This was so with Prior Walter; he was not content with the good work that he was doing at Bath, the needs of his own soul were unsatisfied, and he longed to make his calling and election sure by a life of greater self-denial, and seclusion from worldly business. He left his monastery, went to the Carthusian house at Witham, and there laboured with his hands cultivating pot-herbs and vegetables. A monk from his old house, Hyde Abbey, came to see him there, and finding him thus employed, was struck with the waste that his old friend proposed to make of a valuable life. He is said to have addressed the Prior in a Latin hexameter. "Father," said he, "Quod facis est kere, quod tractas Kirewiwere."¹ These uncouth words have been explained as meaning, "What you are doing is a farewell (χαίρε); what you are employed upon is handicraft (χειρε)."² The explanation does not satisfy me, but I cannot give a better. Whatever the monk's words may have meant, they found an echo in Walter's heart. He saw that it was a nobler thing for a man to live for the salvation of many souls than for the salvation of his own soul only. He went back to Bath, took up his old life again, and devoted himself to the good of the Convent.³ Reginald evidently upheld him in his work, and in addition to the grants already noticed gave the monastery ornaments and books. In 1191 the Bishop was elected to the see of Canterbury, and left that city for Bath, where he was much beloved by the monks, whom he greatly loved.⁴ He was anxious to obtain a pledge from the Chapter before he set out for Rome to fetch his pall that they would elect as his successor Savaric, Archdeacon of Northampton, who had obtained letters from King Richard, then abroad, ordering the justiciar to ratify his election to any vacant bishopric.⁵ In this matter Reginald seems to have taken no account of the canons of Wells, and, so far as we know, was satisfied with obtaining the promise of the Bath Chapter to elect Savaric. On leaving Bath he was taken ill, and when he had reached his manor of Dogmersfield knew that his end was near. During his last hours he was attended by Prior Walter, who at his request dressed him in the Benedictine habit; for as he lay dying the bishop's heart was with his well-loved Convent. "It was not the will of God," he said to the Prior, "that I should be an archbishop, and it is not my will. It was the will of God that I should be a monk, and it is my will." He died on Dec. 26. Prior Walter took his body to Bath, and buried it on the 29th, before the high altar. In accordance with their promise Walter and the monks of Bath elected Savaric as bishop, and did so without taking counsel with the canons of Wells. The canons were loud in their protests and objections, but the justiciar Walter, Archbishop of Rouen, would not listen to them ; it was enough for him that he was enabled by the Bath election to carry out his master's orders.¹

The details of Savaric's struggle with the Convent of Glastonbury do not concern us. It will be enough for our purposes to note that he gave up the city of Bath to the king in exchange for the Abbey of Glastonbury, that he added Glastonbury to his title, and was styled "Bishop of Bath and Glastonbury," that the monks of Glastonbury vehemently resisted his attack on the independence and property of their house, and that it was regarded at Bath with disapproval ; the alienation of the city was an injury to the Convent, and the bishop's violent doings brought discord into it and into the diocese generally, and were offensive to the whole Benedictine Order in England. At the same time Savaric watched over the temporal interests of the Bath Convent, procured it a charter of confirmation from the Pope, appropriated some churches to it, and presented it with two handsome copes. Moreover when the treasures of the religious houses were seized to make up King Richard's ransom, he settled the demands of the royal officers, and saved the treasures of Bath.² In 1198 Prior Walter visited Wherwell, in order, as we may guess, to see the Abbess with respect to the rights of their respective houses at Bathwick, and while there he died, and was buried at Bath on May 31.³ He was succeeded by Prior ROBERT, a humble, pious, and courteous man, and a diligent administrator. In his time, in 1204, the Convent received from King John the estate on the north-west of the city called the Barton of Bath, with rights of jurisdiction, at a fee-farm rent of £20.⁴ When, as was often the case, this estate was included in the dowers of queens or ladies of the royal house, such grants conveyed the rent paid by the Priory, and were not infringements of its rights. In the same year the Master and Brethren of the Hospital of St. John at Waterford surrendered their house to the Convent that it might be made monastic.⁵ From this time the house was under the government of the Bath Convent, which appointed and could remove the Prior or Warden. Provision was made for the support of the sick poor, and four brethren and three sisters were maintained there who were called the brethren and sisters of St. Leonard ; for this saint was specially venerated at Bath, and his altar in the church was held in high esteem. Probably with Waterford the Convent obtained a Cork priory dedicated to St. John, apparently the house of Le Legan in co. Cork. To the Waterford house belonged churches and lands at Rathmoylan, Kilkee, Kilcop, Ballycohyn, and Ballytruckle. Some remains of the Waterford Priory still exist ; it seems to have been a large building. In 1350 a priory at Youg-hall was affiliated to Waterford. Of this priory, which was occupied by Cromwell in 1649, there are also, or were lately to be seen, some extensive remains.⁶ These Irish houses and their possessions were all under the immediate control of the brother appointed by the Convent as Prior, or Warden, of the Hospital of St.

John at Waterford. They were, or soon became, of no profit, and were indeed some trouble, to the Convent, and in 1334 there was a scheme for exchanging all or some part of the Bath lands in Ireland for lands in England. About that time the revenues seem to have barely been sufficient for the maintenance of the Hospital. From their Irish lands the Convent imported a fine breed of hawks which were no doubt sold by it at a good price. Shortly before the surrender of the Priory the king's visitor Layton wrote to Thomas Cromwell, "the prior of Bath has sent unto you as a token a leisse of Irish laners, bred in a cell of his in Ireland. No hardier hawks can be, as he saith."¹ In Prior Robert's time the monastery of Bath was called the church of St. Peter and St. Paul,² and this double dedication, which may have been recognized earlier, became its usual style. That the Bishop's dealings with Glastonbury were costing our Convent some money may perhaps be inferred from a debt of 24 mcs. incurred in 1198 to the chaplain of Redcliff. They may well have suggested alike to the monks of Bath and the canons of Wells the possibility that a third body might in time lay claim to the right of episcopal election, and a common danger may have recommended common action. At all events such action was taken. Bishop Savaric died in Italy on Aug. 8, 1205, and was buried, like his predecessors since the time of Bishop John, in his cathedral church of Bath. The monks of Bath and the canons of Wells met together on Feb. 3, 1206, and joined in the election of Jocelin, called Trotman, apparently a corruption of the odd name Tresminettes, a native of a place near Wells, one of the king's justices, a clerk of the Convent, a canon of Wells, and a deacon. Each Chapter sent its own request to Pope Innocent III. that he would confirm the election, and each acknowledged in it the equal right of the other in episcopal election. The actual election was made not by the whole number of the two Chapters, but via compromissi, each body delegating its rights to four of its members, the Bath Convent to the Prior, Sub-prior, and two brethren, the Wells chapter to the Dean, Precentor, Sub-dean and another canon.³ Although the letter of the Convent to the Pope has already been printed, I give it here first, because it is extremely important in connexion with later events, and secondly, because it gives the names of all the forty-one monks then at Bath; it is probable that two or three were residing at Dunster.

The Wells letter was in the same words mutatis mutandis. It is perhaps about this time that we may date an agreement based on Pope Alexander's ordinance between the two Chapters to the effect that future elections should be made jointly, that the Prior of Bath should announce the election and challenge objection, and that the bishop should be enthroned first at Bath and afterwards at Wells.² Jocelin continued Savaric's claim on Glastonbury, and used the title of "Bath and Glastonbury," though he is also formally styled Bishop of Bath. From 1208 to March, 1213, Jocelin was in exile. During those years King John's hand was heavy on Bath as it was on the other religious houses of the kingdom; he took away their revenues and allowed the monks a scanty subsistence. Besides, John visited Bath in person three times before his surrender of the crown, on May 13-14, 1209, Oct. 17, 1212, and March 13,

1213, and on the two earlier occasions at least we may be sure that he did not go empty away. Accordingly we find that the Convent was short of ready money during part of Prior Robert's time, and that it was forced to borrow several sums, its largest debt being incurred to Ralph of Lechlade, a rich canon, and later precentor of Wells, for corn bought of the bishop's brother, Hugh of Wells, probably shortly before he too was raised to the episcopate.¹ In the same month as John's third visit to Bath his officers made Prior Robert and the Convent execute a deed granting him all that he had taken from them, for the king was making his peace with the Church, and restoring its rights and liberties, but he could not pay back what he had taken from the religions, and they were forced to let by-gones be by-gones.² Once again he visited Bath, no doubt staying either in the Bishop's house or the monastery. This was on 28 Aug. 1216, in the progress of his devastating march from Worcester into Dorsetshire.³ Then his course was nearly run. In Prior Robert's time, on Jan. 3, 1219, the long dispute between the Bishop of Bath and the Abbey of Glastonbury was brought to an end. The terms of the composition do not concern us further than to note that Jocelin gave up his claim to the Abbey, and therefore to the use of "Glastonbury" in his title, and wrote to Pope Innocent III. requesting that, lest the dignity of his see might seem diminished by this loss of half its title, he might use the style "Bishop of Bath and Wells"; for he asserted that he had papal privileges to prove that from ancient times the church of Wells had been a cathedral church. On this the Pope wrote to the legate Pandulf, then elect of Norwich, reciting the request of the "Bishop of Bath," observing that he had found no such privileges in the papal Registers, and bidding the legate inquire into the matter and, if he was satisfied, give the Bishop the required licence. What, if anything, further happened we do not know, but it is fairly assumed that from the date of his composition with Glastonbury to the end of his days Jocelin neither called himself, nor was called by others, by any other title than "Bishop of Bath."⁴ He was a good friend to the Convent, gave it some handsome vestments and ornaments, and appropriated to it the church of Castle Cary. This last grant was probably made on an interesting occasion. The earlier part of his episcopate was the period at which the daily celebration of the Mass of the Blessed Virgin was instituted in all the great English minsters, where it had not previously been observed. The year after his consecration Jocelin gave directions for this at Wells, and he appears to have dedicated a new altar to the Blessed Virgin at Bath, giving a like order, and to have commemorated the event, and we may almost say endowed the Mass, by this grant.⁵ In 1223 Prior Robert was elected Abbot of Glastonbury and succeeded at Bath by Prior THOMAS.⁶ In his time, in the spring of 1241, a summons came to the Convent from Cardinal Otho directing the monks to send a representative to the General Council that Pope Gregory IX. was proposing to hold at Rome at Easter in the hope of crushing his enemy, the Emperor Frederick II. The Convent dutifully appointed a messenger, but he never reached Rome, for on May 3rd the fleet of Genoa that was conveying the Prelates and clergy was met by the Pisan and Sicilian galleys under the command of King Enzo off the island of Monte Cristo, and were totally defeated. Most of the clergy were taken prisoners, and among them perhaps the messenger of the Bath Convent.

For more than a hundred years the Priory had in all respects been in a state of great prosperity. Under Thomas the Convent engaged in a struggle that brought it into serious difficulties.¹ Bishop Jocelin died at Wells on Nov. 19, 1242. He had, as we have seen, confirmed the agreement between the two Chapters for joint election, in which Bath was given its rightful place as superior to Wells, but though a good friend to the Convent, with which he had in earlier life a close connexion, he was far more warmly attached to the church of Wells, and ordered that his body should be buried there. The canons seized the opportunity of putting their church in a leading position, and it was not until the 22nd that they notified the bishop's death, inviting the Convent to join them in taking steps towards an election. There can be no doubt that this secrecy was to insure that the burial of Jocelin should take place at Wells. This was not a matter of sentiment; for to be the burying-place of the bishops of a diocese was the right and mark of the cathedral church.² From the time of Bishop John the Bishops of Bath had been buried in the Priory church, and the monks complained that the canons had robbed them of their bishop's body.³ They were not disposed to see their church cast down from its excellency; they objected to the way in which the secular chapter was assuming the lead, and refused to act with them, so the Wells deputation departed in anger. On the 27th the temporalities were taken into the king's hand. On Dec. 13 the canons then in residence made a protest, and on the 19th the whole Chapter sent deputies to Bath, who read letters of remonstrance to Prior Robert and the monks in the hall of the monastery. The monks would not hearken to them. Nevertheless, though they objected to allow the Wells Chapter to take the lead, they were not yet prepared to assume the responsibility of breaking the agreement for joint action, and must have agreed to treat with the canons; for on the 29th they appointed brothers Thomas of Cardiff and their precentor, Thomas of Tewkesbury, and one of their clerks, to meet the Dean and Chapter at Farrington on the following day.¹ If the conference was held, it was ineffectual. The Convent then sent two brethren independently to King Henry at Bordeaux, asking for licence to elect.² On this the Canons appointed the Dean, John Sarracenus, and another to make a similar application to the king, and to obtain his leave to appeal to Rome; and they also wrote letters to their powerful friends asking their help. On Jan. 6, 1243, the king granted the Convent his congé d'élire, reserving the right, if any, of the church of Wells, and nominating his treasurer Peter Chaceporc for election. This nomination he withdrew in a letter to the Convent dated the 9th, so that the monks were given a free choice.³ Their messengers returned on the 29th. Having the king's licence in their hands they deemed that the game was their own, and elated by success adopted a wholly unjustifiable course. They wrote to the canons announcing that they would elect on Feb. 6, requesting their attendance, not at Farrington, the usual meeting-place, but at the church at Bath, and merely to hear the election declared; for the canons, they said, had no voice in the election either by right or custom, and their invitation was simply ex habundanti.⁴ Evidently frightened by this overbearing letter, the Wells Chapter on the 5th sent the three archdeacons and other deputies to Bath with letters of protest, and for the third time—we have not the means of knowing all that passed—with an invitation to the monks to arrange for joint action. Prior Thomas refused to see these deputies. They came to the gate of the choir at the hour of Vespers, and asked leave to address the Convent, but were repulsed by the precentor, one of the clerks of the house named Henry of Bath, and Symon the physician. When service was over the monks passed from the church into the cloister without speaking to them, and they were left protesting. The next day the Wells deputies being, it is said, still at the Priory and protesting, but no representatives appearing to elect, the monks elected Roger, the precentor of Salisbury, as their bishop, and lost no time in sending to him to ask his assent. On the other hand the Wells Chapter sent proctors to Salisbury begging him not to assent to this unlawful election. Roger took counsel with his fellow canons, and accepted the election.⁵

¹ Touching the dispute about the right of episcopal election I will once for all acknowledge my extensive obligations to Canon Church and Mr. Vincent. With their work before me I was inclined to pass the whole matter by somewhat lightly, referring the reader to what they had written, but I was advised that this would not be satisfactory in a book on the history of the Bath Priory, specially as the question is illustrated by my documents. So I have done my best with their help, though as they both give full references to manuscript authorities—Mr. Vincent printing all his proofs at length, and Mr. Church giving the more important of his—I have not as a rule supported my facts otherwise than by this general reference to Mr. Vincent's Paper in the Genealogist, u.s., and his Proofs in subsequent volumes to vol. viii, and Mr. Church's Papers on Bps. Reginald, Savaric, Jocelin, and Roger, in Archæologia, l.-lii. Mr. Vincent, as the first worker in this field, is entitled to the praise due to a pioneer; he has exposed many common errors, and several in the late Dr. Freeman's book on Wells, and no one who attempts any historical work connected with the churches of Bath and Wells can do so safely except under his guidance. His work is mainly founded on papers in the Record Office and on the Lincoln's Inn MS., Canon Church's on the MSS. of the Wells Chapter. While owing much to both I have ventured to advance a view in some respects different from that held by either. ² So the Convent of Christ Church, Canterbury, in the eighth century made good its claim against St. Augustine's concerning the burying place of the archbishops, see Thorn, Decem Scriptt. col. 1772. ³ ii. 189.

Accordingly on Feb. 15 the Convent sent brothers Thomas, the precentor, and Gilbert of Dunster to the king to announce the election and pray for confirmation.¹ All seemed to have gone well. To the dismay of the Convent, however, there came on the 17th or 18th a messenger from Bordeaux with letters from the king and the queen renewing the nomination of Peter Chaceporc,² and on the 26th another messenger arrived with a like mandate. On that day, having apparently heard that the Wells Chapter was about to meet with reference to the election, they wrote to the Chapter appointing their fellow monks, Robert of Ely and Thomas of Cardiff, as their proctors, with full power to answer or appeal on their behalf.³ At the Chapter meeting on the following day letters were sent to the dean, urging him to do what he could with the king, and at the Roman Court, to William, provost of Beverley, and to the king himself, praying him not to confirm the election. The Bath proctors appear to have protested and appealed to Rome.⁴ On the 28th the Convent wrote to the Wells Chapter, declaring that the right of election had belonged to them for a hundred years and more, appealing to the judgment of the Bishop, or the Dean, of London, and ratifying the appeals made before the Chapter by the proctors of their house the day before, by those who had appealed against the robbery of the body of their late bishop, and by those who had appealed when they summoned the canons to the election.⁵ Meanwhile they answered the letters of the king and the queen. There can be little doubt that if they had intimated to the king that they were willing to have their election cancelled on some excuse or other, and to elect his nominee, they would have obtained his support, and gained by unrighteous means a victory over the secular chapter. But it was not so that they acted. Both to king and queen they returned a respectful but decided refusal.⁶ After both they and their Bishop-elect had appealed to Rome on the 27th, they again wrote letters to the king and queen, and also to the Archbishop of York, then chief justiciar and regent, pointing out that it was impossible for them to dissolve the spiritual marriage contracted between the bishop-elect and their church.⁷ Henry, having received the refusal of the Bath Convent, granted on March 12 to the deputies of Wells, the Dean and Canon Robert de Marisco, his congé d'élire for the Wells Chapter, reserving the right, if any, of the Chapter of Bath. It is obvious that the Wells deputies must have agreed to elect someone that would be agreeable to him. On April 25 the royal licence arrived at Wells, together with a promise that nothing should be done to the prejudice of the church during the appeal. Thinking that they were certain of victory, the canons wrote to the Convent informing them that they had the king's licence, and summoning them to come to Wells on June 8 for the election of a bishop, or else to meet their deputies at Farrington on April 30 to arrange for an election. This was a bit of over-crowding; for the canons knew that they could not elect while the appeals to Rome were undecided. On the appointed day their deputies rode with great pomp to Farrington—two archdeacons and others with clerks, servants, and the late bishop's huntsman. But the monks made no sign, and the Wells deputies must have felt slightly ridiculous as they rode back from their bootless expedition. Although the monks were quiet they were not less in earnest, and on June 6 appointed their precentor and Master Symon, the clerk—was he also the physician?—as proctors.¹ Two days later the Wells Chapter wrote to the king that they could not take advantage of the congé d'élire because of the appeal to Rome. All this time, indeed ever since Oct. 1241, the Holy See had been vacant. On June 24 Innocent IV. was elected Pope, and both the Chapters began to press their appeals. The canons, who spent money freely, asked that Roger's election should be quashed, that they alone might have the election of another bishop, and that for the future each Chapter might elect in turn and in its own church, or that the election might be made jointly. Nor were the monks behindhand; for on Aug. 30 they appointed a fresh proctor at Rome,² and on Sept. 14 wrote to the Pope pointing out that their election was canonically conducted, praying that it might be confirmed, and presenting as proctors their precentor Thomas and Gilbert of Dunster.³ These proctors received authority to borrow 20 mcs. for their expenses⁴ and 30 mcs. more soon went in the same way.⁵ Unwilling that the bishopric should remain longer vacant, Pope Innocent, who seems to have acted with entire impartiality, gave judgment on Feb. 3, 1244, and confirmed the election of Roger. He wrote to the king requesting him to restore the temporalities to the bishop-elect, which was done on May 10, the king stating that he was acting at the Pope's request. Meanwhile Innocent wrote to Prior Thomas and the Convent on March 23, informing them that he had confirmed the election, decreeing that in all future elections both Chapters were to be equal and have an equal voice, and that any election not so made would ipso facto be null and void, but reserving the points where the elections were to be held, and which church was to have the cathedral see, be the place of installation, and give its name to the bishop's title.⁶ The see of Canterbury being vacant, the Convent of Christ Church arranged that Roger should be consecrated at Reading, and the Prior and Convent of Bath having made declaration that this permission should in no way prejudice the rights of the church of Canterbury,⁷ he was consecrated there on Sunday, Sept. 11. He was installed in the cathedral church of Bath. Against this installation the canons of Wells protested, and appealed to Rome on the four reserved points. On Oct. 27 the Convent again appointed proctors to represent them at Rome with fresh powers for borrowing money. The Pope gave judgment, which he communicated to the canons on Jan. 3, 1245; elections were to be held alternately in the two churches, the first in Bath, the next in Wells, and so on by turns; both churches were to be cathedral; each bishop was to be installed in the church in which he had been elected, and he was to be called, and use on his seal, the names of both churches—he was to be Bishop of Bath and Wells.¹ For a while Roger, no doubt anxious to please the Bath monks, did not assume this new style, and called himself, as before, Bishop of Bath. Of this the Dean and Chapter of Wells complained to the Pope, who wrote the bishop a sharp letter on May 14 bidding him obey his order.² Under this pressure Roger had no choice, and for the first time, so far as is known, “Bath and Wells” was used, as it has thenceforward been used, as the style of the Bishop of the See. In 1246 Roger drew up an award concerning future elections based on the decisions of Pope Innocent, and to this the Prior and Convent of Bath and the Dean and Chapter of Wells both gave their assent.

In the quarrel thus ended the beginning of strife will, if the account here given be accepted, appear to have been caused by the action of the canons of Wells on the death of Jocelin; it was not unnaturally resented by the monks; for, apart from their historic rights, the very agreement lately made for joint action in elections clearly implied the superiority of their church. If, as we must suppose, Jocelin’s bequest of his body was really made, he did wrong in endeavouring to help the Wells Chapter to gain by a side wind a superiority that he did not, and dared not, give them during his lifetime. On the other hand the monks were certainly to blame for taking advantage of the king’s licence to elect to set at nought the agreement for joint action, and to treat the Wells Chapter with insolence. In their negotiations with the king they behaved with spirit and with due regard to the well-being and liberties of the Church of England, while the Wells Chapter, I cannot but suspect, showed a perfect readiness to carry out the royal wishes. They are not to be blamed for this; it was the custom of the time, and they were not hampered by any previous act of election. Henry throughout simply showed a desire to use the bishopric as a means of providing for a favourite minister. No reason can be assigned for the contradictory orders that he sent to Bath; we can only guess that they indicate changes in the wishes of Peter Chaceporc. The conduct of Pope Innocent is worthy of praise; he evidently desired to do what was best for the church, and he succeeded in solving a difficult problem in a thoroughly satisfactory manner. The dispute evidently cost the Convent a large sum, strained its resources to the utmost, and involved it in debt.³ Moreover there is, I think, some reason for suspecting that it was somewhat lavish in grants of pensions and corrodies under the administration of Prior Thomas, but some of these were no doubt given in payment for services.⁴ In this time of need the monks were greatly helped by a liberal benefactress, Matilda de Champflur, the lady of Bath Easton, who besides making an advantageous exchange of pasturage with the Convent, sold to it the advowson of Bath Easton and certain land, and then remitted 50 mcs. of the price.⁵ Her benefits were repaid by the grant of a solemn commemoration and other honours of a like kind. Sir Hubert Huse, or Hosat,¹ were also benefactors to the Convent at this time. In spite of their embarrassments the monks were able to undertake the building or beautification of the chapel of the Blessed Virgin in their church. They were assisted in this work by Bishop William Button, who granted an indulgence to the contributors to it.² This bishop was the first elected under the ordinance of Pope Innocent in 1248, in succession to Bishop Roger, who died Dec. 21, 1247, and was buried at Bath, the last bishop laid by the monks in their church; for one result of the ordinance which made the church of Wells equal with Bath in cathedral dignity was to loosen the tie between the bishop and the Convent. The bishops had already begun to reside chiefly at Wells. Bishops Reginald, Savaric, and Jocelin were very little at Bath: a secular bishop would no doubt feel himself less free in a residence that was virtually attached to a monastery than in one where he was surrounded by a secular chapter, and the palace that Jocelin built at Wells became the usual residence of the bishops of the see. It was no longer therefore important to them to keep the appointment of the Prior of Bath in their own hands. In May, 1261, when we may suppose Prior Thomas was sick, the Convent, on its petition to Bishop William, received from him licence to freely elect its own Prior for the future.³ Thomas died on June 23, and the monks on the 26th elected their cellarer, WALTER DE ANNO, to succeed him. Walter was a member of a family that had long been closely connected with the Priory, and had conferred many benefits upon it.⁴ The process of his election may be made out from several documents.⁵

Prior Walter had to contend with many debts arising no doubt from the cost of the dispute with Wells.⁶ A faint echo of the Civil War reaches us in the notice of the excommunications that were pronounced wholesale by Cardinal Ottoboni against the baronial party.⁷ Edward I. was careful of the rights of the Crown, and in two inquisitions into them at Bath the juries presented that the Prior had unlawfully presented to the rectory of Walcot, that he had pulled down a building on the wall of the city and had taken the materials into the monastery, and that the king's bath and certain lodgings that he was bound to keep in repair for the king's use were in bad order⁸; the obligation to which this refers had perhaps existed from the time of Bishop John. During Walter's priorate the Convent joined with the canons of Wells in the election of three bishops, William Giffard,⁹ William Button the second,¹⁰ and Robert Burnell.¹¹ Of these the first and third were benefactors to the Priory. Bishop Robert was so in no ordinary degree. On his elevation he exchanged with the king the patronage of Glastonbury Abbey, which had been reserved by Bishop Jocelin in 1219, for the city of Bath, which had been alienated by Savaric.¹² The profits of jurisdiction, which amounted to a large sum, remained to the Convent until the Dissolution. Two curtains that he gave to the monastery, one of camel's hair, and the other of silk wrought by the infidels, were memorials of Edward's crusade.¹ These and his other benefactions were gratefully commemorated by the monks. His position as chancellor enabled him to protect the property of the house which was perhaps specially open to attack in consequence of its financial embarrassments. The Convent was disseised of its Irish estates and had to defend its right to the churches of Bampton and Uffculm, but the bishop stood its friend and in both cases its possessions were secured. In 1277 Walter was summoned to a chapter of the Benedictine Order,² and the following year Bishop Robert appears to have held a visitation of the Convent by his commissary, the Archdeacon of Bath.³ Walter died in January, 1290, and the sacristan of the monastery, THOMAS DE WINTON, was elected Prior in his place.⁴ He too had to meet debts and difficulties.⁵ Money was evidently scarce, and the Irish cells were so impoverished that it was needful to be cautious in the admission of brethren and sisters at Waterford in order that no fresh expense might accrue to the Hospital.⁶ The dispute about the Devon churches was not finally settled in 1295, and it was probably with reference to these advowsons that the Prior in 1296 appointed three Italians as proctors at the Papal Court, where money was of course spent which the Convent could ill afford.⁷ A schedule of possessions with the tenths payable from them occurring about this date probably marks the change from the old Norwich taxation to the taxation of Pope Nicolas, made for the tenth granted in 1291, to which we find some references.⁸ Under Prior Thomas the parliamentary history of the Priory began. This is a subject that cannot be worked out here. It must suffice to observe that in June, 1295, a writ of summons was issued to the Prior of Bath in common with the prelates and magnates of the realm to attend a parliament or great council at Westminster on Aug. 1st,⁹ and that on Sept. 30 a writ was issued with the premonitory clause, in accordance with which the Prior and Convent were directed to join with the Wells Chapter in electing a proctor to attend the parliament, called by Bishop Stubbs the "great and model parliament," which was summoned for Nov. 13 and met on the 27th, and that the Prior and Convent made return on Nov. 9 as to a "general convocation." A second return was made by the Sub-prior and Convent on the 25th.¹⁰ The elected proctor sat as one of the estate of the clergy. In connexion with the elections to Convocation—a wholly different matter—we may notice the references to the quarrel between the king and the clergy consequent on the publication of the Bull "Clericis Laicos." By yielding to the king's demands, the Convent incurred implicit excommunication, not falling however under the operation of the sentence, and was relieved therefrom by absolution.¹¹ So too we find notices of the absolution of two clerks who were connected with the Convent.¹² In the spring of 1300 Prior Thomas, then an old man, was in bad health, and on April 10, 1301, he resigned office on account of old age and sickness, receiving from the Convent a yearly pension and corrody.¹

Three days later the Convent elected ROBERT DE CLOPCOTE as Prior.² The affairs of the house were in a poor state and needed careful attention. Unfortunately the monks made a bad choice; the new Prior was careless, vain, and overbearing. For a while there seemed some chance of a renewal of prosperity, for in 1304 the king granted the Convent the right of holding two fairs, one at the Festival of the Invention of the Cross, and the other at the Festival of St. Laurence,³ and in 1308 Bishop Walter Hasleshaw, who was a liberal benefactor to the house, left the Prior £100, and the Convent £20.⁴ But signs of maladministration are soon evident. Bishop John de Drokenford did what he could to remedy matters. He must have learned how things were carried on, for he held a visitation in 1313, and appears to have tried to exercise some check on the Prior by frequent changes in the sacristanship, an office that was in his gift, appointing William de Hampton in 1315, William de Canyng, "during pleasure," in 1316, and John de Cumpton in 1319.⁵ His efforts were unsuccessful. It is probable that the funds of the different domestic offices were in debt, and that the Prior took them into his hands; for in 1321 the bishop was informed that the monks were suffering from the Prior's folly and extravagance. He stinted them of their bread and ale at meals, and deprived them altogether of their usual dishes of meat and fish; bad and unwholesome food was set before them, such as they could not relish, and if they dared to murmur or ask for the food allowed by their rule, he would threaten them that they should have worse food still, and be punished severely as well. The bishop wrote to him exhorting him strongly to be more provident and more kindly.⁶ Before the year was out he was again reprov'd for carelessness in another direction.⁷ While he was thus starving the poor monks, he was seeking to obtain an empty honour which, had he been successful, would necessarily have led to further expense; for he made interest with Edmund, Earl of Kent, to request Pope John XXII. to allow him to wear pontifical insignia, such as were worn by "mitred abbots." The Pope refused, and as his letter has not hitherto been printed or, I think, even noticed, it may be well to give it here. It belongs to the sixth year of John's pontificate, that is, to 1321.

So Prior Robert was snubbed. He seems to have granted corrodies freely,² but the regular payments due from the Convent were not kept up, and it owed the Crown £260 for thirteen years fee-farm rent of the Barton.³ It is no wonder that under such a Prior the debts of the house were increased. In 1322 the Prior received a request from the king to raise horse and foot to march against the rebels of Lancaster's party.⁴ Among these were two tenants of the house who suffered forfeiture.⁵ Another episcopal visitation was held at the Priory in 1323, and it may have been a result of this that in 1324 the bishop, finding that the church had fallen into disrepair, licensed a collection throughout the diocese for the fabric.⁶ It is not likely that any extensive repairs were carried out; the rich laity had ceased to be zealous in support of religious houses. In the next reign the Convent was fined for the appropriation of the church of Corston, in contravention of the statute of mortmain; for this offence Bishop Hasleshaw seems to have been partly responsible.⁷ To add to its troubles the Crown claimed that it was liable to the payment of aids in respect of its Gloucestershire land, but the claim was successfully resisted by process of law.⁸ Its Irish estates too were a source of trouble. The Prior had visited them in person in 1306, but a visit from him was not likely to do much good, and they fell under a bad warden. This was Brother Hugh de Dover, who had been collated to the precentorship by the bishop in 1320, and had, in 1325, been appointed sacristan pro tem.; for the office was impoverished and the bishop hoped that he would bring matters into order.⁹ But Drokensford was mistaken in his man; for when Hugh found himself in a semi-independent position at Waterford he acted badly.¹⁰ It may be that Prior Robert had some trouble at the Papal court in 1332; he seems to have had a proctor at Avignon who laid his resignation before the Pope. Before the Pope's acceptance reached Bath, Robert died on Feb. 26.¹¹ He was buried on March 6, and the next day the Convent elected as his successor ROBERT DE SUTTON,¹² probably of the family, perhaps a brother, of a monk named John de Sutton, who seems to have been a benefactor.¹³

The new Prior must have been advanced in life, and was probably a worthy man, for he had been a friend of Bishop Walter (d. 1308), and had received a legacy from him.¹⁴ The disorder in the Waterford house was notorious. The Archbishop of Canterbury interfered, and at his command Robert insisted on the return of Hugh de Dover.¹ Robert's tenure of office was short. As his predecessor had resigned in the Papal court the Pope claimed the right of appointment to the vacancy, and appointed another of the brethren, named THOMAS CRIST, who was admitted by Bishop Ralph on Sept. 24.² Thomas was probably a native of Malmesbury and a relative of Richard Cryst, the recipient of a corrody in the time of Robert de Clopcote.³ Robert de Sutton had to give up his office. He was comfortably provided for, receiving a pension of £20 a year, the Priorship of Dunster, and leave to retire there with such friends as he chose for companions.⁴ Prior Thomas found the debts of the house heavy, and they do not seem to have diminished under his administration; in 1332 he gave bonds to a citizen of Winchester for £50, to the Abbot of Malmesbury for £40, and to a citizen and vintner of London for £240, which was the next year renewed for £600, and in 1338 gave a bond to Bishop Ralph for £30.⁵ Several notices of his time seem to point to the dealings of the Convent in wool and cloth. He was perhaps, considering the circumstances of the house, not sufficiently sparing in grants of allowances of different kinds, and among these one will be noted to a female relative, probably his sister.⁶ He resigned his office in August, 1340, and on the 27th received an ample provision. He was to have a becoming house, with a monastic chaplain, a squire and a groom to attend him, and sufficient meat and drink and other provision for himself and them, and wood for his fire. The manor and church of North Stoke were made over to him, with all rights and the stock on the land, with the obligation of repairs and of leaving the same amount of stock at his death.⁷ His successor was JOHN DE IFORD, or DE FORD. The debts of the house had now become very large. Immediately on his accession John gave a bond for £260 to the citizen of Winchester who had received his predecessor's bond for £50, and another for £800 to Sir John ate Pole, or de la Pole, a famous merchant and money-lender of Kingston-on-Hull, and ancestor of the Earls and Dukes of Suffolk.⁸ Neither these nor other bonds, however, must be taken as representing equivalent debts; for it was the custom to secure debts by bonds for much larger amounts, usually for twice as much as was actually lent. Still, even so, the debts of the Convent must, if we take into account the then value of money, be considered enormous, and we may fairly conclude that no strenuous effort had been made by Prior Thomas Crist to reduce them. Matters did not improve under Prior John, who was unworthy of his office, and indeed of his profession. Some debts were paid off—the £600 bond given to a London vintner was redeemed, and £184 owed to the Crown, being apparently part of the old arrears of £260 of the Barton rent, was paid off—but this was only done by borrowing from a firm of Lucchese merchants a sum represented by a bond for £1360.⁹ Some part of the liabilities of the house may have been incurred in the way of trade, but by far the larger part must have been the result of careless or inefficient administration following on the expenses incurred by the Convent in the dispute with Wells. Heavy as those expenses were, they were not in themselves ruinous, and the impoverishment of the Priory might have been avoided by judicious management. Among the various grants of allowances made by Prior John are two of lodging, robes, money, and other perquisites, to the sons of a John de Ford, and it is not, I think, too much to assume that the Prior used his office to make a handsome provision for two of his brothers at the expense of his sorely embarrassed monastery.¹ The Irish estates were in a miserable condition; the Priories of Waterford and Cork were threatened with sequestration and were falling to ruins, and the Warden, Thomas de Foxcote, was using the charities of the hospital for evil and secular purposes. Thomas was superseded and placed in the custody of another Warden, but the Prior and Convent seem to have had no confidence in their new representative, and on hearing that he and Thomas had fallen out granted the officer whom they had superseded and disgraced a handsome allowance at the expense of the already ruined Priories.² In spite of all this some attempt to repair the church seems still to have been afoot in 1344.³ Prior John's unworthiness is convincingly proved by the fact that in 1346 he was convicted of adultery with Agnes Cubbel, a woman on the Convent's manor of Hameswell in Gloucestershire.⁴ Assuming apparently that an entry in one of Bishop Kennett's MSS. was an extract from the Register of Ralph of Salop, then Bishop of Bath and Wells, all writers who have made lists of the Priors of Bath have asserted that, in consequence of this conviction, Prior John was either deprived of, or resigned, his office, and that the Priorship was vacant in 1347.⁵ A careful examination of the Register has been made for me by a friend, whose industry and ability for such work are undoubted,⁶ with the result that no such entry can be found, and it is moreover perfectly clear from an entry in the Lincoln's Inn Chartulary that John was Prior at least as late as 1352.⁷ That he was subjected to ecclesiastical censure, and perhaps to suspension, may be hoped; that he was deprived or resigned cannot be admitted. His continuance in office is an early illustration of the decay of discipline that became the curse of the Church during the latter half of the century.

In spite of the debts of the monastery the number of monks still remained large in the earlier part of Prior John's time; indeed a list of those joining in a power of attorney in 1344⁸ shows that there were then resident at Bath thirty monks, besides the Prior and without making allowance for any sick or absentees at Dunster, Waterford, or elsewhere, so that the whole number was perhaps not more than five short of the number given in the list of 1206, already quoted here, when the Convent was at the height of its prosperity. The Great Plague fell upon the Convent in 1348 and 1349, and as we shall see probably carried off at least half the monks. It must have been an awful time, and very desolate the house must have seemed to the remnant that remained. Its emptiness is illustrated here by four grants of lodging made in 1350 and 1351.¹ The only other events during the rest of Prior John's time that seem to call for notice were connected with a dispute between the Convent and the Crown concerning the advowson of Olveston. The Convent had raised £100 by granting a lease of the manor to Robert Gyen of Bristol for his life and two years afterwards, and at some other date appear also to have given him a lease of the advowson for the same term. Gyen's estates were forfeited to the Crown, and the Prior gave him a lodging in the monastery. The king claimed the church and the claim was to be laid before the justices and a jury. In 1352 Prior John was arrested and committed to prison on the charge that he, a monk of the house, Robert Gyen, and another, had in the February of that year met in a chamber of the monastery and had there entered into a bond to maintain the cause one of another, evidently with reference to the suit concerning Olveston church. The Prior was acquitted.² It would seem that the Convent had, while the church was in the king's hands, granted a lease of it to Robert Gyen the younger. For this the king's pardon was obtained, and Robert Gyen the elder being dead, the church was adjudged to have reverted to the Prior.³ John de Iford may have died in 1359.⁴ Here our second Register virtually ends, and from this point my materials become exceedingly scanty. John de Iford was probably succeeded by JOHN BEREWYCK who, as we learn from the Clerical Subsidy Roll of 51 Edward III., was Prior in 1377. This roll contains a list of the Bath monks at that date, and from it we may gather some idea of the extent to which the Plague had ravaged the Convent. It reads thus:—

Dom. Johannes Berewyck, Prior Eccl. Cath. Bathon. Fr. Johannes Bradlegh. Fr. Willelmus Tondre. Fr. Johannes Brok. Fr. Johannes de Circestre. Fr. Michaelis de Comb. Fr. Nicholaus Vinoz. Fr. Johannes Kymeilton. Fr. Johannes Rokebourne. Fr. Henricus Godleye. Fr. Johannes Preston. Fr. Johannes Pleicce. Fr. Thomas Bampton. Fr. Philippus Pekelyuch. Fr. Nicholaus Huse. Fr. Johannes Milverton.⁵

Of these seventeen the Prior and Brother John Bradlegh were members of the Convent in 1344. The next Prior was probably JOHN DUNSTER, on whose death JOHN TELLESFORD, previously a monk at Dunster, was elected on Feb. 11, 1412.⁶ During the time of these two Priors, a dispute arose between the Convent and the city about the ringing of bells. It had been the custom that no bells should be rung in the city before the Convent bells in the morning, or after them at curfew. In 1408, however, the Mayor and commonalty in conjunction with the clergy of the city, broke through this custom, causing the bells of the parish churches to be rung before the Convent's bells in the morning and after them in the evening, to the annoyance of the monks, whose services were interrupted by the noise. Succeeding mayors carried on the practice until in 1421 the Convent brought the matter before the king's justices, and an inquisition under a writ of "ad quod damnum" having been held at Frome, the monastery's bells were declared to have the right of the first and last word.¹ About this time the number of monks was probably increased; for in 1423 Bishop Bubwith allowed four novices, John Wydcombe, William Bower, Richard Dunster and William Pensford to make profession at once. John Tellesford died in 1425, and was succeeded by WILLIAM SOUTHBROKE.² Under him the discipline of the house appears to have been terribly lax; for on June 24, 1445, Bishop Beckington³ wrote to him reminding him that though it was forbidden to allow monks to live by themselves on conventual estates, whether at manors or churches, he had at his late visitation found that one of the Convent, Dom. Robert Veyse, had been living for years as a secular at the church of Stokeney (?), had not been recalled by the Prior, had engaged in worldly matters, and despite repeated warnings and promises, had fallen into adultery and led a notoriously evil life. The Bishop had therefore caused Veyse to be arrested under a royal writ as an apostate monk, and was sending him to the Prior to be punished according to the Statutes of the Order, to be kept either on perpetual bread and water, or at least in strict prison until further commands. Too little heed was given to the bishop's words, for on Dec. 27 Beckington wrote to the Prior that he heard that Veyse had again left the monastery and had betaken himself to his old place, adding that the king was very angry thereat. It is asserted that Beckington raised new conventual buildings, but of this I have found no proof.⁴ Bishop Bubwith had built a chapel in the church and founded a chantry there, and Beckington by his will left the Priory some ecclesiastical ornaments.⁵ William Southbroke died on June 7, 1447, and the Convent received licence to elect on the 16th.⁶ The monks could not agree on a new Prior. They met in the Chapter-house on the 24th and adjourned to July 5, sending word to all absentees. On the appointed day, after a solemn Mass de Spiritu Sancto, they were rung into the Chapter-house, where the Sub-Prior preached a sermon, and the Veni Creator was sung. Then they proceeded to business. In the "process" recorded in the Bishop's Register is another list of the Convent, from which we learn that the number had much increased since 1377, but that one of the monks held as many as three offices. Besides these, there were summoned at the door of the Chapter-house :— Fr. William Bristowe, then studying at Oxford, Fr. Thomas Lacock, prior of the cell of Dunster, and John Beryngton, William Bonar, and Richard Hopar, living in the said cell, and John Newton, a senior, staying there for a time. Robert Veyse and John Appleby, monks of the church, were also summoned, but did not appear. Those present agreed to ask the bishop to appoint, and on Sept. 16 he chose THOMAS LACOCK, then Prior of Dunster. Two episcopal visitations are recorded, probably in his time, in 1449, and 1454.¹ As in 1457 the then Prior of Bath, unnamed, received a dispensation to eat meat in Advent, on account of his weakness and various infirmities,² it may be that Thomas did not live long after that date. In 1458 the Convent received a manor at Yeovilton and other land from William, Lord Botreaux, for the foundation of certain services.³ After Thomas seems to have come a Prior named JOHN, occurring between 1461 and 1469,⁴ and he was perhaps succeeded by Prior RICHARD, who was present at the baptism of Richard, son of George, Duke of Clarence, at Tewkesbury on Oct. 7, 1476.⁵ In that year notice of an episcopal visitation was sent to the Prior. Then we pass to JOHN CANTLOW, sacristan of the house in 1483,⁶ who occurs Prior in 1489.⁷ Prior John built a house on the Convent's manor at St. Catherine which is still standing, and a chapel at Holloway near Bath, founding by it a small hospital for lunatics.⁸ Shortly before the Prior's death in 1499, Bishop Oliver King held a visitation of the Priory, and from his statements as to its condition we may gather that these fifteenth century Priors, of whom we know so little, were generally careless of their duty, and that the Convent stood in need of a drastic reform in respect both of its material and religious state. The bishop determined to take matters into his own hands.⁹ Prior John died in August, about a month after the visitation, and on the 31st, the Convent, without waiting for the bishop's licence, elected William Birde, the following brethren taking part in the election :—

David Pensford, Sub-prior. William Gyls. Thomas Browne. Thomas Bath. Robert Pavy. Thomas Keynesham. John Eyton. John Norton. Richard Wydcombe. William Ryall. John Weke. Thomas Bekynton. John Clement. The bishop however declared that they had no business to proceed to an election without licence, that he should therefore reject their postulation, and that the election had fallen to himself. The Convent craved his pardon, and the bishop, having probably ascertained that the elect would submit to, and forward the reformation he intended to carry out, admitted WILLIAM BIRDE as Prior.¹ On Oct. 9, 1500, he issued his scheme of reformation.² He declared that he found by the visitation of July 15, 1499, that the Rule was badly observed by the Convent, that the monks were too frequently abroad, that women came to the monastery too often and at unseemly times, that there was feasting in places outside the refectory, and that idleness was not corrected. The church, he said, had not been duly repaired by former Priors, and had been neglected by the late Prior (John Cantlow), and had consequently fallen into great decay. He therefore, by the advice of others and trusting to their help, was determined to undertake its repair himself; for the monks could not obtain from the funds at their disposal sufficient means in a hundred years. He proceeded to give the following injunctions:—1. The monks were to eat meat only in the appointed places, and it was to be allowed only to the weak. 2. One of their number was to have the duty of setting out the portion of food appointed for each of them. 3. Their habits were to be of coarse and cheap stuff. 4. Each monk was to produce by the Feast of All Saints a list of all things in his use, and whatever the Prior thought superfluous was to be given over to the common use. 5. The accounts of the house show a total income from property, pensions, rents, and revenue from wool of £480 16s. 6¼d. Of this the Bishop assigned 80 mcs. to the Prior and £80 to the community, “which now consists of sixteen.” Other assignments were made, and for the rest and all casual receipts the Convent was to account to the bishop within one month of the general audit. All that was saved was to be spent on the building of the church.³

It is evident that the church of Bishops John and Roger had fallen into utter and hopeless decay; for Bishop King and Prior Birde pulled it down and set about building a new church, the one which with later restoration is still standing, on the site of its nave. Birde faithfully and zealously carried out the work laid upon him by the bishop. He died on May 22, 1525. On June 28th the Convent met to elect his successor, when there were present:—

The election was made per modum compromissi, and WILLIAM HOLLEWAY, alias Gybbs, was elected.¹ He was a man of high character, and is said to have been well skilled in science. He spent a large sum upon the fabric of the church, which in the deeds of his time is described as the "cathedral church of the Holy Saviour and the Blessed Apostles Peter and Paul." The pious zeal of the Prior was to be defeated by the destruction of his ancient house, and before long appeared evident tokens of the coming storm. In 1535 were issued the articles of inquiry and injunctions for the use of the king's commissioners in their visitation of the religious houses, and in August Dr. Layton held his visitation of Bath. Prepared to do anything that would please Thomas Cromwell, unscrupulous and filthy, he came to make an evil report of the house. Yet even he found the Prior "a ryghte virtuose man," though he held him to be "simple and not of the gretesteste wite." The monks were, he said, worse than any that he had found both for nameless vice and adultery.² Every one must form each his own judgment on this vague accusation. For myself, taking into consideration the characters of the then Prior, of his predecessor, and of the accuser of the monks, Layton's methods of procedure, the late stringent reform, and the active work in building then going forward, which must have kept the minds of the brethren wholesomely employed, I have no hesitation in holding that Layton was at least guilty of gross exaggeration. In his letter to Cromwell he states that the house was in a good state of repair, and but £400 in debt, so the late reform appears to have been thoroughly effectual. He also announces the Prior's present to the Secretary of Irish "laners," and says that on his own account he is sending "a boke of our lades miracles well able to mache the canteberie tailles," which he found in the library. A submissive letter from the Prior to Cromwell written shortly after the visitation, in which Holleway represents that it would be impossible for him to perform his duties if he strictly obeyed the new injunctions, illustrates the discomforts imposed by the king's deliberate policy on those monks who did not choose to make suit that they might abandon their profession. With this letter the Prior sent "an olde boke Opera Anselmi whiche one William tyldysleye after scrutinye made here in my libarye willed me to send unto youe by the kinge ys grace and comawndment."³ In 1537 the Convent made a further effort to secure Cromwell's goodwill by granting him a yearly pension of £5, the Prior writing to him to thank him for his kindness in opposing some "privy and secret" efforts against him, and to request that the same liberty for recreation might be allowed the brethren as had been granted to the Glastonbury monks.⁴ The measures taken by the Convent in anticipation of coming trouble may be gathered from the Register of Prior Holleway, which contains valuable illustrations of the management of monastic estates.⁵ At Bath, as elsewhere, it was the custom to let stock along with the conventual farms, each farm having always kept upon it a certain amount of stock, of which sheep formed by far the largest part. Thus with the farm at

Combe there was let with the land, from time to time, "the wether flocke" of 340 sheep, with the Lyncombe farm "the hogge flocke," and with the Lansdown farm "the ewe flocke." The tenant had to keep up the number of the stock, and on avoidance to make good any deficiency, either in kind or in money as the Convent might choose. Rents were chiefly in kind, generally in grain, and in such obligations as feeding an ox during the winter for the Convent and the like. By this Register we find that between 1537 and 1539 the Convent no doubt for valuable consideration parted with the next presentation to their livings, and granted leases and reversions of their estates for lives or long terms of years. The life of the Priory came to an end on January 27, 1539, when Prior Holleway surrendered the monastery to the Crown.¹ The church was offered to the citizens for 500 mcs., and on their refusal to buy it the lead was stripped from the roofs and melted for the king's profit, the glass and iron were sold for £30, and the new building was left to go to ruin.² In 1543 the Dean and Chapter of Wells were constituted the sole Chapter of the Bishop.

The brethren of the surrendered house received pensions, the list of them being as follows:—*William Holewey (sic), prior, £80, together with a dwelling in Stalls Street of the value of 20s. John Pytt, sub-prior, £9. Richarde Griffith, prior of the cell of Dunster, £8. *Thomas Bathe, alias Copten, impotent, £8. *Nycholas Bathe, alias Jobben, B.D., £8. Alysauder Boyston, alias Bull, £6 13s. 4d. Richarde Lyncolne, or Lyncombe, alias Bygge, £6. John Bekenton, alias Romeston, £6 13s. 4d. Thomas Powell, £5. Richarde Gules, alias Gybbs, £5 6s. 8d. Thomas Worceter, alias Stylland, £5 6s. 8d. William Clement, £5 6s. 8d. John Arleston or Adelstan, alias Browne, £6. *John Edger, alias Godbury, £5 6s. 8d. Edwarde Edwey, alias Style, £5 6s. 8d. John Pacyence, alias Long, £4 13s. 4d.

Those whose names are marked with an asterisk seem to have been dead in 1553, the date of Cardinal Pole's pension list.³ Of the late Prior there is a curious notice, which is probably historical, in a poem entitled The Breviary of Naturale Philosophy, dated January 1, 1557, by the famous alchemist, Thomas Charnock. He speaks of the learning of the last Prior of Bath, and describes him as an alchemist, who used the "Bath of the Bathe" in the place of fire—

" He had our Stone, our Medicine, our Elixir, and all,
Which when the Abbie was suppress he hid in a wall."

Finding his deposit stolen the poor man was like to go mad. "A toy took him" to wander about the country; he was blind, and had a boy to lead him.¹ Of the other monks William Clement became Vicar of St. Mary's at Bath, Thomas Powell appears to have been Rector of Tellisford in 1554, and John Pytt was perhaps the chantry priest in St. James's, Taunton, who is described in 1548 as a "clerk of the age of sixty-four years, a man of honest conversation."

Our first Chartulary is in the Library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, MS. cxi., in a fo. volume written on vellum, which is described by Nasmith in his Catalogue of the C.C.C. Camb. MSS.; his account is quoted in the Monasticon ii. 361, 362. Of the miscellaneous pieces contained in the volume the only documents of interest connected with the Priory are the Lists of Reliques and the Manumissions which are given as an Appendix to this Introduction. The Chartulary proper begins on p. 55; there is no general heading to it, the heading "Registrum Cartarum &c." given by Nasmith not appearing in the MS. The Chartulary is printed here in extenso; in the few places both in it, and in the documents copied in full from the Lincoln's Inn MS., where marks of omission occur, only a few merely formal words such as any one can supply have been left out. The transcript has been made for me by Mr. A. Rogers of the University Library, Cambridge, to whom my thanks are due for his careful work and willingness to assist me. Following the example set in the Rolls series of "Chronicles and Memorials," I have modernized the spelling of the Latin and inserted modern punctuation. Both in this, and the Lincoln's Inn Chartulary, I have affixed numbers to the documents for the purpose of reference. Both the MSS. are paged, and the pages are given in the text; the pagination of the C.C.C. MS. is, as may be seen, somewhat faulty.

Our second Chartulary, represented here in a calendar, is in the Library of Lincoln's Inn, and has been described by Hunter in his Catalogue of the MSS. belonging to the Hon. Society of the Inn. It occupies an entire volume, of the size of about 12 x 8 inches, and is written on vellum. The writing is of various dates from the first half of the thirteenth century, and varies continually throughout, sometimes two or three hands having been employed on one page. The MS. is in fair condition; some few parts of it are much faded. Many of the entries of the fourteenth century are probably of about the dates of the documents themselves. A few at the end are in the writing of the fifteenth century, and among these is the curious title-deed of Crook Court (No. 926), entered probably towards the end of the century. The leather binding of the volume, which is in bad repair, is early, though probably not original. It has the letters M.I.R. and another which I cannot identify stamped on the sides of the pattern. The assertion that the volume belonged to Chief Justice Hale is unfounded, and has virtually been disproved. It is not known how the Society became possessed of it. On the inside of the cover is written "Thomas. Thomas Er [] her (?) me possidet teste meipso. Elizabethhe dei gra. Angl. franc.'" Some small accounts are scribbled. And there is further written: "The swythe and recite off Harry Stradlyng. . . oune fine and other oune. . . a rich goune. ij doebletts. iij shyrttes. ij paire of hosys. ij bonettes. a petty cote off wyte. item a payre off bottes with sporrys. item a blue hatt." Nearly all the Calendar has been compiled for the Society by Messrs. Hardy and Page, Record Agents, to whom I owe thanks for their skilful work and their constant readiness to answer any inquiries and meet my wishes. A small part of the Calendar has been compiled by me from a transcript sent by them, and as both they and Mr. Rogers have worked under my direction, and I have sometimes slightly altered what they have sent me, and have passed the whole through the press, all inaccuracies and imperfections in this book must be set to my account. It is perhaps scarcely needful to point out that some things in the Calendar which look like inaccuracies are in fact witnesses of an attempt to represent the original MS. as closely as my plan would allow. All names of persons and places and all dates given in the MS. will be found in the Calendar, and when an entry is undated it may be taken that no date is to be found in the MS. The names of places have been copied as they stand; an attempt has been made to identify them in the Notes. The title "Dominus" is in the case of monks rendered Dom.; when applied to those who seem to have been secular clergy or laymen below baronial rank it is translated by Sir. In all cases "Prior &c.," stands for "the Prior and Convent of Bath." The Index has been made for me by Mr. A. Hughes, of the Record Office.

My Introduction and Notes, though the result of much labour, will, I fear, be found to contain many misconceptions. But to put such a compilation as these two Chartularies into the hands of readers without any attempt to explain or comment on their contents, or to trace the history of the house to which they belonged, did not seem to me to be making the best of my materials. Many others whom I could name, some members of our own Society, better fitted by practice or by special knowledge of monastic or local history, would have edited these Chartularies more ably than I have done, but no one was willing to undertake the task. So I have done what I could. For the most part assistance derived from other books has been acknowledged, but to give due references to Sir T. D. Hardy's edition of Le Neve's Fasti Ecclesiæ Anglicanæ or to Bishop Stubbs's Registrum Sacrum Anglicanum would have taken up too much space, so frequently have they been used; my debts to these books must therefore be acknowledged here once for all.

The Register of Prior Holleway is, as I have said, of some interest. It is contained in MS. Harl. 3970, a handsome folio, and is written on vellum, apparently at, or about, the dates of the various documents. I subjoin a brief notice of the contents of the Register, affixing a number to the note of each document for convenience sake.

My thanks are due to the Master and Fellows of C.C.C. Cambridge, and especially to the Librarian, the Rev. J. R. Harmer, for kindly allowing the transcript of their MS. to be made, to the Benchers of the Hon. Society of Lincoln's Inn for permission to calendar their MS., and to their Librarian, Mr. J. Nicholson, for affording all needful facilities for the work, to the Rev. W. W. Skeat, Litt.D., Professor of Anglo-Saxon at Cambridge, for his great kindness in revising and correcting the parts of the C.C.C. MS. written in Anglo-Saxon, to the Rev. F. A. Gasquet, O.S.B., for much valuable help of different kinds, to the Rev. T. S. Holmes for kindly searching and sending me notes from the Bishops' Registers at Wells, to the Right Rev. Bishop Hobhouse, the Rev. Canon Church and Mr. H. Maxwell Lyte, C.B., for their help and interest in my work. I beg to express my sincere regret to the Members of the Somerset Record Society for the delay that has taken place in the production of this volume. It has been occasioned mainly by a terrible calamity that befell me last year, and partly also by the fact that the work has taken me far more time and trouble than I calculated when I undertook to do it.

PLATE OF SEALS.

THE round seal at the top, No. 1437 in the Catalogue of Seals in the MS. Department of the British Museum, is there described as presenting "the Abbey buildings, consisting of an edifice of three towers without windows, pointed roofs, the pinnacles surmounted by knobs." The building, however, surely represents the three apses of a romanesque church. The seal belongs to Harl. ch. 75A. 30 (1159-1175), and the matrix is believed by Mr. W. de G. Birch to be of the tenth century.

+ SIGILLVM SLI PETRI BATHONIS ELLLESIE.

The oval seal in the left corner is attached to Add. ch. 19067 (1226) and is numbered 1439 in the B.M. Catalogue, where it is described as presenting the figure of the Prior, in his r. hand a long sword, in his l. hand a book.

SIGILL THOME PRIORIS BATHONIE R. P. T. G.

The TH in THOME are in monogram.

It seems possible that the last four letters of the inscription may stand for Reverendus Pater Thomas Glaston., and if this guess is correct they would show that Prior Thomas (1223-1261) was either a native or a monk of Glastonbury.

The oval seal in the right corner, more lately acquired by the B. Museum, has on a latticed background a very elegant figure which seems to represent a saint with nimbus, over the r. shoulder apparently the hilt of a short sword, in the l. hand a book.

SIGILLVM THOME PRIORIS BATHONIE.

The design is evidently of the latter part of the thirteenth century, and the seal therefore belonged to Prior Thomas de Winton (1290-1301).

P. 54. 2. [Th]eodobaldus, dei gratia Cantuariensis archiepiscopus et Anglorum primas, universis sanctæ matris ecclesiæ filiis salutem. Eis debet dominicæ crucis maxime prodesse misterium qui sinceriori devotione ipsius venerantur honorem, et in statutis solempnitatibus ad consequendam veniam peccatorum a Salvatore crucifixo conveniunt. Ea propter de divina confisi misericordia, omnibus qui in exaltatione sanctæ crucis Bathoniensem Ecclesiam fidei devotione visitaverint peccatorum, de quibus corde contrito confessi sunt, viginti dierum indulgentiam facimus, et omnium orationum et beneficiorum ecclesiæ Cantuariensis participes eos constituimus. Valete.

[R]obertus, dei gratia Bathoniensis ecclesiæ minister, universis. . . . salutem et benedictionem. Christianæ quidem religionis est Ihesum Christum dei filium credere, adorare, benedicere, et predicare, et hunc crucifixum. Inde est quod in memoriam et venerationem ejusdem crucifixi cruces facere et easdem benedicere consuevit Christiana devotio. Quod misericorditer nos imitantes in ecclesia nostra Bath' in gloriam et honorem dei quandam crucem benedicendo consecravimus. In cujus dedicationis die anniversario, exaltatione videlicet sanctæ crucis, quisquis caritatis intuitu spe veniæ delictorum consequendæ ad monasterium Bath' convenerit, Nos, de passionis dominicæ et crucis confisi misterio, de injuncta ei penitentia dies xx. relaxamus, et orationum ac beneficiorum quæ fiunt in ecclesiis nostris participem eum perpetuo fore concedimus. Valete.

[M]arcus, dei gratia Cluanensis episcopus, omnibus. Quia sanctæ crucis veneratio est cunctorum fidelium salus et protectio, dignum est ejusdem sanctæ crucis venerationi et laudi insistere, et ad hoc quosque fideles invitando accendere, ut ejus muniantur et salventur signaculo, cujus sunt redempti misterio. Qua devotione accensi, omnibus qui ad exaltationem sanctæ crucis Bathoniam vere penitentes et devoti cum elemosinis et orationibus convenerint xx. dierum indulgentiam, de divina misericordia confisi, imperpetuum concedimus. Valete.

[N]icholaus dei gratia landavensis episcopus universis sanctæ matris ecclesiæ filiis salutem. Eis debet dominicæ crucis maxime prodesse misterium, qui sinceriori devotione ipsius venerantur honorem et in statutis solemnitatibus ad consequendam veniam peccatorum a Salvatore crucifixo conveniunt. Ea propter de divina confisi misericordia, omnibus qui in exaltatione sanctæ crucis Bathoniensem ecclesiam fideli devotione visitaverint peccatorum, de quibus corde contrito confessi sunt, xx. dierum indulgentiam facimus, et omnium beneficiorum Landavensis ecclesie participes eos esse concedimus. Valet.

P. 54. 3. Universis . . . Nicholaus . . . ecclesiæ Landavensis humilis minister salutem . . . Noverit discretio vestra, petitione domni Petri prioris et totius conventus Bath' ecclesiæ, et aliarum religiosarum personarum, et archidiaconorum ejusdem episcopatus, me dedicasse oratorium quoddam in suburbio præfatæ civitatis in honore S. Werburgæ virginis, et SS. Johannis evangelistæ, et Katerinæ virginis et martiris, quorum altaria ibi habentur. Precibus etiam prædictorum virorum provocatus, et fidelium devotione ipsum locum cum magna veneratione frequentantium roboratus, . . . ad singula prædictorum preciosorum sanctorum solemnium xx. dierum relaxationem de penitentia sua confessis indulsumus, ut devotio fidelium ibi augeatur, et deus noster ab omnibus et per omnia benedicatur. 7. Regnante ac gubernante regimonia regni Osrici regis, anno recapitulationis Dionisii, id est ab Incarnatione domini nostri Ihesu Christi sexcentesimo septuagesimo sexto, Indictione quarta, mense Novembrio, viii^o Idus novembris. Cum nobis evangelica et apostolica dogmata pro baptismi sacramento, deo suffragente fuissent delata, et omnia simulachrorum figmenta ridiculosa funditus diruta, tum primitus ad augmentum catholicæ et orthodoxæ fidei, pontificalem dumtaxat cathedram erigentes juxta sinodalia decreta construere censuimus. At vero nunc, cum gratia superna longe lateque profusius enitesceret, cenobialia etiam loca sparsim virorum sparsimque virginum deo famulantium erigenda statuimus, ut ubi truculentus et nefandus prius draco errorum deceptionibus serviebat, nunc versa vice ecclesiasticus ordo in clero conversantium Domino patrocinate

Pp. 61-65. 9. In nomine dei summi et altissimi. Certis astipulationibus sancti et justi patres frequentativis orationibus admonent, ut deum quem diligimus et credimus intima mentis affectione cum bonorum operum diligentia incessanter timeamus et amemus. Qui retributionem omnium actuum nostrorum in die examinationis juxta uniuscujusque meritum reddet, ideoque subtilissima mentis certatione illum imitari satagimus. Licet mortalis vitæ pondere pressi, et labentibus hujus seculi possessionibus simus infecati, tamen miserationis ejus largitate caducis opibus æterna celestis vitæ præmia mercari queramus. Quapropter ego Æðelstanus, desiderio regni cœlestis exardens, favente superno numine basyleos anglorum ceterarumque gentium in circumitu persistentium, litterarum commendare procuravi, ne aut incuria successorum nostrorum, aut invidia quadam, vel perfidia, nostra dicta vel facta futuri successu temporis negarentur, et ad controversiam nostris successoribus demum devenire potuerint, quod, cum consensu ac licentia episcoporum meorum, ac multorum optimatum, deo omnipotenti, et sancto Petro apostolo, ac venerabili familiæ quæ sita est in loco celebri ubi ruricolæ appellativa relatione nuncupantur æt Baðum, devota mente intus ad ecclesiam donans donabo perpetuis temporibus decem mansas in loco qui dicitur Pristun, et quinque in alio loco qui dicitur Æsctun, et mandatum commendamus in nomine altithroni gubernatoris, ut nullus superveniat hominum inflatus gressibus superbiæ, nec rex, nec episcopus, nec princeps, nec præpositus, nec personæ alicujus habitus, qui hanc præfatam libertatem in alicujus oneris molestia mutare audeat, aut in diebus nostris vel successorum nostrorum, sed sit libera ab omni mundiali jugo, exceptis istis, expeditione, pontis, arcisve renovatione cum omnibus quæ ad ipsum locum pertinere dinoscuntur, campis, pascuis, pratis, silvis; eatenus ut pro meis delictis, patrisque mei Ædwardi regis, cotidie missas pro nobis saluberrimas deo offerant, et dulcisonas modulationes psalteriorum armis spiritualibus contra invisibiles hostes pro nobis dimicare non cessent. Si quis autem prescriptis statutis noluerit consentire aut obedire, sciat se alienum esse a consortio sanctæ dei ecclesiæ et a corpore et sanguine domini nostri Ihesu Christi, per auctoritatem B. Petri Apostoli sociorumque ejus, nisi prius hic digna emendaverit pœnitentia ante mortem. Sciantque sapientes regionis nostræ nos has terras præfatas non injuste rapuisse, rapinamque deo dedisse, sed sic accepi eas, quemadmodum judicaverunt omnes optimates regionis Anglorum, insuper et apostolicus papa Romanæ ecclesiæ Johannes, Ælfredo defuncto, qui nostræ felicitati et vitæ æmulus extitit, nequitia inimicorum nostrorum consentiens quando me voluerunt, patre meo defuncto, cæcare in civitate Wintonia, si non me Deus sua pietate eripisset. Sed denudatis eorum machinamentis, remissus est Ælfred ad Romanam ecclesiam, ut ibi se coram apostolico Johanne jurejurando defenderet; et hoc fecit coram altare S. Petri. Sed facto juramento, cecidit coram altare, et a manibus suorum famulorum portatus est ad scolam Anglorum, et ibi tertia nocte vitam finivit. Et tunc apostolicus ad nos remisit, et quid de eo ageretur a nobis consuluit, an cum cæteris christianis corpus ejus poneretur. His peractis et nobis renuntiatis, optimates nostræ regionis, cum propinquorum illius turma, efflagitabant omni humilitate, ut corpus illius, per nostrum licentiam, cum corporibus poneretur christianorum, nobisque illorum efflagitationi consentientibus, Romam remisimus, et consentiente papa positus est ad cæteros christianos, quamvis indignus esset. Et sic judicata est mihi tota possessio ejus in magnis et in modicis. Sed et hæc apicibus litterarum prænotavimus, ne quandiu christianitas regnet aboletur. Unde mihi præfata possessio quam Deo et S. Petro dedi donaretur; nec justius novi quam Deo et S. Petro hanc possessionem dare qui æmulum meum in conspectu omnium cadere fecerat, et mihi sanitatem et regni prosperitatem largiti sunt.

His testibus consentientibus quorum inferius nomina recitantur. Anno dominicæ incarnationis dccccxxxi acta est hæc præfata libertas. Ego Æpelstan rex totius Britannicæ præfatam donationem cum sigillo sanctæ crucis confirmavi .+. Ego Ædmundus ejusdem regis frater consignavi .+. Ego Ædred ejusdem regis frater consignavi .+. Ego Wulfhelm dorobernensis ecclesiæ archiepiscopus ejusdem regis donationem cum tropheo agyæ crucis consignavi .+. Ego þeodred Lundoniensis ecclesiæ episcopus consignavi .+. 10. In nomine dei summi et altissimi. Certis astipulationibus nos sancti et justi patres frequentativis hortationibus admonent, ut deum, quem diligimus et credimus intima mentis affectione, cum bonorum operum diligentia incessanter eum teneamus et amemus. Quia retributionem omnium actuum nostrorum in die examinationis juxta uniuscujusque meritum reddet,

II. In nomine dei summi et altissimi Ihesu Christi. Egregius agonista sermocinatus est in scripturis divinis, quæ videntur temporalia sunt, quæ autem non videntur æterna. Iccirco superflua utentibus divinus sermo ut supra taxati sumus terribiliter premonet ut hujus seculi caduca contempnentes, spiritualiaque imitantes, cœlestia properemus ad regna. Quomobrem ego Eadmundus, desiderio regni cœlestis exardens, favente superno numine, basyleos Anglorum, multarumque gentium in circumitu persistentium, cuidam adoptivo fideli meo ministro Æþelere, ob illius amabile obsequium ei libenter largiendo, quinque mansas, ibidem ubi vulgares prisco more, mobilique relatione,

P. 68. vocitant æt Westtune, eatenus ut vita comite tam fidus mente quam subditus operibus mihi placabile obsequium præbeat, et meum post obitum cuicumque meorum amicorum voluero eadem fidelitate immobilis obediensque fiat. Sicque omnes posteriores præfatam terram possidentes in hoc decreto fideliter persistent, sicuti decet ministro, ut fidelitatem custodiat coram Deo et omnibus electis ejus, cum pratis, pascuisque, necnon et silvis silvarumque densitatibus, donans donabo libertatem. ut hæc prospere possideat, ac æternaliter teneat, dum hujus labentis ævi cursum transeat illus atque vitalis spiritus incorruptibili carne inhæreat. Post se autem veluti affirmavimus cuicumque voluerit heredi derelinquat. Fiat etenim præfata terra ab omni servili jugo libera, cum omnibus sibi recte pertinentibus, exceptis his tribus, expeditione, pontis, arcisve coedificatione. Si quis vero machinari infrin-

34. Notum sit omnibus catholicæ ecclesiæ fidelibus, tam presentibus quam futuris, quia ego Willelmus de Moione, timore dei compunctus, dono et concedo perpetualiter pro salute animæ meæ, regisque Anglorum W., atque omnium antecessorum meorum et successorum, ecclesiæ B. Petri de Bathonia, et Johanni episcopo ejusdem monasterii, et monachis tam presentibus quam futuris, ecclesiam S. Georgii de Dunestorre, et me ipsum, et decimam ejusdem villæ, tam vinearum quam carrucarum, et mercati, necnon etiam omnium pecudum, et totam villam Alcume, et omnia sibi pertinentia, libere et quiete ab omni servitio, scilicet, unam hidam terræ et dimidiam partem decimæ de Maneheafe, et totam decimam de Bradeuude. et omnem decimam de Carentuna quantum mihi inde pertinet, et totam decimam de Niwetuna, et dimidiam decimam de Brunfeld, et totam decimam de Stokelande, et totam de Kilvestune, et duo piscatoria, unum pertinens ad Dunesthorram, et aliud ad Carentunam, et totam decimam equarum mearum de moris. Et hæc omnia concedo supradictæ ecclesiæ de Bathonia, per consensum uxoris meæ Aðelisæ, ut ecclesiam B. Georgii præsul et monachi ejusdem ædificent et exaltent. Hujus beneficii sint etiam testes ex mea parte, Henricus de port, et Durandus dapifer, et Ogis, et Geoius, et Walterus de celsui, et Rodbertus flavus, et Gaufridus, et Rodbertus filii mei, et Wimundus frater meus, et Odo de altaribus, et Willelmus de hermodvilla, et Rodbertus filius Ricardi, et Hunfridus de petrepono, et Radulfus filius osberni, et Herebertus de Kent, et Ricardus flavus, et Picotus, et Engelram filius Ivelini, et Alexander de perceio. P. 101. 38. Willelmus, rex Anglorum, O., episcopo Saresbergensi, et T. abbatis Glestoniensi, et A. vicecomiti, omnibusque baronibus, francigenis et anglis, de Sumerseta et Wiltunscire salutem. Sciatis me dedisse Deo et S. Petro in Bathonia, et Iohanni episcopo, totam civitatem Bathoniæ in elemosinam, et ad augmentationem pontificalis sedis suæ, et omnibus successoribus suis, pro remedio animæ patris mei, matrisque meæ, et meiipsius, et antecessorum, vel successorum meorum. Dedi, inquam, ei ita libere ac honorifice cum omnibus appenditiis quicquid ibi habui, vel pater meus dum melius habuimus, cum omnibus consuetudinibus extra et infra, ut liberalius habeo civitatem in tota Anglia. cum moneta, cum thelonio, tam in campis quam in silvis, tam in foro quam in pratis, et in terris, ut cum maximo honore ibi pontificalem suam habeat sedem. Et ex hoc propalantur testes: Walchelinus Wintonensis episcopus. Rodbertus Lincoliensis episcopus. Rodbertus comes de Mellent. Henricus comes de Waruuc, Rodbertus filius Hamonis. Eudo dapifer. De Civitate Bathæ.

40. In nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti. Amen. Dominus et redemptor noster Ihesus Christus eo sanctam dilexit ecclesiam, ut eam suo sanguine redimeret, et suo spiritu insigniret, dilexit eam et sibi copulavit, et omnium virtutum vestibus adornavit. Ditavit eam muneribus, et coronavit diademate regni. Unde propheta, Astitit regina a dextris tuis in vestitu deaurato, circumdata varietate. Omnis gloria ejus filiæ regis abintus in fimbriis aureis, circumamicta varietate. Quod considerantes terræ reges et principes ad hujus reginæ obsequia convenerunt, et summi imperatoris exemplo qui eam interius illustrabat, exterius adornaverunt. Inde in jus ecclesiasticum terrena collata sunt bona, fiscus, et prædia, et quæcunque religiosæ mentes in sanctæ ecclesiæ officiis connumeraverunt utilia. Quod ego Henricus rex, Willelmi regis filius, considerans, ipse quoque huic reginæ servire studui, eamque rebus quas ab antecessoribus meis jure hereditario acceperam honoravi. Renovavi igitur donum quod fecerat frater meus Willelmus rex de civitate Bathoniæ, et eandem civitatem donavi deo et beato Petro apostolo suo, et Iohanni episcopo, cum omnibus consuetudinibus et appenditiis quæ ad ipsam pertinent civitatem. Constitui et concessi ut ibi deinceps sit caput et mater ecclesia totius episcopatus de Sumerseta. Hoc autem feci consilio primatum meorum, et intercessionem Iohannis episcopi, qui eo tempore episcopatum tenebat et regebat. Feci hoc pro anima mea, et patris mei, et matris meæ, et fratrum meorum, et antecessorum meorum, et successorum qui usque ad finem seculi futuri sunt. Facta est autem hæc donatio anno ab incarnatione domini M^o. C^o primo. Indictione ix^a Epact' nulla. Concurr' i^a. Præsente Mathilde regina, et viris illustribus, et principibus totius Angliæ, ecclesiasticis et sæcularibus, et ut hæc rata et in æternum perseverent, præsentē signo sanctæ crucis confirmo, et meæ regiæ potestatis sigillo corrobore .+.

De confirmatione sedis episcopatus Sumersetae in Batha.

P. 106. 43. Henricus, g. d. Anglorum rex, omnibus archiepiscopis, episcopis, comitibus, vicecomitibus, baronibus. et fidelibus suis, francis et anglis, totius regni Angliæ salutem. Notum sit vobis quod eam donationem quam donavi Deo et sancto Petro in Batha, ubi frater meus Willelmus et ego constituimus et confirmavimus sedem episcopatus totius Summersetae, quæ olim erat apud villam quæ dicitur Wella, scilicet ipsam urbem, et omnia pertinentia ad firmam ejusdem civitatis dono et confirmo ipsi domino nostro Ihesu Christo, et B. Apostolo ejus Petro, et Johanni episcopo, ejusque successoribus, jure perpetuo et hereditario. geld Dono etiam hidagium quod exigebatur de xx hidis ad eandem urbem pertinentibus, et omnia placita, et leges, et jus-titias, et omnes consuetudines omnino et adjectoria, et si qua sunt alia quæ pater meus, vel frater, vel ego ipse habuimus in ea, omnia plenarie et integre dono Deo, et concedo, et ecclesiæ ejusdem civitatis, et Johanni episcopo, ejusque successoribus, ut sit rata et perpetua elemosina pro anima mea, et conjugis meæ, ac filiorum meorum, necnon patris, ac matris, fratrumque meorum.

Testes. Hujus rei testes sunt: Rogerius Salesberiensis episcopus Willelmus Exoniensis, Willelmus Wintoniensis, Ricardus Londoniensis, Rodbertus Linconensis, Reinelmus Herefordensis, Herevius Eliensis, Rannulfus cancellarius, Johannes Baiocensis, Everardus, Bernardus capellanus, Grunbaldus medicus, Sýmon comes, Stephanus de Albamarla, Hamo dapifer, Gislebertus de Aquila, Gosfridus de Magnevilla, Thomas de sancto Johanne, Willelmus Pevrel de Dovra. Hæc carta confirmata fuit apud Waltham, Wintoniensis episcopi, a rege et regina. Anno ab Incarnatione domini. M.^oC.^o xi.^o vi.^o Idus Aug'. In transitu regis in Normanniam anno xii.^o regni sui.

Carta Roberti Ducis Normanniæ.

P. 107. 44. Rodbertus, dux Normanniæ, filius Willelmi regis, et frater Willelmi regis, necnon et Henrici regis, Anselmo archiepiscopo Cantuariensi, et omnibus episcopis, et baronibus Anglorum regni, salutem. Sciatis quod ego concedo donum quod fecerunt fratres mei Willelmus et Henricus rex Deo, et B. Petro, Apostolo suo, et Johanni episcopo, de civitate Bathoniæ, et de rebus quæ ad ipsam pertinent civitatem. Sit ratum concessione mea, et in æternum perseverans. Hoc autem facio pro anima mea, et patris, mei, et matris meæ, et antecessorum, et successorum meorum.

Carta Henrici Regis.

45. Henricus, d. g. rex Anglorum, Anselmo Cantuariensi archiepiscopo, et Girardo Eboracensi archiepiscopo, et Mauritio Londoniensi episcopo, et Rodberto Lincolniensi episcopo, et Samsoni Wigornensi episcopo, et Rodberto Cestrensi episcopo, et Osberno Exoniensi episcopo, et Gunnulfo Rofensi episcopo, et Hereveo Tedfordensi episcopo, et Herlewino abbati Glastoniensi, et Willelmo comiti Moritonæ, et Rodberto filio Haimonis, et Aiulfo camerario, omnibusque baronibus, francigenis et anglis, de Summerseta et de omni Anglia salutem. Sciatis me dedisse Deo et S. Petro in Bathonia, et Johanni episcopo, et omnibus successoribus suis, totam civitatem Bathoniæ in elemosinam, et ad augmentationem pontificalis sedis suæ, pro remedio animæ patris mei, matrisque meæ, et fratris mei, et mei ipsius, et antecessorum vel successorum meorum. Dedi inquam ei ita libere et honorifice, cum omnibus appenditiis quicquid ego ibi habui, vel pater meus, dum melius aut liberius habuimus, cum omnibus consuetudinibus extra et infra, ut liberalius habeo civitatem in totam Angliam, cum moneta, cum thelonio, tam in campis quam in silvis, tam in foro quam in pratis, et in terris, et in propriis domibus. Insuper concedo ei ferias in festivitibus S. Petri, ut cum maximo honore ibi pontificalem suam sedem habeat. Ex hoc enim proponantur testes: Mauricius Lundoniensis episcopus, Rodbertus Lincolniensis episcopus, Samson Wigorniensis episcopus, Henricus comes de Warwic, Rodbertus filius Haimonis, Urso de Abetot, Aiulfus camerarius, Willelmus de Albineio, Walterus Hosatus. Apud Bedintonam. In die apostolorum Petri et Pauli.

Carta Henrici Regis.

[This and the two following charters are printed by Warner.
App. xvi, xvii, xviii.]

46. Henricus, rex Anglorum, omnibus baronibus et ministris suis salutem. Præcipio et defendo super forisfacturam meam ne aliquis disturbet ministros monachorum de Batha si quid emerint ad opus eorum. Sed sint quieti de theloneo, et omni consuetudine, et habeant firmam pacem per totam terram meam.

Teste: episcopo Saresberia, apud Winton' per Walterum de Gloecestra.

Carta alia de eodem.

47. Henricus, rex Anglorum Justitiis, et omnibus vicecomitibus, et ministris, et præpositis totius Angliæ, et portuum maris, salutem. Præcipio quod totum corredium et omnes res monachorum Bathoniæ, quas homines eorum affidare poterint, se emere ad dominicum opus monachorum et ecclesiæ sint quietæ de theloneo, et passagio, et omni consuetudine. Et super hoc non disturbentur injuste super x. lib' forisfactura.

Teste : Rodberto de Ver. apud Chainsesham.

Carta ejusdem.

48. Henricus, rex Anglorum, Waltero de Gloec', et Warino, vicecomiti Summersetæ, et ministris suis, salutem. Præcipio quod totam terram et homines monachorum de Batha sint in pace et quieti de omnibus placitis, et querelis, et sciris, et hundredis, et omnibus aliis rebus, exceptis murdris et latrociniis dum fuerint in mea manu.

Testis : Nig' de Albin'. Apud Gloec'.

De Terra Grantæ in Stocha nord.

49. Mense junio in crastino festivitatis apostolorum Petri et Pauli. Residente in curia sua Bathæ Johanne episcopo, cum amicis et baronibus, qui simul ad diem festum venerant,

P. 109. delatæ sunt litteræ cum sigillo regio quarum forma hæc : Willelmus, filius regis Johanni, episcopo de Batha, salutem. Præcipio ut saisias Modbertum juste de terra quam tenuit Grenta de Stoca, sicut hereditavit eum in vita sua. Teste episcopo Salesberiensis.

Lectis litteris, episcopus dixit : Sicuti per has mihi litteras a filio domini mei mandatam est, fieri si tamen justum est, acquiesco. Vos, autem, vos amici mei et domini, qui propter apostolicum diem solenniter huic adestis curiæ, quid in hoc justius sit, discutere precor dignemini.

Ad hæc domnus prior, habito cum fratribus consilio, data diligenter ab omnibus audientia, sic locutus est : Quoniam quidem non nisi juste aliquid hic fieri neque rex, neque regis filius præcipit, et vobis tanquam viris bonis et jurisperitis, utrum justum sit quod præcipitur discutere committitur, quomodo se rei veritas habeat manifestius videbitis, si me breviter locuturum patienter audire velitis. Constat quidem quod terra hæc de qua nobis hic sermo oritur a diebus antiquis hujus sanctæ domus Domini fratribus in usus proprios et possessionem liberam data, nullius unquam mutatione regis, episcopi, vel abbatis, in jus militare transiit. Quod ipse Grenta, de cujus hereditate nunc agitur, moriens etiam non tacuit. Nam cum, nobis presentibus, domui suæ disponderet, et rei peculiaris partes nominatim divideret, secreto monitus a domesticis ut testamentum faciens publice sibi heredem substitueret, ait : Hæc est hereditas servorum Domini quam vice stipendii non hereditatis lege quoad viverem tenere permissus, ipsum me, cum terra, fratribus, quibus id juris est, nunc moriens relinquo. Hoc est quod fecit testamentum, et hæc verba illius novissima. Post quæ, vexatus per dies aliquot, monachus diem obiit. Præsentes hic etiam quosdam video, quos omnibus his interfuisse simul et audisse, gratissimum habeo. Surgentes ilico testes legitimi stantes in medio constanter assere-

P. 110. bant, se modis omnibus probaturos, eum ne uno quidem verbo veritatis preterisse vestigia. Carta nichilominus donationis antiquæ mox lecta est, quam Kenulfus, rex Saxonum, scribi præcepit, et manu propria signavit, consentientibus et annuentibus archiepiscopis, episcopis, abbatibus, et omnium dignitatum primatibus, ac ministris. Et ut ibi legebatur, eandem cartam signo crucis notantes, imprecati sunt in illum iram furoris domini, quicumque tam liberale christianissimi regis donativum, quocunque deteriorationis genere, pervertere presumpsisset in æternum. Lectis igitur et expositis quæ carta continere videbatur, rationationis jam dictæ veritas solidata est, aliis bona laudantibus, aliis ex adverso cumulantibus, illo precipue occlamante, qui se non minus procaciter quam mendaciter heredem contendebat esse justissime ; quippe qui filiã defuncti conjugem habuerit, adoptatus ab ejusdem patre dum viveret in filium ; patrem vero non stipendiariæ, ut oppositum est, sed libere potius et hereditariæ, terram de qua questio erat tenuisse.

Cumquæ diutius variis ab alterutrum contradictionibus causa protenderetur, dixit episcopus : Quia dies præterit, et ad nos alia spectant negotia, placet ut vos quos nec advocatos, nec partium fautores esse cognovimus, causam diligenter perpendentes, quo termino sopiri debeat judicetis. Secedentes ergo a turba qui majores natu, vel juris peritiores esse videbantur, singula juxta quod audierant subtiliter et discrete pensantes, causam dijudicaverunt. Quibus iterum introgressis, sic unius ore pro omnibus relatum est. Considerantes, inquit, totam hujus causæ circumstantiam, hoc diffinientes statuimus, ut heredem jure qui se nominat, id quod in assertionem suæ causæ paulo ante declamavit, testibus ad minus duobus de ecclesiæ familia liberis et legitimis

P. III. hodie nominatis, et octavo productis, vel cyrographo si defecerit, ne quidem audiatur in reliquum. Respondentibus ad hæc omnibus, dignum et justum est, calumpniator obtineat. A curia discessum est. Acta sunt hæc anno domini M.°C.° xxi° præsentibus et quod justum est approbantibus episcopis duobus Iohanne Bathensi, et Mauricio Hiberniensi, cum archidiaconis tribus, Iohanne Salesberienſe, et Girberto Bathensi, et Araldo, cum clericis pluribus et capellanis, Atselino Hosato, Girberto Rufo, Radulfo Lauduni, Henrico de Lidiard, Rodberto de Betuna.

Horum testes sunt : Patricius de Caurz, Hubertus de Sancta Susanna, Winebaldus de Baalun, Alexander de Alnoth, Reinaldus de Dunstanvilla, Giffardus de Salforda, Helias de Deingt', Thomas de Bacuuil', Rodbertus, Rogerus de Lamare, Willelmus dapifer, Item Willelmus.

Alia Carta.

50. Henricus, rex Anglorum, Episcopo de Batha salutem. Præcipio quod monachi de Batha ita bene et in pace et juste et honorifice teneant terram suam de Stoca, quam Grenta tenuit, sicut dirrationaverunt eam contra Modbertum per iudicium curiæ tuæ, ne super hoc amplius inde clamorem audiam. Et nisi feceris, Warinus vicecomes et Durandus de Moiu faciant fieri.

Teste episcopo Salesberienſe. Apud Westmonasterium.

Cyrographum inter Johannem episcopum et Hubertum hosatum.

51. Notum sit universis, tam præsentibus quam futuris. Hæc est conventio Iohannis episcopi et Huberti Hosed cognominati. Episcopus concessit ei ii. hidas terræ in Esctona in pheodo, quarum una est libera, et fuit terra tani, et altera de dominio, cotenus ut deserviat militari modo, videlicet cum armis Cyrographum inter Conbentum Bathæ et W. hosatum.

52. Hæc est conventio et concordia quam totus conventus Bathæ cum Willelmo hosato firmaverunt et consenserunt, in die qua reconciliatus est eis de omnibus causis quæ inter eos erant. Monachi concesserunt Willelmo ut libere et honorifice teneat et habeat totam terram quam pater suus die qua mortuus est de eis tenebat. Insuper, ii. acras ei dederunt, unam quæ dicitur acra præpositi, et alteram de Staberga, et tantum de sarto quantum pater ejus fecerat, ea pactione, ne amplius aliquid ibi augeat. Willelmus vero, suscepta per textum evangelii fraternitate, juravit monachis per eadem evangelia, quod verus amicus et fidelis eis esset in omnibus locis, sicut dominis suis, et quod plenariam decimam eis daret de omnibus suis, quæ ad decimam pertinent, in villa Escstone, et quod pro illa dimidia hida ulterius gildaret, cujus gildum ante injuste retinuerat. Reddidit etiam eis omnes præpusturas de quibus inter eos discordia et calumpnia erat. Conventioni quoque addidit quod serviet eis nominatim in omnibus placitis ad quæ convenienter submonitus erit, et ad defensionem totius villæ Escstonæ aderit in hundredis et scyris in quibus erit, quantum poterit. Facta est autem hæc concordia anno Incarnationis dominicæ M.°C.° xxiii° Die Martis x° Kal. Feb. in Capitulo Bathæ.

P. 113. 53. Ego Johannes, g. d. Bathoniensis episcopus, futuris post me episcopis, et omnibus ecclesiæ sanctæ filiis, salutem. Notum vobis facio quod ad honorem dei et S. Petri allaboravi, et ad effectum perduxì, cum decenti auctoritate, ut caput et mater ecclesia totius episcopatus de Summèrseta sit in urbe Bathonia in ecclesia S. Petri. Cui B. apostolo et servitoribus ejus monachis reddidi terras eorum quas aliquandiu injuste teneram in manu mea, ita integre et libere, sicut Alsius abbas ante me tenuit; et si quid melioravi vel acquisivi, et quicquid boni super ipsas habetur, totum reddidi potestati eorum. Donavi etiam eis ad supplementum victus et vestitus eorum, et ut augeretur conventus fratrum ibidem Deo servientium, et ad restaurandum thesaurum quem accepi de ecclesia, eas terras quas de labore meo acquisivi, et thesauro ecclesiæ emi, scilicet, v. hidas in Westona, quas emi a Patricio de Caurtia, et terram Hugolini cum barba, scilicet Clafertonam, Dochemesfeldam, et Estonam, et Herleiam, et Arnemudam super mare, et quicquid ad eas pertinet, et unam domum in Batha, et alteram in Wintonia. De urbe vero Bathonia quam primum rex Willelmus, et postea frater ejus rex Henricus donaverunt S. Petro pro elemosina sua, et propter meam deprecationem, hoc constitui, ut omnes redditus ponantur ad perficiendum novum opus quod incepti. Preterea quæcumque acquisivi in ornamentis ecclesiasticis, in cappis, in paliis, in cortinis, in dorsalibus, in tapetis, in crucibus, in textubus, in calicibus, in filacteriis, et quicquid de proprio addidi in capella episcopali, et plenarium armarium meum, pannos etiam meos, scifos et coclearia argentea, et omnem omnino suppellectilem domus meæ, perpetuo et hereditario jure donavi S. Petro et monachis ejus, pro Quicumque ergo hanc donationem meam infregerit, Dei, et sanctorum apostolorum Petri et Pauli, et omnium sanctorum, et mea quamvis peccatoris auctoritate, anathema sit. Acta sunt hæc anno ab Incarnatione Domini M.°C.° vi.° Regnante Henrico, filio magni Willelmi, Northamannorum ducis, et Anglorum regis. Anselmo archiepiscopo. Anno ordinationis nostræ nonodecimo. Indictione xiii^a.

Et ut rata et inconcussa permaneret hæc nostra constitutio, signo sanctæ Crucis eam manu mea .+ . confirmavi, et idoneos testes adhibui, quorum nomina sunt—Herevius episcopus, Herlewinus abbas Glast', Walkerius archidiaconus, Rodbertus archidiaconus, Girbertus archidiaconus, Agelbertus capellanus, Vitalis clericus, Walterus vicecomes,¹ Hildebertus dapifer, Tuoldus, Willelmus, Aðelardus filius Fastradi, et omnes alii milites et ministri mei qui affuerunt.

De Calberstona et Merc.

56. Henricus rex anglorum, Justiciariis, et vicecomitibus, et Baronibus, et omnibus fidelibus suis francis et anglis, de Sumer-seta, salutem. Sciatis me velle et concessisse deo et ecclesiæ Bathoniæ, et Godefrido episcopo, et successoribus suis, quod manerium de Calvestona, quod est abbatissæ sancti Eaduardi, sit in hundreto Bathoniæ, et in justitia episcopi Bathoniæ, cujus hundretum illud est, ita bene et plene et sicut esse solebat tempore Johannis episcopi Bathoniæ predecessoris sui. Et sciatis similiter me concessisse deo et ecclesiæ de Wellis, et Godefrido præfato episcopo, et successoribus ejus, terram de Merc, quæ est in Wedtmora, quæ calumpniata fuerat debere esse de dominio meo. Et volo et firmiter precipio ut Godefridus episcopus, et ecclesia sua de Wellis, eam inconcusse et illibate possideant, sicut Johannes episcopus predecessor ejus unquam melius et liberius tenuit, cum omnibus libertatibus et consuetudinibus suis.

De Cumba.

P. 116. 57. Anno incarnationis dominicæ M.° C.° xxx.° vi.°
 Ego Godefridus, dei gratia Bathensis episcopus, instinctu dei et consilio virorum religiosorum ecclesiæ nostræ fidelium, reddidi monachis in eadem ecclesia manentibus villam de Cumba cum omnibus ad eam pertinentibus, liberam prorsus et quietam ab omni servitio et consuetudine, excepto hoc quod ad regem pertinet. Hoc autem feci pro remedio animæ meæ, et pro salute, et pace, et remissione peccatorum piissimi regis Henrici, qui mihi gratuita munificentia sua post canonicam electionem episcopatum dedit, et antecessoris mei Johannis. Hanc donationem, vel potius redditionem; fratres enim supra dicta fuisse sui juris eandem terram plurimorum testimoniis et cartis antiquorum regum constanter affirmabant; hanc, ut dixi, donationem super altare posui, patrocinia sanctorum apostolorum, et reliquiarum quæ nobis ibi præ oculis erant in adiutorium meum suppliciter implorans, et in ultionem eorum, qui hoc violare presumpserint, astantibus et laudantibus, Johanne archidiacono, Araldo archidiacono, Willelmo priore Tantonix, Alberto, et Henrico, et Johanne, canonicis de Well', Algaro et Rannulfo presbiteris, et Walterio et R. de Bocland, clericis, Atselino hosato dapifero, Willelmo de Moione, Rodberto de Gornaco, Ernaldo de Baalun, Gocewino cunestabulo, Rothardo camerario, Willelmo hosato, Rogerio filio viviani, Rodberto de Cahinesham, Rodberto de Wigorn'.

De episcopatu Bathæ.

60. Stephanus, rex Anglorum, archiepiscopis, episcopis, abbatibus, comitibus, vicecomitibus, baronibus, et omnibus fidelibus suis per totam Angliam constitutis, salutem. Sciatis me dedisse et concessisse Rodberto, episcopo Bathoniaë, episcopatum Bathoniaë, in terris et hominibus, in dominiis et feodis, in omnibus rebus aliis ad episcopatum pertinentibus, canonica prius electione precedente, et communi vestro consilio, voto, et favore prosequente. Quare volo et præcipio, quod bene, et in pace, et honorifice, et quiete, et libere teneat præfatus episcopus, in bosco et plano, in pratis et pasturis, in via et semitis, in molen-dinis et esclusis, in vivariis et piscariis, in mareis et stagnis, in

P. 118. parcis et fugatiis, in divisis et forestis, in feriis et mercatis, in aquis et extra, in burgis et civitatibus et extra, in omnibus rebus et omnibus locis, cum socna et saca, cum toll et theam, et infangenetheof, cum omnibus consuetudinibus, et libertatibus, et quietationibus, et omnibus rebus aliis, cum quibus ecclesia sua, et episcopus Johannes, vel aliquis predecessorum suorum episcoporum, unquam liberius et plenius et quietius tenuit, tempore meorum predecessorum regum Anglorum. Audientibus et collaudantibus omnibus fidelibus meis hic subscripsi. Apud Westmonasterium in generalis consilii celebratione, et paschalis festi solennitate hoc actum est.

anos earum canonice ponat et removeat. Præter hæc autem, dei instinctu, et bonorum virorum consilio et interventu, reddidi eis terram de Suðstoca, ad supplementum victus et vestitus eorum, ita liberam et quietam ab omni servitio et consuetudine sicut ego unquam vel antecessores mei liberius et quietius tenuimus illam. scribat Annui quoque illis et molendinum facere juxta viridarium meum, et de salinis meis dedi eis xx. summas salis singulis annis, pro salute et memoria Johannis episcopi qui illas procuravit. Hanc vero donationem prædictorum beneficiorum in dedicatione altaris quod dedicavi in honore et veneratione sanctæ Trinitatis obtuli deo et sancto Petro, coram omni populo et clero, et sigilli mei impressione roboravi et confirmavi.

P. 120. Precor autem omnes qui mihi in regimine hujus ecclesiæ successuri sunt ut hanc donationem et oblationem sua etiam auctoritate confirmet et corroborent, quatinus dignam inde mercedem a deo percipiant. Et si quis super hæc predictis fratribus aliquid de suis possessionibus largitus fuerit et res ecclesiæ adauerit, dominus deus amplificet illum in regno suo, et pro bonis temporalibus præmia æterna illi rependat. Acta sunt hæc coram testibus iis, Symone, abbate de Eðdelingia, Ivone, decano de Well', Eustachio, Martino, et Hugone, archidiaconis meis, Martino, priore de Glastonia, Willelmo, priore de Tanton, Stephano canonico, cognato meo, Hamundo et Ricardo fratribus meis, Rodberto de Fluri, et Ivone, militibus meis, et multis aliis.

Carta Stephani Regis.

62. Stephanus, rex Anglorum, Rodberto episcopo Bathoniæ salutem. Præcipio quod monachi de Bathonia ita bene et in pace et juste et honorifice teneant terram suam de Stocha quam Grenta tenuit, sicut eam disrationaverunt contra Rodbertum per iudicium curiæ Johannis episcopi, ne super hac ulla fiat eis inde disturbatio. Et nisi feceris, justitia mea faciat. Teste Rodberto de Ver. Apud Goldnitonam.

ecclesiæ filiis et fidelibus salutem. Pastoralis sollicitudo officii nos compellit omnium eorum maxime quos religionis nomen commendat quieti providere, et quæ eis in domino collata sunt beneficia nostræ auctoritatis patrocinio confirmare, et confirmata inviolabiliter conservare. Inde est quod omnia beneficia ecclesiæ apostolorum Petri et Pauli Bathoniensi juste et canonice a quibuscunque fidelibus collata, sive ecclesiastica sive mundana, et ab episcopo ejusdem loci Rodberto confirmata, ipsi ecclesiæ et fratribus in ea Christo militantibus in perpetuum possidenda confirmamus, et presentis scripti nostri testimonio communimus. Ipsas autem possessiones quas in præsentia possident propriis dignum duximus exprimere nominibus,

P. 121. videlicet, v. hidas in Westona, villam de Cumba, et decimam vineæ de Lincumba, capellas monachorum tam Bathon' quam alibi sitas, ecclesiam quoque de Forda, ecclesiam de Estona, et terram etiam de Suðstocha, et molendinum juxta virgultum episcopi, et salinarum episcopi xx. summas salis singulis annis, duas virgatas terræ, unam apud Cerdrum, alteram apud Evercriz. Hæc ergo omnia cum cæteris omnibus quæ legitime adquisiverunt, vel futuris adipisci temporibus rationabilibus modis poterint, in pace et summa libertate possidenda concedimus, sicut venerabilis frater noster Rodbertus, Bathon' episcopus, eis concessit et carta sua confirmavit, sicut carta ipsius testatur. Valet.

Carta Teobaldi archiepiscopi.

64. Teobaldus, dei gratia Cant' archiepiscopus, et totius Britanniæ primas. Omnibus sanctæ matris ecclesiæ filiis, tam clericis quam laicis, tam præsentibus quam futuris, salutem. Noverit universitas vestra, quam priori et monachis Bathoniensis ecclesiæ concedimus et confirmamus omnes terras, et capellarum donationes, aliasque possessiones, quas venerabilis frater noster Rodbertus, Bathon' episcopus, in dedicatione altaris sanctæ Trinitatis eis dedit, aut ab aliis prius datas confirmavit, sicut confirmationis suæ carta, quam oculis nostris conspeximus, testatur. Confirmamus quoque eis ecclesiam de Baentona, cum capellis, et omnibus eis adjacentibus, videlicet, de Petetona, de Donningestona, de Deopeforð, de Lasela, et dimidium decimæ de Kari de donatione Rodberti de Baentonia ; Ecclesiam quoque de Broctona, et v. virgatas terræ in Foxcumba, de donatione Girardi dapiferi Walteri patris Rodberti, sicut venerabilis frater noster Willelmus Exoniensis episcopus eis illas concessit, et carta sua confirmavit. Iccirco volumus et præcipimus ut prædictæ ecclesiæ monachi prædictas possessiones in perpetua pace et quiete possideant et habeant, et ne quis eas inquietare, vel eis molestiam vel injuriam aliquam presumat sub anathemate interdicimus. Valet.

De Dunest'.

P. 122. 65. Teobaldus, dei gratia Cant' archiepiscopus, Anglorum primas, et apostolicæ sedis legatus, omnibus sanctæ matris ecclesiæ fidelibus per episcopatum Bathoniensem constitutis salutem. Ea quæ a venerabilibus fratribus nostris episcopis seu principibus ecclesiis et locis religiosis in elemosinam misericordiæ intuitu conferuntur, ut eisdem locis inconvulsa et inutilata perseverent, merito sunt auctoritatis nostræ munim[is]ne roboranda. Ea igitur ratione inducti, inspectis etiam cartis dominorum fundi et honoris de Dunestorra, et confirmatione memoriæ Anselmi, Cant' archiepiscopi, et illustris regis Anglorum Willelmi ruffi, quæ ecclesiam de Dunestorra, cum omnibus ad eam pertinentibus, terris, decimis, et capellis, in liberam elemosinam monachis Bathoniensibus esse concessam et datam astruebant, eisdem monachis confirmamus ecclesiam prenominatam cum terris et decimationibus de Karentona, et Stocheland, et Kalvetona, et Avelhāme, et Stantonā, et dimidiam decimam Menchafæ, et dimidiam decimam Exefordæ, et cæteris eis jure adjacentibus, et præsentis scripti patrocínio corroboramus. Auctoritate itaque qua fungimur inhibemus ne quis ecclesiam Bathoniensem vel monachos in ea jugem deo famulatum exhibentes, super ecclesia de Dunestorra, quæ eis in liberam elemosinam auctoritate sancti Anselmi Cant' archiepiscopi confirmata est, et regiis cartis corroborata, temere presumat inquietare, vel ullam attemptet inferre molestiam. Quod si quis attemptaverit injuste, dei omnipotentis indignationem et nostram se noverit incursum. Valet.

De Ceorlecumba.

66. Rodbertus, dei gratia episcopus Bathoniæ, universis ad episcopatum suum pertinentibus dei benedictionem et suam. Notum sit omnibus vobis quod querelam monachorum Bathæ quam adversus Atselinum Hosatum habebant pro terra de Ceorlecumba, de quinquaginta salmonibus quos annuatim fratribus pro ipsa terra reddidisse debuerat, idem

P. 123. Atselinus veram et rationabilem esse coram multis et honestis personis recognovit. Et de eo quod injuste eos detinuerat, quos facta conventionem aliquando reddiderat, se reum confessus est, heredibusque suis præcepit quatinus monachis de non redditis piscibus vice sui satisfacerent, reddendos vero annuatim certis terminibus sicut firmam reddere non differrent, salvo militari servitio. Susceptum itaque est ab heredibus jubentis imperium, et cum satisfactione injuncta pro annuo tenore. annuatim reddendus predictorum promittitur. piscium numerus. Hæc itaque me præsentem, et inter utrasque partes mediante, apud Batham acta sunt. Et ne futuris temporibus aliqua controversia de præsentem negotio emergat rem totam vobis veraciter denuntio, ut et vos, si aliquando necesse fuerit, testimonium perhibeatis veritati. Testes etiam hujus rei sunt mecum clerici mei, Eustachius archidiaconus, Stephanus canonicus, Magister Aluredus. Milites: Ivo, Rodbertus de Wigornia, Hugo frater ejus, Willelmus de Evercrich, Ricardus de Strettuna. Burgenses: Ernaldus præpositus, Hathewlfus, Reinerius, Edricus clericus, Rannulfus, et Rodbertus frater ejus, et plures alii.

De Camelesta.

67. Willelmus, comes Glocestriæ, omnibus amicis suis et fidelibus et baronibus et hominibus, francis et anglis, salutem. Notum sit vobis quod Alexander de Alno, et sui fratres, et Beatrix eorum mater, dederunt ecclesiæ sancti Petri, et monachis de Batha, Chameleiam suam manerium in elemosinam et feodo, totum, liberum, et quietum, in perpetuo, a se et ab omnibus coheredibus suis et successoribus. Et pro hoc dono et concessione dederunt prædicti monachi illis sexaginta et decem marcas argenti, et dominæ Beatrici matri Alexandri et suorum fratrum invenient monachi procurationem duorum monachorum cotidie, et procurationem duobus ejus servientibus, quamdiu vixerit, et singulis annis P. 124. duas marcas argenti ad se vestiendam. Et ad opus ecclesiæ sancti Petri et monachorum de Batha ipse Alexander, fratres, et mater, reddiderunt prædictum manerium in manu mea liberum et quietum ab omni calumpnia et exactione, sua spontanea voluntate, precantes me humiliter ut hoc eorum donum concederem et confirmarem. Ego vero, pro dei amore, et Rodberti Bathoniæ episcopi petitu et honore, et meæ animæ et predecessorum et amicorum meorum salute, concessi ecclesiæ et monachis idem manerium per sextam partem servitii unius militis, quod mihi inde monachi facient et meis heredibus, et de eodem manerio monachos saisivi. Præterea quoque Alexander, fratres, et mater, fide sua interposita, etiam cum juramento, in mei presentia, se predictum donum et conventionem inviolabiliter observaturos confirmaverunt. Ego quoque sigilli mei munimine eadem corroboravi. Teste, H. Comitissa Gloecestræ, Martino archidiacono, Albino decano, Helia Giffardo, Hamone Gaufridi filio, Huberto, et Rodberto de Almeri dapifero, Thoma presbitero, Gregorio, Rodberto de Bonesboz, Willelmo filio Henrici, Ernaldo de Baalon, Rodberto de Hornai, Ricardo de Leuffremonte, Rodberto de Wigornia, Ivone militibus. Acta sunt hæc anno ab Incarnatione domini Millesimo centesimo quinquagesimo tertio.

Carta Henrici Ducis Normanniæ de Cameleia.

68. Henricus, dux Normanniæ et Aquitaniæ, et comes Andegavensis, omnibus archiepiscopis, episcopis, comitibus, baronibus, justitiis, vicecomitibus, et omnibus fidelibus et amicis suis, francis et anglis, salutem. Sciatis me concessisse et confirmasse ecclesiæ beati Petri de Bathonia, et monachis ibidem deo servientibus manerium de Cameleia cum omnibus pertinentiis suis, sicut Beatricia mater Alexandri de Alnoio, et ipse Alexander, et P. 125. fratres ejus illud monachis prædictis vendiderunt, et in elemosinam perpetuam concesserunt, et sicut carta Willelmi comitis Gloecestræ, coram quo manerium illud eis fuit concessum ab Alexandro, et fratribus suis, et matre sua, testatur. Quare volo, et firmiter præcipio ut ecclesia prædicta et monachi manerium illud bene et in pace, libere, quiete, et honorifice teneant in perpetuum, cum omnibus pertinentiis suis, in bosco in plano, in pratis in pascuis, in viis in semitis, in molendinis, et in omnibus rebus. Teste Reginaldo comite Cornubiæ, Willelmo comite Glocestriæ, Manserio Bisot dapifero, Guarino filio Geroldi, camerario. Apud Rothomagum.

Carta Henrici II. Regis Angliæ.

69. Henricus, rex Anglorum, et dux Normanniæ, et Aquitaniæ, et comes Andegavensis, archiepiscopis, episcopis, abbatibus, comitibus, baronibus, justitiis, vicecomitibus, et omnibus fidelibus et amicis suis, francis et anglis, salutem (et cetera, word for word as in the foregoing charter). Teste, Thoma cancellario, Reginaldo comite Cornubiæ, Ricardo de Hum', conest', Manserio Biset dapifero. Apud Sarum.

De una bingata terræ de Beche (see Note).

P. 126. 70. Hæc est conventio quam Rodbertus episcopus et prior ac totus conventus Bathoniæ fecerunt cum Ricardo de Hanum. Ricardus tenet unam virgatam terræ de Escsentona, pro qua debet priori .v. solidos pro omni servitio per annum, et erga omnes submonitiones regias eam adquietabat. Quod si ille vel alius qui per eum manserit ibi forisfecerit, in curia prioris, iudicio parium suorum, rectum dijudicetur, et omnino terminetur. Ad instaurandum vero eandem terram licet quod habeat in pastura .viii. boves et .l. oves. Et episcopus atque prior habebunt rivagium et transitum libere et quiete in terra Ricardi de omnibus rebus suis dominicis. Ricardus vero dedit .i. marcam argenti, et .i. summam vini priori et toti conventui quando fecit pactum istud tali conditione, ut ipse et heredes sui illam terram præfatam prædicta pactione de priore et conventu in feodeo et hereditate libere in perpetuum teneant; quod ei et heredibus suis concessum est. Et ille qui succedet ei in hereditatem dabit priori et toti conventui de relevatione ejusdem terræ dimidiam unciam auri, et teneat eodem modo quo Ric' ante tenuerat. Horum testes sunt, Eustachius archidiaconus, Magister Aluredus, Ricardus de Bettona, Rad' de Escsentona, Thomas de sancto Laudo, Walterus de Abbedestona, et Rodbertus frater ejus, Rannulfus forestarius, Selida, Ricardus minister. Et milites episcopi: Willelmus Hosatus, Rodbertus de Wirecestra, Ivo, et plures alii.

Epistola Roberti III Exon'. episcopi.

71. Rodbertus, dei gratia Exoniensis episcopus, dilectis fratribus Benedicto, priori de Batha, et conventui ibidem deo servienti, salutem et gratiam. Intimavit nobis præsentium lator, Walterus clericus vester et noster, quod dimiseritis ei, sicut inter vos convenit, ecclesiam vestram de Baantona. Quod gratum habemus, et gratias referimus, tum quia eum in præceptis nostris obedientem, P. 127. tum quia in agendis nostris admodum sollicitum semper invenimus, tum præcipue quia vobis et ecclesiæ vestræ obedientem et fidelem æstimamus. Preces itaque vobis pro eo porrigimus, subnixæ postulantes, quatinus nostri amoris gratia, si placet, conventionem super ecclesia prædicta inter vos habitam irritam non faciatis, sed ratam et incusam permanere permittatis, dum vobis et ecclesiæ vestræ inde obediens et fidelis extiterit. Nos autem, si forte de eo dubitatis, quod absit, coercimus eum, ut clericum nostrum, justitia nostra, fore vobis obediturum. Et sciatis quia si possemus ecclesiam vestram Bathæ et ecclesiam illam Baantonæ amore ipsius Walteri, et ampliori gratia fovemus, et diligentiori subsidio juvaremus, quod pro viribus nostris exequi parati sumus. Valete.

P. 130. 74. Adrianus episcopus, servus servorum dei, venerabili in Christo fratri R., dei gratia Bathoniensi episcopo, salutem et apostolicam benedictionem. Officii nostri nos hortatur auctoritas et invitat fratrum nostrorum episcoporum quieti diligenti studio providere ipsorumque perturbationibus petræ apostolicæ soliditatem opponere. Ea propter, venerabilis in Christo frater Roberte episcopo, tuis justis postulationibus gratum impertientes assensum, ecclesiam Beati Petri Bathoniensis monasterii, cui auctore deo preesse dinosceris, sub Beati Petri et nostra protectione suscipimus, et presentis scripti privilegio communimus. Statuentes ut quascunque possessiones, quæcunque bona eadem ecclesia in præsentia[?] juste et canonice possidet, aut in futurum concessione pontificum, largitione regum vel principum, oblatione fidelium, seu aliis justis modis, deo propitio, poterit adipisci, firma tibi tuisque successoribus et illibata permaneant. In quibus hæc propriis duximus exprimenda vocabulis: Abbatiam Sancti Petri Bath' a bonæ recordationis Willelmo, et Henrico fratre ejus, quondam regibus Angliæ, Sumersetensi episcopatu ad ejus augmentacionem et ad transferendam in civitatem Bathoniæ, atque in eandem pariter abbatiam presuleam sedem per cartulam donationis traditam, cum omnibus appendiciis suis, tam in civitate quam in villis, et in consuetudinibus illis quibus seisiata erat ea die qua idem Willelmus rex suscepit regni administrationem, Lincumbam, Sudstocam, Cumbam, Pristonam, Evesciam, Welmendonam, Stantonam, Corstonam, Eswicam, Cameleyam, Ælvestonam, Æistonam, in Westona quinque hidas, Nordstocam, Cherlecumbam, in Estona hidam et dimidiam, Fordam, Hamtonam, Wudewicam, ecclesiam de Bantona, ecclesiam de Dunestorra, ecclesiam de Brigge, cum omnibus pertinentiis suis, civitatem Bathoniæ, cum omnibus pertinentiis ad firmam ejusdem civitatis, sicut a bonæ memoriæ Henrico, quondam rege Angliæ, in elemosina ecclesiæ tuæ, jure perpetuo et hereditario donata esse, dinoscitur et per cartam eadem donatio confirmata, cum omnibus placitis, legibus, justiciis, omnibusque consuetudinibus ipsius civitatis et adjutoriis, foro, theloneo, et nundinis in utroque festo Beati Petri, et justiciis totius hundredi ejusdem civitatis, hydagio quoque de xx^{ti} hidis ad eandem urbem pertinentibus. Quas utique donationes superius annotatas, et translationem presuleæ sedis, auctoritate apostolica tibi et per te ecclesiæ tuæ firmiter roboramus, et perpetuis temporibus inconcussas, decernimus permanere; præterea Clafertonam, in Estona quatuor hidas, Dochemeresfeldam, Salinas in nova foresta quæ dicuntur Hernemuda, in Westona quinque hidas in quibus est ecclesia. Decernimus ergo ut nulli omnino liceat præfatam ecclesiam temere perturbare, aut bona ejusdem vel possessiones auferre, vel ablatiis retinere, minuere, seu aliquibus vexationibus fatigare. Sed omnia integra conserventur eorum, pro quorum gubernatione et sustentatione concessa sunt, usibus omnimodis profutura. Salva nimirum in omnibus apostolicæ sedis auctoritate. Si qua igitur in posterum ecclesiastica secularisve persona contra hanc constitutionis nostræ paginam temere venire temptaverit, secundo terciove commonita, si non satisfactione congrua emendaverit, potestatis honorisque sui dignitate careat, reaque se divino judicio existere de perpetrata iniquitate cognoscat, et a sacratissimo corpore et sanguine dei et domini redemptoris nostri Ihesu Christi aliena fiat, atque in extremo examine districtæ ultioni subjaceat. Cunctis autem eidem ecclesiæ jura servantibus sit pax domini nostri Ihesu Christi, quatinus et hic fructum bonæ actionis percipiant, et apud districtum judicem præmia æternæ pacis inveniant. Dat' Beneventi xii. Kal. Febr., per manum Rolandi.

75. Sciant tam presentes quam futuri quod Ego Benedictus, prior Bathon' ecclesiæ, et totus ejusdem loci conventus, recognovimus jus Willelmi fratris nostri quod ex parte Wlwini clamat, scilicet, dimidiam hidam terræ apud Weston, quam prædictus Willelmus tenuit cum omnibus pertinentiis, in buscis in planis, in pratis in pascuis, in feudo et hereditate, sibi et heredibus suis, de ecclesia Beati Petri Bathon' tenendam. Ita quod prædictus Willelmus coram omnium monachorum capitulo proximum illum recognovit heredem, libere et quiete ab omni servitio, salvo servitio regali, reddendo annuatim xii. solidos et vi. nummos prædictæ ecclesiæ. Hæc sunt autem pertinentiæ, scilicet .vii. boves, et quatuor vaccas habere in pascuis Beati Petri cum ipsius bovibus et vaccis, et centum oves cum ipsius ovibus. Hæc recognitio facta est communi totius conventus favore dono sex marcarum ad cartam suam confirmandam. Ad ista vero confirmanda hii sunt testes: Alex. de Munforð, Rob. frater suus, et Rob. filius suus, Henr'. filius suus, Godefr. Hosatus, Rad. rufus, Walt. de Wik', Will. Hosatus, Asketillus de Churton, Aluredus monetarius, Rob. Viviani. Datum Beneventi, xii. Kal. Febr. per manum Rolandi, presbiteri cardinalis et cancellarii. Anno gratiæ M^o. C^o. l^o. v^o. pont' domini Adriani papæ quarti anno secundo.

P. 131. 76. Hæc est conventio facta inter Thomam priorem et conventum Bathon' ex una parte, et Eliam Cotel ex altera, anno domini Millesimo ducentesimo quinquagesimo octavo, videlicet, quod dictus Elias pro salute animæ suæ, antecessorum et successorum suorum, in puram et perpetuam elemosinam, pro se, et heredibus suis, vel assignatis suis, remisit et quietum clamavit omne jus et clamentiam quod habuit, vel aliquo casu contingente habere potuit, in pasturam quæ est ex occidentali parte de Southwode, in manerio de Prisshtona, quæ quidem pastura a divisione campi ejusdem manerii et Lemmannesfeld directe se extendit usque ad vetus fossatum quod est ex opposito anguli australis ejusdem bosci, sicut per sex homines ex utraque parte juratos divisum est. Ita quod dicti prior et conventus dictam pasturam pro voluntate eorum includant, quod dictus Elias nec homines sui pro defectu clausi dampnum incurrant. Præterea concessit eisdem priori et conventui ab Horestone rationabilem viam quancumque voluerint ad averia sua dictam pasturam intranda et exeunda, ita quod dicta averia per nimiam moram faciendo dictam viam non pascant. In hujus vero conventionis securitatem presentibus cirographis sigilla sua divisim apposuerunt. Hiis testibus, Domino de Palton', Nicholao de Littelton', Waltero Balun, Roberto de Littelton', Rogero de Whittockesmede, Ricardo de Ekewike, Willelmo le ffrankeleyn de Cridelyncote, et aliis.

Dr. Skeat, Professor of Anglo-Saxon in the University of Cambridge, while most kindly correcting the proofs of those parts of the C.C.C. MS. Register that are written in Anglo-Saxon, noted some errors in Thorpe's Diplomatarium and Mr. W. de Gray Birch's Cartularium Saxonicum, and has sent the following list of them to be printed in this volume:—

- Page 4, line 4 from bottom, þeodwold; Thorpe has þeodred.

Notes to Calendar of C.C.C.C. MS.

The figures refer to the numbers affixed to the documents calendered in the text.

No. 1. Walter, prior, see Lincoln's Inn MS., Nos. 37, 127, with notes. Matilda, see ib. No. 124 with note. bercaria, a farm. St. Catherine, four miles north-east of Bath, belonged to the convent, and still has a fine grange built by prior John Cantlow. grava, a copse, or grove. Chermerdune, i.e. Charny Down, near St. Catherine. averia, beasts. affros, horses used in agriculture. Alexander Hose, see post and Lincoln's Inn MS., Nos. 9 with n, 345, 365. in defenso, that part of an open space allotted for growing hay or corn, and on which there was therefore no right of common, was said to be "in defenso," enclosed land, in whatever way it was divided from the rest.

No. 2. Theodobaldus, i.e. Theobald, Abbot of Bec, consec. Abp. of Canterbury, Jan. 8, 1139, d. April 18, 1161. Exaltatio S. Crucis, Sept. 14. Robert, consec. Bp. of Bath 1136, d. Aug. 31, 1166. Cluanensis, i.e. Clonmacnoise; no Mark is given either by Ware or Cotton among the bishops of that see in the twelfth century, but the succession is somewhat uncertain.

No. 3. Nicholaus, i.e. Nicolas ap Gurgant, bp. of Llandaff, consec. at Canterbury, May 14, 1148, d. July, 1183, see Gervase (Rolls Ser.), II., 358. S. Werburga, i.e. Werburh, daughter of Wulfhere, King of the Mercians, and St. Eormenhild, who was the daughter of Earconberht, King of Kent, by his queen, St. Sexburga, or Sexburh, entered religion on the death of her father in 675, and was appointed by her uncle Æthelred, Wulfhere's successor, to rule over certain convents of nuns. In one of these at Trent-ham, Staffordshire, she is said to have died, and to have been buried in another at Hanbury, also in Staffordshire. Her day is Feb. 3, see Florence of Worc. (Eng. Hist. Soc.), I., 32, 265; Will. of Malmes, Gesta Pontiff (Rolls Ser.), pp. 308, 309.

No. 4. On this interesting union for prayer, see Freeman Norman Cong. IV., 387. Wulfstan, prior of Worcester, consec. Bp. of Worcester, Sept. 8, 1062, d. Jan. 18, 1095, see Freeman, u. s. II., III., IV., passim. Ægelwig, or Æthelwig, a monk of Evesham, left by Ealdred in charge of the see of Worcester in 1054, consec. abbot in 1059, a candidate for the see of Worcester in 1062, d. 1077, of noble birth and great prudence, see Hist. Evesham., (Rolls Ser.) pp. 87, 95; Vita Wlstan, ap. Anglia Sacra, II., 251; Norman Cong. II., III., IV., passim. Evesham was founded by St. Ecgwin, Bp. of Worcester, cir. 701. Wulfwold, Abbot of Chertsey, Surrey, d. 1084; A.-S. Chron. sub an. Chertsey was founded by St. Erkenwald, Bp. of London, d. 693, see Bede, Hist. Eccles. IV., c. 6. Ælfsige, Abbot of Bath, see postea, d. 1087, see Florence of Worc. sub an. Eadmund, Abbot of Pershore, Worcestershire, succeeded apparently in 1072, d. June 15, 1085, "eximiae vir probitatis et venerationis," Florence sub an. Pershore is said to have been founded by Oswald, nephew of Æthelred, King of the Mercians, in 689, Monasticon II., 415. Ralph, Abbot of Winchcombe, Gloucestershire, succeeded in 1077, d. 1095, Monasticon II., 298. Winchcombe was founded by Cenwulf, King of the Mercians, see Will. of Malmes., Gesta Pontiff. (Rolls Ser.), p. 294. Serlo, Abbot of Gloucester, succeeded 1072, previously a monk of Mt. St. Michel, and a chaplain of the Conqueror; he built the eastern portion of his church, d. March 4, 1104, Hist. Mon. Glouc. (Rolls Ser.) I., 1-7; Orderic (Duchesne), Hist. 781; Florence of Worc. an. 1104; Norman Cong., IV., 389, W. Rufus, II., 318. Gloucester, like Bath, is said to have been founded by King Osric, see n. to No. 7. Dean, i.e. prior. Ælfstan, brother of Bp. Wulfstan. Godric, Abbot of Evesham, in conjunction with Æthelwig.

In the last clause of the bond we get, with the names of the abbot and seventeen of the brethren of Bath, those of a monk of Malmesbury and of Taunton. A comparison of the dates of Abbots Ralph and Æthelwig fixes the date of this bond as early in 1077.

No. 5. Dydddenham, i.e. Tidenham, Gloucestershire, scarcely two miles north-east of Chepstow. It partly belonged to the convent T. R. E., see Domesday, Glouc., p. 165, though Stigand had a life-hold interest, see No. 15; Atkyns's Gloucestershire, p. 405. Edwie, succeeded to the throne 955, d. 959. Mansæ, i.g. hides. The original signification of the hide is an "occupation," or single-holding, the land that would be sufficient for a family; it came to signify an area for rating purposes, and its dimensions varied. istis tribus, for the trinoda necessitas, see Stubbs, Const. Hist. I., 76, 95. Edgar in 958 "King of the Mercians, Northumbrians, and Britons," succeeded his brother Edwy in 959, d. July 8, 975, and buried at Glastonbury. Oda, by parentage a Dane, consec. Bp. of Ramsbury 927? transl. to Canterbury 942, d. June 2, 959. Ælfsine, or Ælfsige, consec. Bp. of Winchester 951, elect to Canterbury, and d. on the Alps 959, see Memorials of St. Dunstan (Rolls Ser.), pp. 37, 38, 107. Byrthelm, or Brit-helm, consec. Bp. of London 951? d. 953. Cenwald, Bp. of Worcester, d. probably 957, when he was succeeded by Dunstan, see Memorials of St. Dunstan, pref. p. xci. Oscytel, consec. Bp. of Dorchester 950, transl. to York 958 (Registrum Sac. Anglic.), d. Nov. 1, 971. Osulf, Bp. of Ramsbury, d. 970, Florence sub an. Byrthelm, Bp. of Somerset, had been a monk of Glastonbury, elect. bp. 956, elect. to Canterbury 959, but rejected by King Edgar, d. 973, and buried at Wells, Florence, I., 139, 143. Wulf-sige, succ. Bp. of Sherborne 943, d. 958. Ælfwold, Bp. of Crediton 953,

d. 972, Florence sub ann. Daniel, according to Bp. Stubbs, Bp. either of Rochester or Selsey in 955-959. Æthelstan, or Ælfstan, son of Æthelred, and descended from Æthelred, brother of Alfred, is called the "Half King"; he was ealdorman of East Anglia, appears as "primarius dux" in the reign of Edmund, was a friend of Dunstan, and a great supporter of the monks. He resigned his office and became a monk, see Memorials of St. Dunstan, p. 44; Hist. Rames. (Rolls Ser.), pp. 11, 12; Robertson, Essays, p. 179; Dict. of Natl. Biogr. XVII., 35. Edmund, or Edmund, married Æthelflæd, a daughter of Ælfgar, ealdorman of the East Saxons, and perhaps ruled some part of his father-in-law's government, though Brithnoth, the husband of Ælfgar's other daughter was certainly ealdorman. Elfhære, ealdorman of the Mercians, and after the death of Edgar, head of the anti-monastic party, d. 983. Æthelsige, third son of Æthelstan (vide supra), by his wife Ælfwen, foster-mother of King Edgar (Hist. Rames., p. 11), was perhaps that "enemy of God and the people," on whom Ethelred the Unready, in 998, laid the blame of his evil doings (Kemble, C.D., No. 700), and an outlaw who deserted to the Welsh in 993, see Ann. Camb. sub an.; Robertson Essays, p. 186, n. Æthelwold, eldest son of Æthelstan and Ælfwen, ealdorman of the East Angles, a friend of King Edgar. He d. 962, and Edgar married his widow Ælfthryth, afterwards famous as Queen Elfrida, daughter of Ordgar, ealdorman of the western shires, see Hist. Rames., p. 12; Will. of Malmes., Gesta Pontiff., pp. 178, 179; Dict. of Natl. Biogr., XVI., 378, art. Edgar. Byrhtnoth, or Brithnoth, ealdorman of the East Saxons, married Ælfæd, a daughter of Ordgar, supported the monks against Elfhære, d. at the battle of Maldon. On Ælfgar and his brother Byrhtferth Ministri, or thegns, see Robertson, Essays, p. 180.

For this charter, see Kemble, C.D., No. 452, where no doubt is cast upon it. In the MS. the date has been altered from 958, which was impossible, but the indiction for 956 is 14, and for 957 is 15.

No. 6. Wulfhære, King of the Mercians, the second son of Penda, began to reign 658, married Eormenhild, see n. to No. 1, was a "missionary king," see Dict. of Christ. Biogr., IV., 1194. He d. 675, see Bede, Hist. Eccl., III., c. 24; IV., cc. 12, 13; V., c. 24. Theodore, consec. to Canterbury, Mar. 26, 668, d. Sept. 19, 690. Putta was not, as described in the text, an Archbishop; he was Bp. of Rochester 669, and of Hereford 676; d. 688. Bosel, Bp. of Worcester 680, resigned 691, Florence sub ann. Ailred, or Æthelred, brother of Wulfhære, whom he succeeded as King of the Mercians in 675, became an abbot in 704, see Bede, Hist. Eccl., III., c. 11; IV., c. 21; V., c. 19; Florence sub. 675, 704. Kemble (C.D., No. 13) marks this charter as spurious.

No. 7. Osric, King of the Hwicci in about 691, Bede, Hist. Eccl., IV., c. 23. He is said to have founded the abbeys of Bath and Gloucester (Monasticon, I., 541), and to have been one with the Northumbrian King of that name, but on this, see art. "Osric (2)," by Bp. Stubbs in Dict. of Ch. Biogr. IV., 161. Æthelred, see Ailred in n. to No. 6; he would assent as Osric's over King. Leutherius, Bp. of Dorchester, consec. 670, d. 676, Hist. Eccl., III., c. 7; Florence, an. 670. Wilfridus, the famous bishop Wilfred, consec. at Compeigne 664, Bp. of York 669-678, restored 686, expelled 691, partially restored 705, d. Oct. 12, 709, see Life by Heddi, ap. Historians of York (Rolls Ser.), I., 1-103, and the criticism on it in Eng. Hist. Rev. (1891), VI., 535, sqq. Heddu, or Hæddi, Bp. of Winchester, consec. 676, d. July 7, 705, Florence sub ann. Ergnwaldus, or Erkenwald, founder of Chertsey and Barking, Bp. of the East Saxons, or London, consec. 675, d. 693, see under "Erkenwald" in Dict. of Natl. Biogr., II., 177, sq. Saxwulf, Bp. of Lichfield, consec. 675, d. 691, Hist. Eccl., IV., c. 6, Florence ann. 675. On this charter, Bp. Stubbs (u. s.) observes that the presence of King Æthelred and Abp. Theodore and the other bishops shows that it must have been granted either in a witenagemot or an ecclesiastical synod. It is printed by Kemble (C.D. 12), and shows no discrepancies.

No. 8. Cervella, or Ceruella, the river Cherwell, which rises in Northamptonshire and joins the Isis at Oxford. This charter is printed by Kemble (C.D. 21), who dates it by the indiction 681, and marks it as spurious.

No. 9. Priston, five miles south-west of Bath. Æscun, is Cold Ashton, five miles north of Bath, in Gloucestershire, see No. 13, and comp. Lincoln's Inn MS., No. 808. Ædelstanus, or Athelstan, succeeded 924, d. Oct. 27, 940. Edward, or Edward the Elder, succeeded 901, d. Aug. 924. This curious legend of the Atheling Alfred is told by William of Malmesbury, G. R., II., cc. 131, 137, and is also in his G. P. (Rolls Ser.), p. 402, where the same historical statement is given as appended to a charter to Malmesbury, given also by Kemble (C.D., No. 1092). Freeman criticizes the earlier part of the Athelings' story in Essays I., 11. John would be Pope John XI., 931-936. Edmund succeeded his brother Athelstan 940, and was killed May 26, 946; he was succeeded by his brother Edred, d. at Frome, Nov. 23, 955. Wulfhelm, Bp. of Somerset, or Wells, consec. 914, transl. to Canterbury 923, d. Feb. 12, 942. Theodred, Bp. of London, d. about 952. Ælfheah, or Elphege the Bald, Bp. of Winchester probably 934, d. 951, see A.-S. Chron. 934; Florence ann. 935, 951; Memorials of St. Dunstan, passim. Cænwald, see n. to No. 5. Oda, see ib. Ælfric, did any bishop of that name hold a see in 931? Wulfhelm, possibly Bp. of Somerset 938-955. Burhric, Bishop of Rochester, possibly as early as 931. Æthelgar, Bp. of Crediton, not before 934. Wulfgar, see Robertson, Essays, p. 183.

This charter is given by Kemble (C.D., No. 354), who marks it spurious.

No. 10. Corston, about four miles west of Bath. For Ælfheah and other bishops, vide supra. Ælfric, Bp. of Hereford in 941. This charter is given by Kemble (D.E., No. 388, see also vol. III., 416), who accepts it.

No. 11. Ælfred, Bp. of Selsey in 946. Weston, two miles north-west of Bath. This charter is given by Kemble (C.D., No. 408), who accepts it.

No. 12. Corston, near the Avon, a little to west of Bath. For the bishops vide supra. Ælfgar, can this be the same as the Ælfgar minister of

No. 5? Alfgar, the King's (Edgar's) kinsman d. in Devon in 962. Æthelmund, see Hist. de Abingdon, I., passim. This charter is given by Kemble (C.D., No. 457), who accepts it.

No. 13. Alveston in Gloucestershire, nine miles north-east of Bristol. Æisctona, Cold Ashton, see No. 9.

No. 15. Eadgyth, or Edith, queen of Edward the Confessor, daughter of Earl Godwin, d. 1075. Stigand, Bp. of Elmham 1043, of Winchester 1047, transl. to Canterbury 1052, deposed 1070, d. in prison. Ealdryd, or Aldred, Abbot of Tavistock, Bp. of Winchester 1044, transl. to York 1061, d. Sept. 11, 1069. Hereman, or Herman, a Lorrainer, consec. to Ramsbury 1045, united Ramsbury and Sherborne, and removed his see to Sarum, d. Feb. 20, 1078. Gisa, a Lorrainer, Bp. of Somerset, or Wells, 1061, d. 1088. Harold, son of Earl Godwin, was at this date Earl of Wessex. Tostig, brother of Harold, appointed Earl of Northumbria 1055, banished 1065, d. 1066. Æthelnoth, Abbot of Glastonbury, deposed 1077. Ægytlwig, or Æthelwig, see n. to No. 2. Ægylsige, or Æthelsige, Abbot of St. Augustine's, Canterbury, May 26, 1061, appointed as vice-abbot to govern Ramsey abbey, was sent on an embassy to Denmark 1068, outlawed 1070, returned to Ramsey, not to St. Augustine's, see Norman Cong., IV., 749, sq., d. 1087. Ordric, Abbot of Abingdon, 1052, d. Jan. 22, 1066, see Hist. de Abingdon, I., 464, 482; II., 282. Esegar, Ralph, Bondig, see Norman Cong., II., 347, 441; III., 53, 360, 501, 752. This lease to Stigand, who by the way was an excellent man of business, must be dated between April, 1061, the consecration of Gisa, and Oct. 1065, the revolt of the north against Tostig.

No. 16. Weston, two miles north-west, and now a suburb of Bath. For many of the witnesses vide supra. This charter is given by Kemble (C.D. 485), who rejects it. Edwy d. in 959. Mr. Birch corrects the date 961 to 956 or 957. But Robertson (Essays, p. 180) gives 856 as the date of Æthelstan's retirement. This is, however, uncertain. This may be another Æthelstan "dux," who appears often in somewhat later charters.

No. 17. Hamton, i.e. Bathampton, now a suburb of Bath. This charter is given by Kemble (C.D., No. 440), who accepts it.

No. 18. Ford, or Bathford, four miles north-east of Bath. For many of the witnesses see n. to No. 5. Kemble (C.D., No. 463) accepts this charter, and if it is genuine, Robertson's date for the retirement of Æthelstan, the "Half King" (see No. 5, 16) is too early, unless we have here the other Æthelstan.

No. 19. Nordstocha, or North Stoke, four miles north-west of Bath. Cynulfus, or Cynewulf, King of the West Saxons, a contemporary of Offa, King of Mercia, who defeated him at Bensington, or Benson in Oxfordshire, d. 787. Offa, d. 796. There was a Cynwulf, King of Mercia (d. 819) reigning in 808. Cuthbert, Bp. of Hereford 736, transl. to Canterbury 740, d. Oct. 26, 758 (Florence of Worc. sub an.). Torthelm, was Bp. of Leicester, Cynheard was Bp. of Winchester, Eansfrd, or Eanfrith, was Bp. of Elmham, Hereward was Bp. of Sherborne, Ecgulf was Bp. of London, Milred was Bp. of Worcester, Acca, or Hecca, was Bp. of Hereford, Aldulf was Bp. of Lindsey, and Earldulf was Bp. of Rochester in 758, and so were contemporaries of Abp. Cuthbert. But the difficulty as to the dates of the kings remains. Kemble (C.D., No. 193, see also III., 388) marks this charter as spurious. See No. 49, and Lincoln's Inn MS. 808, where Cynulf is made Cenwulf of Mercia, who came to the throne the year of Offa's death. This charter, if not spurious, has been incorrectly copied by the compiler.

No. 20. Sudstoca, Tottanstoc, i.e. South Stoke, two miles south of Bath. Dunstan, Bp. of Worcester 957, of London 959, transl. to Canterbury 960, d. May 19, 988. Beorthelm, or Brithelm, one Bp. of Winchester 960, d. 963, the other of Wells, see n. to No. 5. Oswald, Bp. of Worcester 961, Abp. of York 972, d. Feb. 29, 992. Ælfstan, Bp. of Rochester in 961. Wulffric? Leofwine, Bp. first of Lindsey, to which he united Leicester or Dorchester in 958, see Will. of Malmes., G. P., p. 312. For some other witnesses vide supra. Camelar, the river on which is Cameley, runs into the Avon. This charter is marked spurious by Kemble (C.D., No. 486).

No. 21. Geofanstiga, apparently Evestia, or Evesty, an obsolete name of an estate mentioned in Domesday between entries for Corston and Ashwick, see Eyton, Domesday Studies, Somerset, I., 151. Kemble (C.D., No. 484) marks this charter as spurious.

No. 22. Stanton Prior, five miles south-west of Bath. Kemble (C.D., No. 502) accepts this charter.

No. 23. Kemble (C.D., No. 516) marks this charter as spurious.

No. 24. Aquamania, or Akemanceaster, is Bath. Æthelwold, consec. Bp. of Winchester Nov. 963, d. Aug. 1, 981, see Lives of St. Æthelwold in Hist. de Abingdon, II., 255, sq., and Acta SS., Bolland., I., 83, sq. Æthelwine, son of Æthelstan, the "Half King," ealdorman of East Anglia, a great upholder of the monks, called the "Friend of God," d. 992, see art. Ethelwine, Dict. of National Biogr., XVIII., 36, sq. Kemble gives this charter (C.D., No. 573), and accepts it.

No. 25. Cliftune, apparently Clifton near Bristol. The connexion of the convent with Clifton accounts for the gift of the church of Radstock, by Helias de Clifton, see Lincoln's Inn MS., No. 808. Kemble (C.D., No. 566) accepts this charter.

No. 26. Welwestoce, i.e. Wellow, about four miles south of Bath. The date is 984; with this of course the teste does not agree, but might do for a later year of Ethelred the Unready, as perhaps 1006. Kemble (C.D., No. 643) marks this charter as spurious.

No. 27. Æthelred, i.e. Ethelred the Unready. Note Ælfere the Abbot. Clatfordtune, probably Claverton, two miles south-east of Bath. Cumtune, probably Compton Dando, near Keynsham. Budancumbe, i.e. Butcombe, near Wrington. Leæge, perhaps Leigh on Mendip. Healhtune, probably Holton, near Blackford. Wunfrod, no doubt Winford, six miles south-west of Bristol. Kemble accepts this will.

No. 28. Eadweard, i.e. Edward the Confessor (1042-1066). Æswica, i.e. Ashwick, three miles north-east of Shepton Mallet. Leofric, consec. Bp. of Crediton 1046, removed his see to Exeter 1050, d. Feb. 10, 1072, see Oliver, Lives of the Bps. of Exeter, pp. 6-10. William, a Norman, appointed Bp. of London 1051, in room of Spearhafoc, who was deposed while yet unconsecrated, fled from England 1052, returned and restored, d. 1075. Ægelwin, or probably Æthelwig, Abbot of Evesham (1058-1077). Brihtric, son of Ælfgar, lord of Gloucester, see Norman Cong., IV., 165. Ælfgar, "consiliarius," a powerful thegn, and landowner in Somerset, alive in 1066. Ægelwin, probably Alwi Banneson, held Ile, or Isle Brewer, Stringston, and other lands in the hundred of Cannington and elsewhere, which went to Alured de Hispania. Euerwacer held much land in Somerset, which passed to Walter de Douai and Serlo de Burci. Esegar, or Æsgar, held Worle, is called "regiæ procurator aulæ." Rotberd, i.e. Robert Fitz-Wymarch, Sheriff of Essex, held Brewham and land in Shipton Montague. This charter is given by Kemble (C.D., No. 811), who accepts it, and examined by Eyton, Domesday of Somerset, I., 155, who points out that the Epact and Concurrent are stated wrongly.

No. 29. Tofig, sheriff of Somerset, appears in C.D., Nos. 838, 839, see Eyton, u. s., I., 69. 17

No. 30. We have here a list corresponding with entries in Domesday. There T. R. E. of course stands for "tempore regis Edwardi." It is curious to find that the Bath compiler did not understand the abbreviation, writing it "teste R. E." Most of the places here mentioned are noted elsewhere in this volume. Wilmedune, i.e. Wilmington in Priston, see Eyton, u. s., p. 119. Eswiche, i.e. Ashwick, vide supra. Wdewiche, i.e. Woodwick, see Lincoln's Inn MS., n. to No. 27. Escetune, i.e. Cold Ashton, see n. to No. 9.

No. 31. Cherlcumba, i.e. Charlcombe, less than two miles north of Bath, see Lincoln's Inn MS., n. to No. 140. William, Earl, i.e. William Fitz Osbern, Earl of Hereford, left viceroy by the Conqueror when he went to Normandy in 1067. Eadnoth, staller to the Confessor, fell in battle against the sons of Harold in 1067. He was the father of Harding, and ancestor of the house of Berkeley. The date of this charter is therefore 1067.

No. 33. Wulfwold appears to have been the senior abbot, and Ælfsige his co-abbot and successor, who d. in 1087. For William Hosett, see No. 52.

No. 34. For this charter see Mr. Maxwell Lyte's Dunster and its Lords, p. 27.

No. 35. Walcinus, or Walter, de Douai, one of the chief landowners in Somerset in 1086, held Bathentuna, or Bampton, in Devon, and lands in Dorset or Wilts. The head of his barony was Castle Cary, where Walter had his castle; it afterwards passed to the Lovels, probably by descent. Bampton, and other of Walter's estates in Devon and Somerset, descended to the family of Paynel or Paganell, by the marriage of his grand-daughter and heiress, Juliana to Fulk Paganell, see Domesday of Somerset, I., 61 62.

Raimar, Walter's brother, was, we find in Domesday, a clerk. Girardus, Walter's steward, held under him Broctuna, or Bratton Seymour, in the barony of Cary Castle, and lands in Devon. Foxxume, an estate in the parish of Castle Cary. Brigge, i.e. Bridgewater, another of Walter's estates which descended to the Paganells. Radulfus, or Ralph, de Conteville, held under Walter at Adber in Trent parish. Radulfus de Storton, held under Walter at Stourton in Wiltshire, and was probably the Ralph who held North Barrow under the same lord, Eyton u. s., I., 117. Aluericus, a certain Ailric, was Walter's antecessor at Comtuna, possibly Compton Martin. Halvile would seem to be the same as Hauville, and perhaps as Hawkwell, and even Hauteville. We find Hauville as the name of a falconer of Henry II., Round, Ancient Charters, p. 113.

No. 36. William, of Warelwast, consec. Bp. of Exeter Aug. 11, 1107, began the building of his cathedral, became blind, and resigned his see 1136. Rodbertus de Bahentona, or Bampton, rebelled against Stephen in 1136, see Gesta Stephani (Engl. Hist. Soc.), p. 18; Engl. Hist. Rev. (1890), V., 746. Note Walter's wife Emma, and his two sons Robert and Geoffrey; which of them was the father of Juliana does not appear. The gift of Bratton church, recorded here and in No. 35, did not take effect; the advowson remained in the descendants of Gerard de Brocton, Walter's steward, and they in the thirteenth century conveyed it to Bruton priory, but the gift again failed (Bishop Hobhouse).

No. 37. This charter, which has often been printed, is given in facsimile from the original at Wells, in the Somerset Archæol. and Nat. Hist. Soc.'s Proc. (1876), XXII., ii., 114, with a commentary on it by the late Mr. F. H. Dickinson, and it is also discussed by Freeman, Will. Rufus, II., 483, sq. It seems useless to repeat or to attempt to add to, what they have written.

No. 38. O, i.e. Osmund, Bp. of Sarum, 1078, d. Dec. 3, 1099, canonized 1456. T., i.e. Thurstan, a Norman monk from Caen, appointed abbot of Glastonbury 1082, grievously ill-treated his convent in 1083, was sent back to Caen by the Conqueror, purchased his restoration of Rufus in 1089 or 1090, d. 1101, see A.-S. Chron. an. 1083; Will. of Malmes., Antiq. Glast., pp. 330-332. A., i.e. Aiulf, sheriff of Dorset in 1084, et post, entitled "Camera-rius" in Domesday, see Eyton, Domesday of Dorset, passim. Walchelin, a kinsman of the Conqueror, consec. Bp. of Winchester May 30, 1070, built a new cathedral church 1079-1093, d. Jan. 3, 1098. Robert Bloet, brother of Hugh, Bp. of Bayeux, chancellor of the Conqueror, consec. Bp. of Lincoln Feb. 12, 1094, justiciary under Henry I., d. Jan. 12, 1123. Robert, count of Meulan, or Mellent, son of Roger of Beaumont, inherited Meulan from his maternal uncle, count Hugh, and Beaumont in Normandy from his father, was renowned for his wisdom, received the earldom of Leicester from King Henry, d. 1118, see Hen. of Huntingdon, De Contemptu Mundi (Rolls Ser.), pp. 306, 307; Will. Rufus, I., 184-186. Henry, earl of Warwick, called Henry of Neubourg, younger brother of Robert of Meulan, received the earldom of Warwick from Rufus, d. June 20, 1123. Robert Fitz-Hamon, conqueror of Glamorgan, founder of the abbey of Tewkesbury, d.

1106. Eudo, son of Hubert of Rie, lord of Colchester, see Cutts, Colchester (Historic towns series), pp. 76-84, Round, Geoffrey de Mandeville, p. 328, and for the legend about him see Monasticon, IV., 607. Robert Fitz-Girold, see Eyton, Domesday of Dorset, p. 76, and n. to No. 40. Robert, the Dispenser, is said to have given Randolph, the future Bp. of Durham, the nick-name of Flambard, see Orderic (Duchesne), p. 678. This charter is printed in Monasticon, II., 267.

No. 39. Nigel de Gurnaio, joint lord of Backwell, also held Barrow of Geoffrey, Bp. of Coutances, whence it derived its name Barrow - Gurney. Dunkerton, five miles south-west of Bath. Vernon, a frontier castle of Normandy on the left bank of the Seine, a plan of great importance, was strongly fortified by Henry I. in 1123.

No. 40. Mathildis, or Eadgyth, as she was named before her marriage, daughter of Malcolm of Scotland, married to Henry I., Nov. 11, 1100, d. 1118. Anselm, Abp. of Canterbury, consec. Dec. 4, 1093, d. April 21, 1109, canonized 1494. Gerard, nephew of Walkelin, Bp. of Winchester, and so a connexion of the Conqueror, precentor of Rouen, chaplain of William Rufus, consec. Bp. of Hereford June 8, 1096, trans. to York 1101, d. May 21, 1108. Maurice, consec. Bp. of London 1086, d. Sept. 26, 1107. William Giffard, dean of Rouen, was appointed to Winchester, and received the temporalities on the accession of Henry I., in 1100, but not consec. until Aug 11, 1107, having refused consecration except from Abp. Anselm, d. Jan. 25 1129. Osbern brother of Earl William FitzOsbern, consec. to Exeter, 1072, d. 1103. Robert Lincoln, see n. to No. 38. Robert, of Limesey, consec. 1086 to Chester, to which city his predecessor, Peter, had moved the see of Lichfield, Robert removed his see to Coventry, wishing to annex the abbey there to the bishopric, d. Sept. 1, 1117, see Will. of Malmes., G. P., pp. 309-311. Herbert, called Losinga, prior of Fécamp, abbot of Ramsey, bought the bishopric of Thetford in 1091, moved his see to Norwich, where he built the cathedral, a learned and active prelate, but a covetous man, a July 22, 1119, see under Losinga, Herbert de, in Dict. of Nat. Biogr. XXXIV., 143. Gundulf, Bp. of Rochester, consec. Mar. 19, 1077, d. Mar. 7, 1108. Samson, canon of Bayeux, and brother of Thomas of Bayeux, Abp. of York, was consec. Bp. of Worcester June 15, 1096 (there is a story that he was never consecrated, see G. P., p. 290, but comp. Florence, sub an., Engl. Hist. Soc.'s ed., II., 40), d. May 5, 1112. Ralph Luffa, consec. Bp. of Chichester 1091, an energetic prelate, rebuilt his church, d. Dec. 24, 1123. Ranulf, or Randolph Flambard, the minister of William Rufus, consec. to Durham June 5, 1099, imprisoned by Henry in 1100, and escaped to Normandy early in 1101, d. Sept. 5, 1128. John, Bp. of Tusculum, called "de Marsico," consec. 1093, d. 1112, see Gams, XIX. Tiberius, legate, had come to England apparently about the Rome-scot, see S. Anselmi Epp., III., 85, 86. Gilbert, of the famous Norman house of Crispin, a monk of Bec under Lanfranc, was abbot of Westminster 1077-1117, see Vita Lanfranci (Giles), p. 297. Richard, abbot of St. Albans, 1097-1119, see Gesta Abb. S. Albani, I., 66-72. Odo, abbot of Chertsey 1084 resigned his abbacy rather than hold it of Rufus as a lay fief 1092; the abbey was then held by Ralph Flambard, but Odo was restored by Henry in 1100, see Ann. de Winton, pp. 37, 40. Serlo, see n. to No. 4. Walter, abbot of Evesham, d. 20 Jan. 1104, see Florence sub. an. and comp. Monasticon, II., 4. Aldwin, abbot of Ramsey 1191, deposed by Abp. Anselm for simony in 1102 at the Council of Westminster, restored by order of Pope Paschal 1107, d. 1112, see Chron. Rames. (Rolls Ser.), pp. 340, 341; Florence ann. 1102, 1107. Stephen, of Whitby, first Abbot of St. Mary, York (founded 1088), d. 1112, see Monasticon, III., 569. Gerold, a monk of Winchester, was chosen abbot of Cranborne, Gloucestershire, and when Robert FitzHamon refounded Tewkesbury, migrated thither with nearly the whole convent, and became first abbot of the new house in 1102, the date of taking possession of the new monastery; he no doubt was called Abbot of Tewkesbury before. Refusing to satisfy the king's demands for money he left his abbey and retired to Winchester in 1109. He d. in 1110, see Annals of Tewkesbury, p. 44; Ann. of Winchester, p. 43. Henry, a monk of Bec under Lanfranc, became prior of Canterbury, was elected second abbot of Battle June 11, 1096, d. June 18, 1102, see Hist. Mon. de Bello (Anglia Chr. Soc.), pp. 44, 47. Richer succeeded abbot of Hulme, Norfolk, in 1101, d. 1125. Roger the chancellor, afterwards the famous Bp. of Sarum, consec. Aug. 11, 1107, d. Dec. 4, 1139. Robert, duke of Normandy, met his brother Henry in England apparently in August, 1101, and returned to Normandy at Michaelmas. Ralph Flambard must have come over with him. R. de Ponto, is, I think, Robert de Bellême, earl of Shrewsbury, who in 1101 succeeded his father-in-law, Guy, as count of Ponthieu. Eustace (III), count of Boulogne, the crusader, held lands in Somerset, married Maria, daughter of Malcolm of Scotland, and so was brother-in-law of queen Matilda; his daughter Matilda married Stephen of Blois. Robert, of Mellent, Henry of Warwick, see n. to No. 38. Stephen, grandson of Geoffrey, count of Brittany, who married Hawisa, daughter of Richard I., duke of Normandy, through their son Eudo; he was count of Penthievre in Brittany, and earl of Richmond, he d. April 13, 1137. Symon de Senlis, earl of Northampton and Huntingdon, crusader, married a daughter of Earl Waltheof, and so obtained his earldom. William de War, de Warenne, son of William and Gundrada, earl of Surrey, deprived of his earldom in 1102, but restored, d. May 11, 1138. William, "comes de Mort", count of Mortain, held land in Somerset; he was banished in 1104, taken prisoner at Tinchebrai, and d. in prison. Robert FitzHamon, see n. to No. 38. Roger Bigod, d. 1107, see Orderic, p. 833. Robert de Montfort, see ib. pp. 772, 823. Robert, son of William Malet, banished 1102, see ib. p. 804. Gilbert FitzRichard, or Gilbert de Tunbridge, son of Richard FitzGilbert, rebelled against Rufus 1088, settled at Cardigan, d. about 1115, see Dict. of Nat. Biogr., X., 377. Baalun, for Hamelin, lord of Abergavenny, and founder of the priory there, and his brother Winebold, see Monasticon, IV., 617; Dugdale's Baronage, I., 453; Ann. of Bermondsey (Ann. Monast., III., 427). Patricius de Caorgis, or de Caurtia (No. 53), or de Caurz (No. 49), or de Cadurcis (Hist. Mon. S. Petri Glouc., I., passim.), or of Cahors, or of Chaworth, a benefactor of Gloucester Abbey, married Matilda, daughter and co-heiress of Arnulf of Hesdin, whom he succeeded at Weston, near Bath (see

No. 41), and Kempsford in Gloucestershire. He appears to have given his name to Patrick, first earl of Salisbury, who was the son of Walter of Salisbury (son of Edward of Salisbury, supposed to be a brother of Robert Fitz-Girold, see No. 38), hereditary sheriff of Wilts, by Sybil, another daughter and co-heiress of Arnulf (A. S. Ellis). Roger de Nonant, probably a son of Roger who received the lands of Judhael of Totnes from the Conqueror, or the grantee himself who was succeeded in Normandy by his son Hugh. Robert Fitz-Baldwin, son of Baldwin, sheriff of Devon (by his wife Emma), who was the brother of Richard, founder of the family of Clare. Baldwin was son of Gilbert of Brionne, one of the guardians of Duke William, the Conqueror. His other son Richard was made earl of Devon by Henry I. Walter FitzAnsgar, may be the son of Ansgar, or Esegar, the staller, sheriff of Middlesex, on whom see Mr. Round's Geoffrey de Mandeville, p. 353. Was this Ansgar the same with the "regiæ procurator aulae" to the Confessor, the lord of Worle, who attests No. 28?

No. 41. For Patrick de Caurz see n. to No. 40. Arnulf of Hesdin held large estates in the south of England in 1086, in Somerset, of the king by barony part of Weston, and land at Rodden, near Frome, and Tickenham. He is said to have founded the priory of Ruislip, Middlesex (Monasticon, VI., 1050), and was a benefactor to Gloucester, accused of treason in 1096, proved his innocence by wager of battle, went on the crusade and d. at Antioch, see Will. Rufus, II., 65; Liber de Hyda (Rolls Ser.), p. 301; Eyton's Domesday of Somerset, I., 66, and of Dorset, p. 76. Tormentona, i.e. Tormarton, near Chipping Sodbury. Herlewin, prior of Caen, was this year (1100) made abbot of Glastonbury (see No. 45), d. 1120. Paganus de Alençon, probably the Payn de Montdubleaux, who in 1098, betrayed Ballon to Rufus, Orderic, p. 772. I think that his daughter must have married Patrick, son of Patrick de Cadurcis (Nos. 40, 49, 53), for the grandson of Patrick de Cadurcis is described both as de Cadurcis and de Montdubleaux. Amicus of Maine, can this be Amalchis, who in 1099 brought Rufus, then hunting in the New Forest, tidings of the fall of Le Mans, ib., p. 774.

No. 42. Thomas, Abp. of York, consec. 1070, d. Nov. 18, 1100. Walter Giffard, earl of Buckingham, d. 1102. Hugh, the Fat, earl of Chester, d. 1101. Henry, earl of Warwick, see n. to No. 38. Engennulf, son of Henry de Ferrers, and brother of Robert, earl of Derby.

No. 43. The Burgh of Bath was returned in 1086, as geldable at twenty hides, see Eyton, Domesday of Somerset, I., 106, 107. Queen Edith held it T.R.E., and after her the Conqueror; its value was £66 13s. 4d. Roger, consec. Bp. of Sarum 1107, d. Dec. 4, 1139. For some other names see index. Richard, called "de Beames," consec. Bp. of London 1108, d. Jan. 16, 1127. Reinhelm, consec. Bp. of Hereford 1107, d. Oct. 27, 1115. Hervé, called "le Breton," consec. Bp. of Bangor 1192, trans. to Ely 1109, d. 1131. Ranulf appears as chancellor 1107-1123 (see Foss, Judges, I., 130), in which latter year he d. from an accident as is twice recorded by Henry of Huntingdon (Roll Ser.), pp. 244, 308. Stephen, earl of Albemarle, a son of Odo, count of Champagne, a crusader, d. in Palestine after 1127 see Wendover (Engl.

Hist. Soc.), II., 62, 79. Gilbert de Aquila, or of L'Aigle, in Normandy, see Will. Rufus, passim. Geoffrey de Mandeville, grandfather of the earl of Essex, of that name, founder of the priory of Hurlay, in Berkshire, see Round's Geoffrey de Mandeville, pp. 37, 38. Thomas de St. John, apparently of the family of the lords of Harptree. One of his name was a benefactor to Gloucester, see Hist. Mon., Glouc. William Pevrel, or Peverel, warden of Dover, founded the priory of Hatfield Peverel, in Essex, was perhaps the father of the William accused of poisoning Ralph, earl of Chester, is said to have d. 1113. For a reference to this charter see Lincoln's Inn MS., No. 722, and n.

No. 45. For most of the names see index. Herbert, consec. Bp. of Thetford 1091, d. 1119, see No. 37, n. Herlewin, see No. 41, n. Urse, of Abetot, in Normandy, must have been an old man, for he was sheriff of Gloucestershire and Worcestershire in, or about 1076, see Gesta Pontiff, p. 253. William, of Albini, probably the father of William, who married Adelais, widow of Henry I., became earl of Arundel, and d. 1176. Bedinton, Adam de Domerham (I., 285), whence this charter is copied by Dugdale, reads Gedinton, or Geddington, in Northamptonshire, but in confirmation by Richard I., it is written Tedinton, Wells Cath. MSS., p. 8. Date 1102, see Monasticon, II., 268.

No. 46. Walter de Gloucester, d. about 1128, constable of Gloucester, and hereditary sheriff of the shire, was the son of Roger de Pistres, sheriff in 1072, brother of Durand de Pistres, also sheriff, by Adeliza, styled "vicecomitissa" (Hist. Mon., Glouc., I., 188, 189). He married Emma, a sister of Hamelin de Baalun (No. 40, n.), and was the father of Miles of Gloucester, earl of Hereford, famous in the wars of Stephen's reign. He is said to have become a monk at Lanthony, and was buried there, Ellis's Landholders of Gloucestershire, reprinted from Bristol and Glouc. Arch. Trans., IV., 80, sq.

No. 47. Robert de Vere, Mr. Round (G. de Mandeville, pp. 147, 326), distinguishes between Robert de Vere, son of Bernard de Vere, and in conjunction with his wife Adeline de Montfort, founder of the priory of Monks Horton, Kent, who held the office of constable, probably the witness here, and Robert FitzAubrey de Vere, the younger brother of the chamberlain. Chainesham, i.e. Keynsham, five miles south-east of Bristol.

No. 48. Warin de Lisures, sheriff of Somerset and Dorset, Madox Hist. Excheq. x. 12.

Nigel de Albini, brother of William de Albini (No. 45), married Matilda, wife of Robert of Mowbray, and sister of Gilbert de L'Aigle (No. 43), but put her away after her brother's death, and married Gundreda, sister of Hugh de Gournay. Nigel received Mowbray and other possessions of Robert, from Henry I. He d. as a monk of Bec, and was succeeded by his son Roger of Mowbray, Orderic, p. 704; Will. of Jumièges, VIII., 8.

No. 49. William, son of Henry I., drowned Nov. 25, 1120. North Stoke is not mentioned in Domesday. A Robert Greno appears there as tenant of Roger de Corcelle in respect of land at Freshford and of Whittocksmead. For this charter of Kenulf of Wessex, or of Mercia, see No. 19, and Lincoln's Inn MS., No. 808. The date of this document given also in Monasticon, II., 268, is of course wrong. Maurice, apparently Mac-Donald, the son and grandson of archbishops of Armagh, and later himself archbishop, see Cotton, Fasti, I., 10. Ste. Susanne on the Arne, in Maine; its viscount in 1083, was Hubert de Beaumont, Orderic, p. 648. This Hubert held two knight's fees under the abbot of Glastonbury. Alexander de Alnoth, i.g. de Anno, see Lincoln's Inn MS., No. 3A. Was this family descended from Eadnoth (Alnod) the staller, and so akin to the lords of Berkeley? Reinald, or Reginald de Dunstanville, gave the church of Winterbourn Basset, in Wiltshire, to the convent of Lewes. He was the father of Robert, lord of Heytesbury, in the reign of Henry II. Salsford, i.g. Saltford, five miles north-west of Bath. Deingl, see No. 52, where written Dedington, probably Deinton or Donnington, four miles south of Chipping Sodbury. Bacuuil, i.e. Backwell, seven miles south-west of Bristol. Roger de Lamare, probably a brother of William de Mare, nephew of Walter of Gloucester, Round, Ancient Charters, p. 19. William, dapifer, apparently a William Malet. Henry of Huntingdon records the forfeiture of Will. Malet in 1110. Had he been pardoned, or was this another William?

No. 50. Durand de Moion is little more than a name to us, see Lyte's Dunster, p. 7. He held under William de Mohun, in the hundred of Champton, and was his "dapifer," see No. 34.

No. 51. Esctona, see Nos. 9, 13. Alured de Hispania, succeeded to the estates of a Saxon owner called Alwi Banneson, reeve of North Petherton, under King Edward. Eyton places his caput baroniæ at Nether Stowey. His co-heiress, Isabella, married Robert de Candos, or Chandos, and they founded the priory of Goldclive in Monmouthshire. Robert d. about 1120. The Chandos estates passed, in 1166, to the house of Columbiers, by the marriage of the heiress Maud, to Philip de Columbiers, see Domesday of Somerset, I., 65.

No. 52. William, son of William Hosat, who, in 1086, held part of Tadwick in capite, and Charlcombe under the abbey. Fitz-Vivian for a benefactor to Bath of that name, see Lincoln's Inn MS., No. 808.

No. 53. For this deed of restitution and donation, see the so-called "Historiola" in Ecclesiastical Documents (Camden Soc.), pp. 21, 39; it is given in Monasticon, II., 268. For the five hides in Weston, which came to Patrick from the Domesday lord, Arnulf of Hesdin, see No. 41. Hugolin "cum barba," also called "Interpres," and "Legatus," held, 1086, in capite, nine hides in Woolley (Herleia), Bath Easton, and Claverton, and three hides in Bathampton under the abbot (Eyton). Dochemeresfelda, i.e. Dogmersfield, near Odiham, in Hampshire. Arnemuda, so written, greatly puzzled me, as apparently it also did Hunter and Freeman, for they avoid attempting an explanation. The key is to be found in No. 75, where among the possessions of Bath we find the "salinæ in nova foresta quæ dicuntur Hernemuda" (here the critical letter m may be read w). These salinæ, as we find in the Lincoln's Inn MS., were at Keyhaven. Therefore the place wanted is clearly Arnwood, which wood no doubt covered a good stretch of the eastern division of the Hampshire coast, even before the New Forest was made. The name remains as that of a tithing in Hordle parish. Herevius, see No. 43, n. Herlewinus, see No. 41, n. Walkerius, noted by Le Neve as archdeacon of Wells, as Robert is of Taunton, and Girbert or Gisbert of Bath. Hildebert, the bishop's steward, was made provost of the canons of Wells by the bishop. He was his brother, and was the father of John the archdeacon, who succeeded him as provost, and of Reginald the precentor, see Historiola, p. 22; Wells Cath. MSS., p. 18.

No. 54. Roger de St. Lo succeeded his uncle Geoffrey, Bp. of Coutances, at Newton, called from his family, Newton St. Loe, a little to the west of Bath. Stanton is no doubt Stanton Prior, five miles south-west of Bath. John apparently succeeded Walkerius at Wells as archdeacon. Arald, or according to Le Neve Herald, archdeacon of Bath. Atselin seems left for Taunton, and may have been Atselin Hosat of No. 52. Roger de Gloec', probably a younger brother of Miles of Hereford, who called his eldest son Roger. Constanciencis, of Coutances, whence of course it would be natural that Roger of St. Lo should have a follower. S. Aud, i.e. St. Omer.

No. 55. Dokemarefelda, see n. to No. 53. Bp. of Winchester, i.e. William Giffard, consec. to that see Aug. 11, 1107, d. Jan. 25, 1129. Dogmersfield had apparently been snatched from Bath by *Randolf Flambar*d during the life of Bishop John, and had come into the king's hands. He now granted the manor and the church to Bishop Godfrey and his church of Bath. The convent had the church, and the bishops appear to have kept the manor, but in 1215 the convent ceded the church to Bp. Jocelin, who therewith founded a prebend, see Canon Church on the "Prebend of Dinder," Somerset Archæol. and Nat. Hist. Soc.'s Proc. (1884), XXX., ii., 85, sq., where the date of this charter is given from the "Liber Albus I." at Wells as 1123. G., i.e. Geoffrey Rufus, chancellor in succession to Ranulf, who d. 1123 (see No. 43, n.), consec. to Durham Aug. 6, 1133, d. May 6, 1140. R. de Sigillo, i.e. Robert, keeper of the great seal under the chancellor, consec. Bp. of London 1141, d. 1151, of it was thought, eating poisoned grapes, Symeon, II., 324. A Richard de Sigillo, who held the same office at court was consec. to Hereford Jan. 16, 1120, d. Aug. 15, 1127, Gesta Pontiff, p. 304. R. de Courci, or Robert, a baron of that name, of Stoke Courcy, or Stogursey, Somerset, founded the priory of Cannington, was "dapifer" to the Empress, and was slain at Consilt in 1157, Will. of Newburgh (Engl. Hist. Soc.), I., 96. R. de Ver, see No. 47, n. R. Basset, i.e. Ralph, the justiciar, one of the new men raised by Henry I. (Orderic, p. 805), d. about 1127, see Dict. of Nat. Biogr., III., 385. A. de Ver, apparently Aubrey de Vere, great chamberlain in 1133, d. 1141, but possibly his father, see Mr. Round's note in his Geoffrey de Mandeville, p. 388, sqq. W. de Alb. briſ., i.e. William Albini, called Brito, lord of Belvoir, d. about 1155.

No. 56. Calvestona, i.e. Kelston, four miles north-west of Bath; the manor belonged to the abbess of St. Edward's nunnery, Shaftesbury.

Merc, or Mark, four miles east of Highbridge, was, in 1086, a part of Bp. Gisa's manor of Wedmore. For the distinct grants of Mark and Wedmore to the church of Wells, see Monasticon, II., 287.

No. 57. Cumba, i.e. Combe Monkton, about three miles south-east of Bath, which had belonged to the convent in 1086. As Godfrey d. Aug. 26, 1135 (Cont. Florence, II., 78) this charter is dated wrongly. William de Mohun, see Gesta Stephani, p. 52, and Mr. Lyte's Dunster, u. s.

No. 58. William of Corbeil had been a clerk of Ranulf Flambard, was first prior of St. Osyth's, Essex, was consec. to Canterbury Feb. 18, 1123, d. Nov. 21, 1136. Henry, of Blois, Stephen's brother, consec. to Winchester Nov. 17, 1129, d. Aug. 8, 1171, see Dict. of Nat. Biogr., XXVI., 112.

No. 59. Robert de Vere, see No. 47, n.

No. 60. Robert, Bp. of Bath, consec. 1136, d. Aug. 31, 1166. This charter, which was granted at the Easter court 1136, has been thoroughly examined and commented on by Mr. Round in his Geoffrey de Mandeville, pp. 18, 19, 21, 262, sq. I need therefore do no more than note that in the "teste," "Safaro" stands for Seffrich, consec. to Chichester 1125, deposed 1145, that "Galerio" stands for Waleran, count of Meulan, that Robert Fitz-Richard described in Mr. Round's list as "camerarius" is here "dapifer"; he was, Mr. Round believes, the Robert FitzRichard (de Clare), who d. in 1137, see ib., p. 13, n.; William de Pont' is for de Pont de l'arche. William de Albin (see No. 45, n.), pincerna, was the husband of Queen Adalais, became first earl of Chichester or Arundel of the name, and d. 1176, see a convincing note, ib., p. 316. Fered is of course for Ferrers.

No. 61. Bertona, the Barton appended to Bath, and lying on north-west of the city, see Lincoln's Inn MS., 666, n. Beckenofna, the only suggestion that occurs to me is a Beacon-hill. Symon, abbot of Athelney, the abbey was founded by King Alfred. This name enables us to correct the list given by Dugdale (II., 402). Ivo, the first Dean of Wells, the office was founded by Bp. Robert. He appears to have d. about 1159. Eustace, apparently archdeacon of Wells, Martin of Taunton, and Hugh, called of Tournay, of Bath. William, prior of Taunton, appears an addition to our knowledge; this priory of Austin canons was founded by William Giffard, Bp. of Winchester in the reign of Henry I.

No. 62. Goldnitona, i.e. Goldington, close to Bedford.

No. 63. Cerdra, no doubt for Cheddar. Evercriz, i.e. Evercreech, near Shepton Mallet.

No. 64. Petetona, i.e. Petton, a hamlet of Bampton. The other adjuncts have not been identified, but it may be noted that a free chapel of Ford was in the churchyard of Bampton. Diptford, or as it was written Dupeford, seems to answer to Deopeford, as far as the name goes, but it is a long way from Bampton. See Nos. 35, 36.

No. 65. In the third clause the construction seems faulty. Karentona, i.e. Carhampton. Stocheland, i.e. Stockland, after called Stockland Bristol, seven miles north-west of Bridgwater. Kalveton, i.e. Kilton, on the Somerset coast. Avelhame, i.e. Avill, a hamlet of Dunster. Stantona also belongs to Dunster. Menehase, i.e. Minehead, near Dunster.

No. 66. For this rent see Lincoln's Inn MS., No. 140.

No. 67. William, earl of Gloucester, son of Earl Robert (d. 1147), founded Keynsham abbey, d. 1183. Chameleia, i.e. Cameley, in East Somerset. H., i.e. Hawisa, daughter of Robert, earl of Leicester, countess of Gloucester, d. 1179. Helias Giffard, see Mr. Round's Ancient Charters, pp. 21, 22.

No. 68. Henry, of Anjou (Henry II.) received from his father and mother their claims in 1148, and so became duke of Normandy and Aquitaine; his father Geoffrey d. 1151, and he then became sole master of the two duchies and the county of Anjou, see Miss Norgate's Angevin Kings, I., 377, and art. "Henry II.," in Dict. of Natl. Biogr., XXVI., 1. Reginald, earl of Cornwall, called FitzRoy, a natural son of Henry I., created earl of Cornwall by the empress, d. 1175. Manser, or Manasser, Biset, dapifer of Henry II., founded the hospital of Maiden Bradley, Wiltshire, for leprous women, and endowed it with the manor of Bradley, which he had with his wife Alice, possibly herself a leper, and with the advowson of the church of Kidderminster, Worcestershire, Monasticon, VI., 644. He was alive in 1156. Guarinus, or Warren, FitzGerold, chamberlain and treasurer, probably grandson, and certainly representative of Robert FitzGerold, who, in 1086, held estates in Hampshire, Dorsetshire, and elsewhere, and a manor in Horethorne hundred, Somerset, and was perhaps brother of Edward of Salisbury, see Nos. 38, 40. Warren, d. 1158.

No. 69. Thomas, chancellor, called Becket, appointed 1155, consec. to Canterbury, May 27, 1162, and resigned chancellorship, martyred Dec. 29, 1170. Richard de Humez, constable of Normandy, lord of Stamford and other places, was alive in 1173, Gesta, Henry II. (Rolls Ser.), I., 51.

No. 70. On the margin of the page, at the beginning of this document is written in a fifteenth-century hand, "Ista virgata terræ jacet in descensu montis de Launcesdon, in sinistra (sic) manu in eundum versus Hameswell et vide de historia ejusdem in alio Registro ubi sic inceptit Edwardus dei gratia, etc." Launcesdona, i.e. Lansdown Hill. Hameswell in Escsentona, or Cold Ashton, see Nos. 9, 13. Eustace, archdeacon in 1150, see No. 76.

No. 71. Robert, Warelwast, nephew of Bp. William Warelwast, was consec. Bp. of Exeter June 5, 1155, d. 1160. Baantona, i.e. Bampton, as before.

No. 72. The first part of this document, the Confessor's charter, is given by Kemble (C.D., No. 811), but with some slight differences, and apparently from another MS. The division into paragraphs is made here for convenience. The note as to time, made by the original compiler, seems to fix the date of this part of the MS. as 1218, but he seems to have been ill-informed as to the date of the coming of the Normans, and the meaning of the last words on the page is obscure.

No. 73. The entries in this schedule nearly correspond, so far as they go, with those in the Exon. Domesday, pp. 172, 173. There are, however, some differences more or less noteworthy between the two lists. These may sufficiently be indicated by comparing the entries relating to the first two estates, Weston and Ford (Bathford), omitting merely trifling differences in the order of the sentences.

Westona.—For “cocetos,” Exon. Domesday has “bordarios,” as in Exchequer Domesday. After “CC. oves” Exon. Domesday omits “et IIII.” For “pascuæ” Exon. Domesday has “nemusculi,” which in Exchequer Domesday appears as “silvæ minutæ.” In the note of value Exon. Domesday reads “valet per annum x.lib., et quando abbas accepit valebat viii.lib.,” while in Exchequer book we have the sums given here, “valuit viii.lib. Modo x.lib.”

Forda.—After the words “in dominio v. hidas,” Exon. Domesday goes on, “et ibi ii carruæ;” for “homines” it has “villani,” and inserts “vi carruæ.” For “cocetos” it has “bordarios,” for “pascuæ” it has “nemusculi.” Moreover, as in the Exchequer book, the value at the two dates is made “x.lib.”

No. 74. For its flat contradiction of the unfortunate assertions made by the late eminent historian Freeman, in his History of the Cathedral Church of Wells, pp. 44-47, the importance of this document will at once be acknowledged. Adrianus is Hadrian, IV. (Nicolas Brakspeare), pope, Dec. 4, 1154—Sept. 1, 1159. R., i.e. Robert, Bp. of Bath (1135-1166). The places enumerated are all noted elsewhere in this vol. For Hernemuda, see No. 53, n. The date of this charter is Jan. 21, 1156. Hadrian was then at Benevento, where he invested the Norman William with the kingdom of Sicily and the duchy of Apulia, William in return engaging to defend him against his enemies, that is, specially against the Emperor Frederick Barbarossa, see Cardin. de Aragon, ap. S.S. Ital. III., 445. Roland, cardinal-priest, tit. St. Mark, and chancellor of the Apostolic see, became pope as Alexander III., Sept. 24, 1159, d. Mar. 17, 1179.

No. 75. William, a former freehold tenant of the priory having become a monk, obtained the recognition by the convent of his heir Wulfwine as his successor to the estate along with the rights of pasture pertaining thereto. This recognition was of course made in the chapter-house of the priory. It seems evident from the fact that this deed was approved and ratified by the papal chancery that Bp. Robert had employed brethren from Bath as his messengers to the pope to obtain his confirmation of the possessions and rights of the church of Bath (as in No. 74), and it is not improbable that prior Benedict was one of those sent on this errand. He d. either in this or the following year, for Peter occurs prior in 1157, see Hist. Mon. S. Petri Glouc., II., 106. Alexander de Montfort held two knights' fees under the earl of Gloucester in 1168, Lib. Niger (Hearne), I., 162; his estate seems to have been the vill of Wellow, Kirby's Quest, p. 12. William Hosat occurs in the same record as a joint holder with two others of a knight's fee, while a Geoffrey Hosat held a whole fee, both under the bishop of Bath, a Geoffrey Hosat also held a knight's fee under William de Mohun, and next to his name comes Ralph Hosat, holder of a like fee, who may possibly be the Radulfus Rufus of this document. Wyk is probably for Bathwick. Churton is for Chewton, possibly Chewton Keynsham. Asketil de Chewton was a benefactor to, and a monk of the priory, see Lincoln's Inn MS., No. 808, p. 160. Alured, the Bp.'s moneyer. Robert FitzVivian gave land in the city of Bath to the priory, see Lincoln's Inn MS., No. 180, p. 160.

No. 76. Thomas, prior, succeeded Oct. 1223, d. June 23, 1261. Elias Cotel held Camerton of the Bishop, the manor of Croscombe, and Priestleigh in Doulting. Paulton, ten miles south-west of Bath. Litteltona, perhaps Littelton in the parish of Wellow. Balun, a branch of this family, of which we have had notice before, appears to have settled in the hundred of Wellow. Whittockesmede, a hamlet of Wellow. Ekewick, i.e. Ashwick, three miles north-east of Shepton Mallet, in the hundred of Kilmersdon. Cridelyncote, i.e. Credlington, in Dunkerton, about five miles south-west of Bath.

Bath Chartulary.

Thomas, Prior, &c., present their clerk, Master Henry de Bath, to the church of Olveston, and pray W., Bishop of Worcester, to institute him to the rectory, in accordance with the decree of Pope Innocent, of 3 Nov., in the eleventh year of his pontificate, with reference to the presentation and admission of fit persons to benefices held by persons born out of the realm. Reserved to themselves a payment of twenty shillings from the said church and half mark from the chapel of Aleweston. Notwithstanding their right under the decree Sir Theobald, Archdeacon of Liége, born out of the realm, still holds the church by provision of the Pope. Bath. Nativity of the B.V.M., 1254.

P. 42. 159. Inspeximus of Thomas, Prior, &c., of letters patent of W., Bishop of Bath and Wells, declaring that, in consideration of services and advice rendered, and to be rendered, he takes John de Cheam, the Pope's chaplain, to be his clerk and domestic, and grants him twenty pound a year from himself and his successors, to be received by him, his proctor, or assign, and for this binds Thomas, Prior, and the Convent of Bath and Giles, Dean, and the Chapter of Wells. At Glastonbury, 13 Kal. Mar., 1255.

P. 43. 160. Inspeximus by Thomas, Prior, &c., of letters of W., Bishop of Bath and Wells, that the Abbot and Convent of S. Augustine's of Bristol have solemnly propounded before him and the Chapters of Bath and of Wells their charters relating to the churches of Portburi, Tykenham, Clivedon, Werre, and Poulet, and that he, moved by divers reasons, and that they may be able to entertain the poor that flock to them, assents to these charters. Reserved a competent support to the Vicars. Wells, 5 Id. April, 1257. Assent of Thomas, Prior, &c., notes the importance of S. Augustine's as a place of hospitality for the poor who, as the house stands on a common road (portu), come thither in great multitude. Bath, Id. Apr., 1257.

161. Inspeximus by Thomas, Prior, &c., of a charter of W., Bishop of Bath and Wells, confirming to the Prior and Canons of Berlyz the charter of John, lord of Hilleferun, granting them the church of that vill, and noting the poverty of the Canons, who had scarcely enough for the inmates of their house, and for the poor, who came in great numbers to the church of Hilleferun [so in MS.]. The Convent to take possession on the avoidance of the then Rector, Henry de Stoke. Reserved the Bishop's ordinance concerning a competent provision for the Vicar. Witnesses:—Master W. de Sto Quintino, Archdeacon of Taunton. John de Button, Provost of Cumbe, John de Derham, and Adam de Mora, Canons of Wells, Master Daniel de Yelmester, Rector of the church of Wemedon, and Robert de Sto Quintino, Stephen, Rector of the church of Curirivel, Master Stephen and Gilbert our chaplains, and others. 7 Kal. Maii, 1257, ninth year of our pontificate. Assent dated Bath, Vigil of SS. Simeon and Jude, same year.

162. Grant by Thomas, Prior, &c., to Stephen de Inglesbache, their servant, a corrody for life, viz., each day, &c. (as no. 128). If he remains in their service half mark of silver to be paid by the cellarer.

Letter of excuse sent to the Lord the King.

P. 53. 190. Serenissimo Domino Henrico &c. Thomas, prior, &c. Cum a vestræ regiæ dignitatis sublimitate licentia eligendi nobis pastorem et episcopum, quam erga nos et alios religiosos [illegible] benignitate fuisset concessa, nuntii nostri ad nos die Jovis proxima ante Purificationem redeuntibus, diem Veneris proximum post festum Purificationis ad eligendum præfiximus, nobis prospicere et diversis periculis obviare cupientes, præcipue periculo imminenti constitutionis qua cavetur ne ultra tres menses Cathedralis ecclesia prælato non vacet, infra quos, justo impedimento cessante, si electio celebrata non fuerit, qui eligere debuerant eligendi potestate careant hac vice. Die igitur præfixo secundum formam mandati vestri, cui pro omni posse parere desideravimus et desideramus, elegimus in episcopum nostrum personam, ut firmiter credimus, Deo acceptum, et episcopatus regimini et officio sufficientem, et vobis fidelem, et regno vestro utilem, existentem sc. magistrum Robertum [sic], Precentorem Sarum. cujus eminentem scientiam, morum et conversationis honestatem, vobis et concilio vestro acceptam et commendatam divina, ut speramus, reddet providentia. Qui, diligenti habito deliberatione, de consiliis Decani et fratrum Capituli Sarum, propositis coram eisdem fratribus jure Bathoniæ ecclesiæ et tota processione, et negotiis dictam electionem contingentibus, electioni de se factæ concessit in dictorum fratrum presentia. Duodecimo autem die post dictum diem electionis fuit speciale mandatum pro domino P., Thesaurario vestro directum, primo nobis oblatum per P. clericum : vicesimo autem die post memoratam diem electionis fuerit iterato nobis aliæ litteræ exhibitæ per Nicholaum servientem. Quibus temporibus nullo modo factum nostrum mutare potuimus. Vestram igitur devote et humiliter pedibus vestræ pietatis provoluti rogamus clementiam, quatinus impossibilitatem nostram, divinæ caritatis intuitu, velitis habere excusatam, cum in omnibus quæ nostræ fuerint possibilitatis vestris parati simus affectuose parere mandatis. Valeat &c.

Letter of excuse sent to the Lady the Queen.

191. Alienoræ, Dei gratia, reginæ, &c., Thomas prior &c.

This letter after stating the election of the precentor of Sarum, and his consent with the advice of the Chapter of Sarum, somewhat more shortly than in the letter to the King, but virtually in the same terms, proceeds :— Duodecimo autem die post dictam diem electionis primo ad nos pervenerunt nuntii vestri mandatum vestrum speciale pro domino P., Thesaurario Domini Regis, nobis deferentes. Quo quidem tempore factum nostrum, ob multiplices rationes quas fidele concilium vestrum vobis poterit ostendere, nullo modo potuimus mutare. Vestram igitur devote rogamus clementiam, quatinus super eo quod tunc mandatum vestrum facere non potuimus, nos habere velitis excusatos et inculpabiles, cum in omnibus quæ nostræ fuerint possibilitatis desideramus vestris parere mandatis. Valeat &c.

P. 54. 192. Reverendo Domino &c., W. Dei gratia Eboracensi Archiepiscopo, Angliæ primati &c., Thomas, prior &c. Cum post decessum venerabilis patris nostri J. quondam Bathon. episcopi a sublimitate regia licentiam obtinuerimus elegendi, nos de unanimi assensu capituli nostri die Veneris proxima post Purificationem B.M. magistrum Rogerum, Precentorem Sarum., nobis in pastorem et patrem elegerimus, et ipse electioni de se factæ consenserit, et cum dicta electio celebrata fuerit duodecimo die ante susceptionem litterarum Domini Regis et Reginæ pro domino P. Chaceporc nobis oblatarum, et eisdem illud significaverimus, et ita non possemus a facto nostro resilire, cum per mutuum consensum eligentium et electi spirituale contrahitur matrimonium, sicut melius nobis vestra novit excellentia, vestram affectuose rogamus clementiam, humiliter et devote supplicantes quatinus super eo quod mandatum vestrum ad preseus exaudire non possumus, nos excusatos habere velitis, cum in omnibus quæ nostræ fuerint possibilitatis &c. Valeat &c.

193. Illustrissimo Domino Henrico, Dei gratia regi Angliæ &c., Thomas prior &c. Cum vestræ regiæ dignitatis sublimitati alias humiliter et devote significaverimus qualiter per duodecim dies ante receptionem mandati vestri pro venerabili viro, Domino P., Thesaurario vestro, Magistrum Rogerum, Precentorem Sarum, personam, ut credimus, Deo acceptum, et episcopalis regiminis officio sufficientem, et vobis fidelem, et regno vestro utilem existentem, Spiritus Sancti gratia invocata, canonicè elegerimus, et ipse electioni de se factæ consenserit, qui etiam vestræ excellentiæ præsentatus pro jure suo per procuratorem suum ad sedem Apostolicam appellaverit in præsentia vestra, pedibus vestræ pietatis provoluti vestram in Domino humiliter et devote rogamus clementiam quatinus, divinæ caritatis intuitu nos excusatos habere velitis, quod ad electionem aliam procedere non possimus quæ de jure possit consequi effectum, cum, pendente appellatione ab electo nostro facta, nichil facto electionis possit innovari, nec matrimonium inter ecclesiam nostram per consensum eligentium et electi nostri spiritualiter contractum sola nostra voluntate possit dissolvi, &c. Valeat &c.

194. A., &c., Reginæ Angliæ &c., Thomas &c. Cum Domino nostro Regi et vobis alias humiliter et devote significaverimus qualiter per duodecim dies ante receptionem mandati vestri pro venerabili viro Domino P. Chaceporc nobis directi magistrum Rogerum, Precentorem Sarum., personam, ut credimus, Deo acceptam &c., canonicè elegerimus, et ipse electioni de se factæ consenserit; qui etiam Domino nostro regi presentatus pro jure suo per procuratorem suum ad sedem Apostolicam in presentia ipsius appellaverit, pedibus vestræ pietatis provoluti vestram in Domino humiliter et devote rogamus clementiam quatinus, divinæ caritatis intuitu nos excusatos habere velitis quod ad electionem aliam procedere non possimus, nec matrimonium inter ecclesiam nostram per consensum eligentium et electi nostri spiritualiter contractum possimus dissolvere, &c. Valeat, &c.

P. 55. 195. Appointment by Thomas, Prior, &c., of Thomas de Theok', Precentor of the church of Bath, and Master Simon, the clerk, as their proctors to plead on their behalf for their rights, and for the election of Master Roger, Precentor of Salisbury, against the canons of Wells or others. Dated at Bath on the 8th of the Ides of June, 1243.

196. Sanctissimo patri I. Dei gratia summo pontifici &c., Thomas, Prior, &c. Cum bonæ memoriæ Joscelinus episcopus noster viam universæ carnis fuisset ingressus, nos prius impetrato assensu regio, prout moris est, vocatis ad electionem vocandis, die ad electionem celebrandam in ecclesia nostra Cathedrali Bathoniæ præfixo, ut de præficiendo nobis episcopo tractaremus, in capitulo ecclesiæ nostræ convenimus ymno Dominico prius cantato, invocata Spiritus Sancti gratia, post diutinam et diligentem deliberationem placuit omnibus nobis et singulis via compromissi dictæ ecclesiæ nostræ viduatæ de pastore providere, et sic de communi voluntate omnium elegimus tres de collegio nostro viros fidedignos, quibus potestatem dedimus ut ipsi vice omnium de pastore et episcopo providerent ecclesiæ nostræ viduatæ. Qui, inter se habito tractatu diligenti, magistrum Rogerum, Precentorem Sarum, virum idoneum, litteratum, et discretum communiter, unanimiter, et canonice in episcopum elegerunt, quam electionem Domino Regi pro assensu ejus habenda presentaverimus, pedibus itaque vestræ Sanctitatis provoluti qualiter possumus devotione supplicamus, quatinus electionem nostram supradictam, concurrente populo, et cleri assensu, canonice celebratam, auctoritate Apostolica confirmare dignemini ne, quod absit, si ecclesia nostra diu pastoris provisione caruerit, irreperabiliter tam in spiritualibus quam in temporalibus jacturam incurrat. Ad hanc etiam electionem Sanctitati vestræ presentandam et ad ejusdem electionis confirmationem postulandam dilectos fratres et monachos nostros Thomam Precentorem ecclesiæ nostræ, et Gilbertum de Dunestorra procuratores constituimus. Ratum et gratum habituri quicquid ipsi ambo, vel eorum alter quem in presentia Sanctitatis vestræ esse contigerit &c. In Capitulo Cathedralis ecclesiæ nostræ. 15 Kal. Oct. 1243. Conservet &c.

P. 56. 197. Appointment of Thomas the Precentor, and Gilbert de Dunestor, proctors of the Prior and Convent of Bath in the court of Rome, concerning the election of Roger, Precentor of Salisbury as Bishop of Bath. Dated at Bath 15 Kal. Oct. 1243.

P. 249. 660. Writ to take the Inquisition as below. Dated Tower of London, 13 April, 16 Edward II.

661. Inquisition taken at Bristoll, on Sunday the morrow of St. Barnabas the Apostle, 16 Edward II., before William de Bourne, and John de Hampton, in the presence of Richard de Crekkelade, deputy of Robert de Aston, late warden of the lands and tenements of Roger Crok and Henry, son of William, in Olveston, by Geoffrey Broun and John Phelyp, by the oath of David le Blount, J. de Alkeleye, J. de Staunden, Roger Corbet, William Atehay, Robert de Hawe, John de Weston, John de Oldebury, Richard de Alkeleye, Roger de Hambrok, William de Ever', and Richard Pessom, who say that the Prior, &c., received 6 l., annual rent from certain lands and tenements which were of Roger Crok and Henry, son of William, now deceased, in Olveston, as in right of their church, from time immemorial, by the hands of Roger Crok and Henry, son of William, and their ancestors. And that Robert de Aston, warden of the lands and tenements aforesaid, because the said Roger and Henry were said to have adhered to the enemies and rebels of the said King, took the same into the hands of the King.

662. Grant by Edward II., to W., Bishop of Exeter, his treasurer, of all the lands and tenements which were of Peter Crok, in the county of Gloucester, which by the forfeiture of Roger Crok, son and heir of the aforesaid Peter, came into the hands of the King, and also all the lands which Isabella, wife of the aforesaid Peter, held in dower of the same inheritance in the county aforesaid, because the same Isabella, adhered to the enemies and rebels of the King. To hold for his life. Witness the King at York, the 6th day of May, 16 Edward II.

663. Writ by Edward II., directed to Robert de Aston, warden of certain lands and tenements in the hands of the King, in the county of Gloucester, commanding him to make to the Prior, &c., due allowance in his account of the rents of the above mentioned lands and tenements, while they were in the King's hands. Witness the King at York, 27 June, 16 Edward II.

666. Writ to the Sheriff of Somerset and Dorset that by two lawful men of his bailiwick he summon the Prior of Bath to answer the King concerning 260 li. of the arrears of 20 li. of the farm of Berton from the Morrow of St. John the Baptist, 19 Edward I, at which time Alianora, formerly Queen of England, "our grandmother," who held that farm in dower, died, to Easter, 32 Edward I, when the said 20 li. was granted in dower to Margaret, then Queen of England. And of 120 li. of arrears of the same farm from 14 February, 11 Edward II, when the said Margaret died, to the Feast of St. Michael next following, and of the same farm hereafter to be charged. And of 30 li. a year of the farm of the city of Bath which the aforesaid Alianora held in dower from the aforesaid Morrow of St. John, and whereof it appears that the aforesaid Prior held the aforesaid city and Berton for the farm of 50 li. a year, as appears in the Pipe Roll, 5 Edward I. The Prior makes reply that by Charter of King John (which is set out) he holds the said Berton. And he is prepared to satisfy the rent of 20 li. And as there appears in the Rolls of the Exchequer of 5 Edward I, a writ of the King directed to the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer, acquainting them that the King had granted to Robert, Prior, &c., the said city with appurtenances in perpetual alms, free and quit of all secular service, in exchange for the service of all the lands and fees and the patronage of Glastonbury Abbey, therefore, as to the 30 li., the said Prior is not held to answer. And as to the 20 li, as the said Prior has undertaken to pay the same, he may have respite in the meantime.

P. 251. 667. Plea between Master Adam de Burleye, Parson of the church of Chyu, and the Prior of Bath, concerning forty marks of rent, and an annual rent of ten marks due to him. The Prior, by John de Comb, his attorney, says, that Jocelin, formerly Bishop of Bath and Glastonbury, and patron of the said church of Chyu, in 3 R[ichard I] granted to Robert, Prior of Bath, and his successors, ten marks yearly from the aforesaid church ; and Hugh de Wilton then parson of the said church promised to pay the same. And that John, Dean, &c., of Wells confirmed the same grant. And that the aforesaid Robert, Prior of Bath, and all his successors have received the aforesaid rent by the hands of the parsons of the church of Chyu. P. 262. 696. Letter from the Prior, &c., to the Pope J, on behalf of R., Bishop of Bath and Wells (not perfectly legible, and somewhat difficult to understand), sets forth the Bishop's virtues and zeal for the Church, requests the Pope not to listen to the false report of his enemies that he had caused himself to be consecrated in contempt of a papal reservation; for he would not do such a thing "for all the bishoprics in the realm of England." The story was a fabrication of malignant and jealous persons. He was canonically elected by the two Chapters of Bath and Wells, and no man can find crime or defect in him. He is learned, grave, of good report, and steadfast in adversity; no one could be more fit for the office, or a higher one. The Pope is prayed to confirm him in his office.

P. 263. 697. Memorandum that Robert, Prior, &c., in the Octaves of SS. Peter and Paul, 5 Edward III., granted to Henry de Bathonia and Matilda, his wife, for term of their lives, five acres of arable land in Dudelmor, in the manor of Lyncomb, and in the field of Weston next Lox', two acres of arable land, and half an acre of meadow in Yomede.

Pleas of the Exchequer, Hilary Term, 2 Edward III.

P. 287. 746. Reciting that Edward II. by his writ to the Barons of the Exchequer, set out that it was shewn, on the part of the Prior, &c., of Bath, that they held all their lands and tenements in Olveston and Coldeashton in the county of Gloucester, in free and perpetual alms, and not by knight service, and ought not to supply any aid on the marriage of the eldest daughter of the said King from those lands. The King commanded them, therefore, to see by what tenure the said Prior holds the aforesaid lands. The aforesaid Prior, by John Tydilmynton, his attorney, now comes and says that he ought not to be distrained in the aforesaid premises for the said aid and prays remedy. And the King commanded scrutiny to be made of the Rolls of the Memoranda of the Exchequer as to this. And it was further commanded that William de Stowe, clerk of the Exchequer, should make inquisition concerning the premises, &c. And the said William de Stowe, sent to the Exchequer in Michaelmas term, 4 Edward III., the inquisition by him taken by the oath of William de Pyreton, John de Staunden, and others, who say that the aforesaid Prior holds, and his predecessors held, all their lands and tenements in the vill of Olveston and Coldeashton in free and perpetual alms, as of the foundation of their said house, and not by knight service. And that they do not hold any lands in the said vill by knight service. And it was found upon examination of the Rolls for Gloucester, that forty shillings were required from the Prior, for aid for marrying the eldest daughter of the said King Edward for one knight's fee in Olveston and Ashton. And the said Prior seeks discharge from the aid from his lands and tenements in Coldeashton, and not in Ashton. And afterwards on 8 July, 7 Edward III., the King directed another writ for an inquisition concerning the premises, and in the Octaves of St. Michael next following inquisition was taken by William de Stowe by the oath of John Atehall, Robert Burnel, and others, who say that the vill of Ayshton known at the time of the foundation of the Priory of Bath, as Ayston, is the same vill which is now called Coldeayshton, and that neither the Prior nor his predecessors had any lands or tenements in any other vill called Ayshton, in the county of Gloucester. Therefore it is considered the Prior be discharged and quit from the aforesaid forty shillings.

P. 290. 747. Entry from the Pipe Roll of 6 Edward III.

810. Memorandum quod cum corredia singulorum fratrum obeuntium anno sequenti obitum eorundem in pane, viz., cervisia et coquina, pro eorum animabus distribui consueverunt ab antiquo, venerabilis pater Dominus Robertus de Cloppecote, Dei gratia Prior hujus loci, intima compassione divinitus inspiratus, volens fratrum suorum animabus futuris temporibus maturius et plenius subvenire, cameram fratrum, ubicumque obeuntium, anno ipsorum obitum subsequente pro eorum animabus in locis quibus obierint distribui constituit in futurum. Ita videlicet quod de xiis. vid. celebrentur quinque tricennalia. Infra octabas subsequentium festivitatum, Natalis, viz., Domini, Epiphaniæ, Purificationis, et Annunciationis B. Mariæ, Paschæ, Ascensionis Domini, Pentecostes, Trinitatis, Assumptionis et Nativitatis B. Mariæ, de singulis festis, tres missæ celebrentur, cum collecta, pro fratre vel fratribus ipso anno defunctis. Et de xd. residuis in anniversario fratris vel fratrum defunctorum, x psalteria decantentur. Ad quod fideliter faciendum, ex assensu totius Capituli, ordinavit quod Supprior, qui pro tempore fuerit, adjuncto sibi altero quem totus Conventus duxerit eligendum, cameram primum terminum fratrum obitum subsequentem in proxima dictarum festivitatum per manus camerarii, qui pro tempore fuerit, plenarie recipiant. Terminis subsequentibus, suis temporibus observatis, qui dictas missas ordine prænotato suo periculo fideliter facient celebrari et psalteria decantari. Apud Dunster' et Hyberniam Priores locorum suo periculo præmissa faciant observari. Et ut tam pia ordinatio et salubris compensio perpetuis temporibus immobiliter observetur, tam dictus Prior quam totus Conventus sententiam excommunicationis in omnes contravenientes, si qui decætero fuerint, quod absit, unanimiter promulgarunt, statueruntque quod ipsa ordinatio in missali majoris altaris dictorum locorum et in martirologio Bathoniensi inseratur, in literaque publica sigillo capituli consignata ad perpetuam rei memoriam in Thesaurario reponenda, tam laudabile factum irrevocabile testimonium sorciata facta ante fuit ordinatio antedicta (sic) in festo Assumptionis Beatæ Mariæ anno Domini 1316.

811. Memorandum quod fratres Rogerus de Anna et Robertus de Radynges, monachi ecclesiæ Bathoniensis, honestatis zelæ divinitus insperati, considerantesque quod exequiæ monachorum, ac etiam fratrum conversorum, in dicta ecclesia obeuntium, retroactis temporibus minus honeste fiebant, unde et quendam annum redditum sex solidorum, de quadam domo extra portam Avonæ proveniente, pro exequiis monachorum et fratrum melius et honestius futuris temporibus faciendis adquisierunt, et eundem, interveniente consensu et voluntate piæ memoriæ Roberti de Clopcote, tunc Prioris Bathoniensis, ac ejusdem loci Conventus, officio camerario assiduaverunt. Ita videlicet quod camerarius qui pro tempore fuerit in obitu cujuscunque monachi in dicta ecclesia obeuntis xxxvi cereos tenetur invenire; in obitu vero cujuscunque fratris conversi duodecim. Die vero Sancti Johannis Evangelistæ, ad altare ejusdem, quinquaginta cereos ad processionem et ad missam ardentem tenetur invenire; unum cereum continue ardentem a primis vesperis usque post complectorium diei sequentis. Ac etiam die Sancti Johannes ante Portam Latinam inveniet idem camerarius unum cereum continue ardentem a primis vesperis usque post complectorium diei sequentis. In die vero Sanctæ Katerinæ ad processionem primarum vesperarum et ad missam, dicenda est solempniter, in capella ejusdem xxxvi cereos ardentem; in festivitibus vero Sanctorum Alphegi, Leonardi, et Egidii, ad processionem videlicet cujuslibet istorum sanctorum et ad missam xxiv; persolvatque prænomatus camerarius duodecim d. duodecim clericis psalteria sua psallentibus die Sancti Johannis ante Portam Latinam, totidemque die Sanctæ Katerinæ Virginis pro anima reverendi patris Domini Roberti de Clopcote, qui huic suum pie præbuit assensum, necnon pro animabus fratrum Rogeri de Anna et Roberti de Radynges, ac pro animabus omnium fratrum in dicta ecclesia obeuntium, et pro animabus omnium fidelium defunctorum. Et ut tam pia ordinatio perpetuis temporibus inviolabiliter et inconcusse observetur tam dictus Prior quam totus Conventus sententiam excommunicationis in omnes contravenientes, si qui decætero fuerint, quod absit, unanimiter promulgarunt.

Memorandum that on the Feast of St. Andrew the Apostle, 5 Richard II., William atte Walle, son and heir of John atte Walle, deceased, did homage to the Prior, &c., at Bath, for half a virgate of land which he held in Saltemerssch, in the Manor of Olveston, in the presence of brother Nicholas Vynour, chaplain of the Prior, John Shete, William Ricardes, John Tyntenhull, John Sexteyn, of Olveston, and William Coul, of Olveston.

P. 388. 913. Plea at Westminster, in the Quindenes of Hilary, 29 Edward III., concerning the nonæ of sheaves, fleeces, and lambs, levied upon the Prior, &c., by statute of 40 Edward III., for the business of the King beyond the seas.

P. 394. 914. Writ by Edward III., to the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer to acquit the Prior, &c., from the payment of forty shillings from their lands and tenements in Olveston, and Coldayshton, in aid of making the King's son a knight, if it should appear that the said lands were held in free and perpetual alms, and not by knight service. Dated at Bamburgh, 28 January, 30 Edward III.

915. Further documents setting out the dealings with the above to the same effect as before is set out.

P. 396. 916. Grant by [the Prior, &c.], to John Osebern, the elder of Stretlye, of a corrody in the Priory of Dunster. Dated 5 Kl., Jan. 1357.

917. Presentation by John, sub-prior, &c., of Sir John de Melkesham, priest, to the vicarage of the B. Mary de Stall, of the city of Bath. Dated 31 July, 1359.

918. Confirmation by Edward [III.] of the possession of Nicholas de Forde, parson of the church of Olveston, of the same church. Dated 24 January, 34 [Edward III].

P. 397. 919. Lease for life from John, Prior, &c., to Robert Gyene, burgess of Bristol, in consideration of 100 li. of the Manor of Olveston, except the advowson of the church, at the rent of one rose by the year for all service, with power to purchase during the said term. Dated 5 April, 7 Edward III.

P. 398. 920. Power of attorney, by John, Prior, &c., to John de Weston, Thomas de Ford, and John, his brother, to deliver to Robert Gyene, burgess of Bristoll, seizin of the Manor of Olveston, save the advowson of the church, for the term of five years. Dated 16 April, 18 Edward III.

921. Lease from John, Prior, &c., to Robert Gyene, burgess of Bristoll, for the term of five years, of the Manor of Olveston, except the advowson of the church of the same; rendering one rose at the Feast of St. John the Baptist for all services, saving royalties. Dated 16 April, 18 Edward III.

922. Writ to Simon Basset, escheator in the county of Gloucester, to take the following inquisition. Dated 20 April, 18 Edward III. [See nos. 858, 859.]

P. 399. 923. P. 401. 927. Plea at Westminster, in the quinzaine of Easter, 28 Edward III, as to the Prior's right to present to the church of Olveston. Mentions the presentation by Robert de Clopcote, formerly Prior, of William Gelden, now deceased, to the same church, and the lease of the manor of Olveston to Robert Gyen.

It is considered that the King shall present to the said church by reason of the forfeiture of the aforesaid Robert Gyen.

P. 402. 928. Pardon by Edward III. to the Prior, &c., for having leased to Robert de Gyene the advowson of the church of Olveston without licence. Dated 10 May, 28 Edward III.

P. 403. 929. Inquisition taken at Bristol, Thursday next after the Feast of St. Valentine. The jury say that Robert de Gyene held no lands or tenements in the county of Somerset in his demesne as of fee or by service of the King, nor of others, on the day he died, but that he held the Manor of Olveston, and the advowson of the church there, for term of his life and two years next following. And they say that the same Robert died on 21 January. And that Robert Gyene is his next heir and of full age.

930. Writ of certiorari by the King to John de Weston, escheator of Gloucester, to take the following inquisition. Dated 18 May, 28 Edward III.

P. 404. 931. Inquisition taken at Olveston, 25 May, 28 Edward III., by the oath of Nicholas Poyntz, Richard Alkeleye, Peter Crok, John Sexteyn, Walter Mathon, John Bosse, William Parys, Richard Haynes, Miles Brut', John Parmerter, William Southmed, and John Thony, who say that Robert Gyene, of Bristol, held the Manor of Olveston, and the advowson of the church there, for term of his life only, by lease of John, Prior, &c. And that the said Manor with the advowson is worth 24 li. 4*s.* 6*d.* in all issues.

P. 405. 932. Writ to John de Weston, late escheator of Gloucester, reciting that the Manor of Olveston with the advowson of the church was taken into the hands of the King by reason of debts due by Robert Gyene, and that it was found by inquisition that the said Robert held the same for term of his life and for two years next following. But whereas by a further inquisition, it was found that the said Robert held the same for term of his life only, it has been commanded to William de Leden, now escheator, that he do not further meddle with the issues of the same, but to deliver any such issues since the death of the said Robert, to the Prior, &c. Dated 2 July, 28 Edward III.

P. 406. 933. Writ, in accordance with the above, to William de Leden, escheator of Gloucester. Dated 2 July, 28 Edward III.

934. Letters Patent by Edward III., to Nicholas de Ford, parson of the church of Olveston, confirming him in his possession of the same church.

P. 407. 935. Writ to the Prior, &c., to give the oath to John de Sancto Laudo, the elder, on his appointment as sheriff and escheator of the counties of Somerset and Dorset. Dated 12 April, 29 Edward III.

936. Form of the oath mentioned in the foregoing.

P. 408. 937. Letter from Ralph, Bishop of Bath and Wells, to his beloved sons of Bath and Radeclyve, reciting a letter, dated 9 June, 29 Edward III., from the King, that a treaty was made near Calais, between him and his adversary, the King of France, by the aid of the papal nuncios, but seeing that the treaty was only to his own confusion, he is compelled to resume the war, he therefore asks for the prayers of the faithful in favour of his expedition. The Bishop thereupon orders that prayers be accordingly said in every parish, and an indulgence be granted. Dated at Wyvelescomb, 19 June, 1355.

P. 409. 938. Plea in Hilary term, 20 Edward III., by which the Prior, &c., are attached to answer William de la Pole, of 800 li., which the said Prior by his bond dated the morrow of St. Martin, 14 Edward III., bound himself to pay. Judgment and damages for William de la Pole.

P. 410. 939. Pleas heard at Bristol on Tuesday in the first week of Lent, 26 Edward III. The Jury present that John de Iford, Ivord (sic), Prior, and Thomas de Brueton monk, of Bath, John Strete, and Robert Gyen, on Saturday next after the Feast of St. Peter in Cathedra, 26 Edward III., being in the chamber of the said Robert at Bath did bind themselves by oath, that they would each maintain the quarrel of another to the disturbance of the justices' commands and the evasion of the law ; therefore they were committed to the custody of the Marshall. The Prior and John Strete are acquitted.

940. Grant by John, Prior, &c., to Humphrey Stafford, Lord Stafford of Southwyk, knight, of one close of land in Dunster called le Lynche, lying next the chapel of St. Michael the Archangel, of Alcomb, on the east. Witnesses:—Sir Richard Chokke, knight, John Cheyne, Esquire, John Byconyll, John More, and others.

P. 411. 941. Appointment by John, Prior, &c., of John de Bloxham, monk of Bath, and William Sawndehull, citizen of Waterford, as guardians and administrators of all their things and possessions, spiritual and temporal, in Ireland. Dated 16 Kal., Oct., 1357.

P. 412. 942. Memorandum that on 21 July, 1483, Edmund Gyll, Master of the Hospital of St. John the Baptist of Bath, resigned his office into the hands of Peter Pope, bailiff of the Prior, &c., and on the 24th day of the same month, the Prior appointed in his place, Robert Alday, chaplain. Witnesses:—Master Thomas Ovaray, precentor of Wells, Dom. John Cantlow, sacristan of Bath, Master William Fluet, notary public, John Walche, Esquire, and many others.

943. Memorandum that on the 8th day of November, 1520, William Bridde, Prior, &c., appointed Master James Horton, B.C.L., Master of the Hospital of St. John the Baptist of Bath, after the death of Robert Alday, last Master there. Witnesses:—Dom. David Pensford, sub-prior of Bath, Dom. Richard Widecombe, cellarer of Bath, Master William Fluet, rector of the church of St. James, Laurence Leche, citizen of Bath, Edward Irland, gentleman, and many others.

The figures refer to the numbers affixed to the documents calendared in the text.

Vocifer
P. 1. Hugh Witon, see No. 4. Parmeter from parmentarius, a parchment maker. Giffardestoc and Giffard, see No. 4. Prikiere, the rider. Boston, a centre of German trade in England, where the Germans had a hanse house; it was one of the chief ports for the exportation of wool in the 13th and 14th century. The fair (nundinæ S. Botulphi), which began on November 30, was one of the most important in England; for the concourse of foreigners to it in the time of Henry III., see Matt. Paris, Chron. Maj., V., 240, 453 (Rolls ser.). Boston was made a staple-town in 1363. Kihavene, i.e., Keyhaven, in Milford parish, Hampshire, three miles from Lymington. St. Ædelm, i.e. Aldhelm, bishop of Sherborne, d. 709. Day of deposition, May 25.

No. 1. G., is Prior Gilbert, contemp. with Alexander, dean of Wells, 1180-1209. St. James, near the South gate of Bath. Dean, here a clerical officer appointed by the bishop as his deputy, and called decanus ruralis, or episcopi, or Christianitatis. Dean, also the title of the head of a non-monastic cathedral, or other collegiate, chapter. In Benedictine houses every ten monks were under the charge of a disciplinary officer or dean, and so the number of monks in a house determined the number of its sub-priors who discharged this decanal office.

No. 3. Aiston, i.e., Cold Ashton, Glouc. Recorda, this reference is to the Memoranda Rolls at the Public Record Office.

No. 3A. Mulneford, i.e., Milford, in Hampshire. Burmiton, probably Burrington near Wrington, comp. No. 21. Muntford, or Montfort, this family held Farleigh in the hundred of Wellow, whence called Farleigh Montford, now Farleigh Hungerford, it was sold by the Montforts in 1337 to Bartholomew, Lord Burghersh. Alexander de Anno, Danno, or de Alneto, inherited Long Ashton by marriage with the heiress of Adam de Herun. He and his house were closely connected with the Bath Convent, and supplied it with a prior, Walter de Anno, 1261-1290. They gave their name to Compton Dando, where the church was given to Bath by Fulk de Anno. Long Ashton was sold by Alexander, before 1284 (Collinson's Somerset II., 290, 422; Liber Niger de Scacc. (Hearne), p. 96; Kirby's Quest (Somerset Record Soc.), p. 29.

No. 4. Poterna, i.e., Potterne, Wilts. Stokes Giffard (see also No. 7), i.e., Rodney Stoke, near Draycot, Somerset, called here after its Domesday owner, Roger Witen, or Witen, otherwise de Corcelle, who gave the church to Bath, see No. 808, and after its later owners the Giffards. The church was ceded to Bishop Jocelin in 1214, Wells Cath. MSS., p. 206. William the Abbot, this disconnected note seems to refer to the appointment of a champion in a writ of right, and probably to William, abbot of Keynesham, see No. 7.

No. 5. Carenton, i.e., Carhampton, near Dunster; the tithes were granted to Bath by William de Mohun, and the church was made over to the Prior of Dunster by Prior Thomas (of Bath) 1223-1261. Simon Buzun, or Bozun, granted Bishop Reginald the churches of Carhampton for a perpetual prebend of Wells, reserving the patronage of the prebend to himself for life. The churches were appropriated to the Convent of Bath, and the prebend consisted of a charge upon them of one hundred shillings payable by the Convent (Wells Cath. MSS., p. 14, and No. 18). Pero, the name of the ancient owners of Stoke Pero or Piro, near Porlock. Herleg', or Philip de Herley, apparently lord of East Somerton, or Somerton Erlegh, appears in Kirby's Quest (p. 22) as a minor in the wardship of William de Montfort. It may, however, be that Herley is here for Woolley, two miles north of Bath. Ellewurthe, i.e., Elworthy, near Watchet.

No. 6. Besants, originally gold coins struck at Byzantium, apparently of the value of twenty-five silver shillings. Here, however, the silver bezant is meant, then equivalent to two shillings, see No. 7. A., is Alexander (called de Welbi), dean of Wells, 1180-1209. Ferbergh, i.e., Farleigh, see No. 3A.

No. 7. Kainsham, an abbey of Augustinian canons founded by William, Earl of Gloucester (d. 1183), see Monasticon, V., 452, sq. Witenk' see n. to No. 4. Toren' possibly for Thorne or Thornfalcon, near Taunton.

No. 8. Fulk Danno, see n. to No. 3A. Cholrintona, i.e., Cholderton, in Wilts. Writelintona, i.e., Writhlington, close to Radstock. Rugedona, possibly Rudge, near Stroud, Gloucestershire.

No. 9. Forda, i.e., Bathford. Hose, Hosat, Huse, or Hussey, members of this house appear frequently in connexion with the Convent, see C.C.C.C. Chartulary ante, Nos. 51 and 52. William Hosat was the Domesday tenant of Charlcombe under the Abbey, and was joint tenant in chief of Tatwick in Swainswick. The family also held Bath Easton, and Shockerwick in Bathford, and in 1168 three of its members held under the Bishop, Walkelin, half a knight's fee, Walter, one knight's fee, and William part of one Collinson's Somerset I., 106, 112; Liber Niger de Scacc. (Hearne), p. 86; Registrum Malmes. (Rolls ser.), I. 22, 248, 250, 330, &c.

No. 10. Landgabulum was virtually a ground rent.

No. 11. Berewika (derived from bere or barley), an ancient parish long gone to decay and included in Widcombe, which is now within the borders of Bath. Lechlade in Gloucestershire. Ralph of L., employed by Bishop Savaric in his dispute with Glastonbury (see Adam de Domerham, p. 357).

was canon and precentor of Wells, archdeacon of Bath, cir. 1200, and dean of Wells, 1216-1220. He seems to have been a rich man, see Nos. 45, 50, 70, 71. Atured, or Alfred, an English thegn of that name was Domesday tenant in chief of two hides in Wica or Bathwick.

No. 13. Socerwic, see n. to No. 9.

No. 14. Merkesbur, i.e., Marksbury, in the hundred of Keynsham. For Lullington we should, I think, read Lovington, about ten miles from Wincanton.

No. 15. 1281, certainly a wrong date; for Walter de Anno was then prior. Robert Clopote was prior 1301-1332. The hospital of St. John the Baptist at Bath was founded by Bishop Reginald in 1180 for the benefit of the sick poor. He endowed it with lands, tithes, &c. Prior Walter and the Convent granted it a tithe of the bread, cheese, and meat of the house. In return they received the right of appointing the master and governing the hospital, Monasticon V., 773, Warner's Hist. of Bath, App. XLVIII.

No. 16. Robert was elected prior in 1198, and held office until his appointment as Abbot of Glastonbury in 1223; he was an excellent man, but had sad trouble with the Glastonbury monks. He resigned his abbacy in 1235, and retired to Bath with a pension from the abbey of sixty pounds a year. Before his election at Bath, he had been one of Bishop Savaric's household. Adam de Domerham, pp. 478-502, John of Glaston, p. 1213. Camelega, i.e., Cameley, in the hundred of Chewton, the manor was sold to the Convent by Alexander de Alneto in 1153. Urban and William, the presence of these two monks at Bath may be accounted for by the fact that Reginald, Bishop of Bath, 1174-1191, had in 1164 been made abbot of S. Exuperius at Corbeil, by Louis VII. of France.

No. 17. Stokes, i.e., Radstock, the church was given to the convent by Helias de Clifton, see No. 808. Hugh de Welliis, was not this Hugh of Wells, who was archdeacon of Bath 1215, and d. 1234? See n. to No. 52.

No. 18. See n. to No. 5 and Wells Cath. MSS., p. 22. Savaric related to the Emperor Henry VI., son of Gelduin, lord of Midhurst, by a sister of Jocelin de Bohun, bishop of Sarum, was archdeacon of Canterbury, treasurer of Sarum, and archdeacon of Northampton; he was consecrated bishop of Bath, Sept. 20, 1192, and d. Aug. 8, 1205. For his family and his doings, see Bishop Stubbs, in Gent. Mag., 1863, p. 621, and in Epp. Cantuar. (Rolls ser.) Pref., p. lxxxvii. n., and Canon Church in Archæologia, LI., 73. Innocent III. succeeded Jan., 1198. 16 Kl. Nov., i.e., Oct. 17. Muchelneia, i.e., Muchelney, near Langport; the abbey is said to have been founded by Athelstan, see Will. of Malmesbury's Gesta Pontiff (Rolls ser.), pp. 199, 200, where the alleged cause of the foundation is legendary. The abbot was made a member of the Wells Chapter by Savaric, who annexed the church of Ilminster to the abbacy as a prebend.

No. 22. Ciston, probably Siston in the hundred of Pucklechurch, Gloucestershire.

No. 23. Hivis, probably Hewish in Brent Marsh, part of the episcopal manor of Banwell; it was made a prebend by Bishop Robert, in 1159, but there are more places than one of that name in Somerset. Fulk Painel, see n. to No. 116.

No. 25. Hildesleia, i.e., Hildesley, a hamlet of Hawksbury, Gloucestershire. Munford, see n. to No. 3A. St. James, church in Bath. Certfeld, i.e., Charfield, Gloucestershire. Wika, i.e., Bathwick. Ahrleia, i.e., Somerton Erleigh. Dudmerton, i.e., Didmarton, near Tetbury. Soppebury, probably Chipping Sodbury, Gloucestershire.

No. 26. Priston, five miles S.W. of Bath.

No. 27. Until the said Roger, &c., grants of this kind were given as a title to orders; for the use of the title was that it insured a provision to the ordained. This is the reason why fellows of colleges can be ordained on their fellowships, not, as I have more than once heard stated, because they have a quasi-cure in respect of undergraduates. In the Roman Catholic Church it is sufficient, all other conditions being fulfilled, that a candidate for orders should have a reasonable income secure from any source, private or official. Hamton, i.e., Bathampton. Woodewica or Woodwick, an ancient parish mentioned in Domesday, united to Freshford in the 15th century, has now disappeared; its memory is preserved by certain lands in Freshford which are called "Woodwards," Eyton's Domesday of Somerset, I., 104.

No. 29. Cumpton, i.e., Compton Dando, see n. to No. 3A.

No. 32. Hugh was prior contemp. with Richard of Spaxton, Dean of Wells 1160-1180, and with Bishop Reginald, consecrated 1174. As prior Peter seems to have been alive about 1175, we must put Hugh's election after that date and before 1180. He seems to have been succeeded by Prior Gilbert. His mother, Wimark, must have been very old in Prior Robert's time, for Robert was elected in 1198.

No. 33. Erleia or Erleigh (see n. to No. 5), for this family which held Beckington, Somerton Erleigh, the hundred of N. Petherton and other estates, see Collinson's Somerset, II., 198, 199.

No. 34. Fitz Urse, the family to which Reginald, one of the murderers of St. Thomas of Canterbury, is said to have belonged, held Williton and also an estate at Widecumb, or Withycombe, in the hundred of Carhampton.

No. 35. Lang Brugg, i.e., Langridge, about four miles N.W. of Bath.

No. 36. Aixton, i.e., Long Ashton.

No. 37. Walter, prior, is Walter de Anno, cellarer of Bath, elected prior June 26, 1261, d. Jan., 1290. Cumba, i.e., Monkton Combe, about three miles S.E. of Bath. SS. Simon and Jude, Oct. 28.

No. 38. Robert, i.e., Robert Clopcote, see n. to No. 15. S. Barnabas, June 11. Surcote, so it appears to be written, though I should wish to make it Foxcote, or Forscote, near Bath. Thomas, the prior, i.e. Thomas Crist, admitted Sept. 24, 1332, resigned 1340.

No. 40. Yford or Iford, possibly a hamlet of that name in Westwood, two miles S.W. of Bradford, Wiltshire, or an Iford in Freshford, Somerset. Prior John was elected in 1344, and got into trouble for incontinence in 1346-7, but was still in office in 1352 (see n. to No. 939), and possibly until 1359.

No. 41. Rainald, or Reginald Fitz Jocelin, son of Jocelin de Bohun, bishop of Sarum (1141-1184), was born about 1140, and probably educated in Italy, for he is called "the Lombard." He was archdeacon of Sarum, received the abbey of S. Exuperius in Corbeil from Louis VII. in 1164, was sent by Henry II. to make his peace with Rome in 1171, was elected bishop by the two Chapters of Bath and Wells, and was consecrated at S. Jean de Maurienne by Richard, archbishop of Canterbury, and Peter, archbishop of Tarentaise, on June 23, 1174 (Ralph de Diceto I., 391, Rolls ser.) after a vacancy of eight years. He was elected to Canterbury Nov. 27, 1191, and d. Dec. 26 following. For an account of his episcopate, see Canon Church, Archæologia, L., 295, sqq.

No. 46. Stanton, i.e., Stanton Prior, five miles S.W. of Bath.

No. 52. Hugh, son and heir of Edward de Wells, a rich land owner with an estate at Lancherley, near Wells, and brother of Jocelin, called Trotman, probably a family name, bishop of Bath, was archdeacon of Wells, a prebendary of Lincoln, and deputy to the Chancellor of England, Walter de Gray. He was consecrated to the See of Lincoln, Dec. 20, 1209, at Melun, remained for a time in exile, was reconciled to the King in July, 1213, and d. Feb. 7, 1235.

No. 53. Alveston, in Gloucestershire, attached to Olveston, was granted to the Convent by Athelstan and Edwy, C.C.C. MS. Nos. 9, 13; Atkyns's Gloucestershire, pp. 111, 310; Rudder's Gloucestershire, p. 226.

No. 55. Dogmersfield, in N. Hants, near Odiham, was given by Henry I. to Godfrey, bishop of Bath, C.C.C. MS. No. 55; Wells Cath. MSS., p. 8. The advowson belonged to the convent of Bath, which received a pension of twenty shillings from the church, and paid another sum of twenty shillings to the nuns of Wetton, as the word is written here and in Nos. 65 and 75, or Wintney, near Winchfield, in Hants. Prior Robert and the Convent ceded the advowson and pension to Bishop Jocelin, who made a prebend of their grant, but the nuns of Wintney continued to receive their pension down to the Dissolution, when they appear to have had forty shillings from Dogmersfield yearly. Wintney was a Cistercian nunnery, Monasticon, V., 721, 722.

No. 56. Calvet is Kilton, six miles N.E. of Watchet. The church was appropriated to the Priory of Dunster, with a payment of a pension of fifty shillings to Bath. Calvet also stands elsewhere for Calveston or Kelston, near Bath. Dunestorre, or Dunster, the church of St. George there, and other endowments were granted to the monks of Bath by William de Moion, or Mohun, about 1190, in order that they might "raise" the church. They made it a cell or dependent priory, see the C.C.C. MS. No. 34, and elsewhere in this vol., Monasticon, IV., 200, and Mr. Maxwell Lyte's admirable monograph, Dunster and its Lords, mainly reprinted from papers in the Archæological Journal for 1880 and 1881.

No. 58. Kaning, this name, afterwards so famous, was of course taken from one of the Cannings villages—there are two, All Cannings and Bishop's Cannings—in Wiltshire. Peter occurs treasurer of Wells, 1217, see No. 103. William de Hanma, no doubt the precentor in 1217, see n. to No. 99. Baanton, i.e., Bampton Ufculm, in Devon, often mentioned here ; it belonged to the family of Cogan, see No. 171.

No. 59. J., i.e. Jocelin Trotman (Ann. of Margam, p. 28), son of Edward de Wells (see n. to No. 52) was, like his brother Hugh, a lawyer of eminence, and was a clerk of the Exchequer. He was employed by Bishop Reginald, and is called his chaplain or clerk, and was made a canon of Wells. He was also, as it seems, employed by Prior Robert, and received from the convent a pension and afterwards the living of Dogmersfield, of which he was later to have the advowson (see Nos. 55, 64, 65). He is said by Walcott to have been archdeacon of Chichester about 1190, and the assertion has been copied by others (see Canon Church in Archæologia). No proof of this seems to exist. The references brought in support of it either do not bear on the matter or seem to go towards disproving it. The Reg. of St. Osmund certainly shows a Jocelin, archdeacon of Chichester, 1190–1194, but there is nothing there to show that he was Jocelin of Wells (Reg. S. Osmund I., 241, 244, 248). Nor is such proof to be found in MS. Harl. 6957 f. 4, or in Cal. of Pat. Rolls 6 Jno., both quoted in support of the assertion. Indeed, in Pat. Rolls 5 Jno., 1205, he is simply styled by the King “clericus noster,” and so in 7 Jno. as Joscelinus de Well., while in 1206 he signs himself as J. de Well., clerk. It would be curious if the grant of the pension from Bath was really the title to orders of this bishop, who is often spoken of as in every sense a Wells man, and who certainly favoured Wells, rather than Bath. Until he received that pension he may possibly have been in minor orders, for Savaric was not ordained priest until the day before he was consecrated, nor did Thomas of Canterbury receive priests' orders until the day week before he was consecrated to the primacy ; indeed instances of this sort might be multiplied. In 1204 Jocelin received from the King the living of Lugwardine, Herefordshire, and in 1206 that of Winsham, Somerset (see Cal. Litt. Pat. pp. 38, 57). He was then acting as one of the King's justices. He was elected bishop by the two chapters of Bath and Wells in Feb., 1206, and was consecrated May 28, and like his predecessor, had and used the title of Bath and Glastonbury. In 1219 he brought the long dispute with Glastonbury to an end, surrendering the bishop's claim to the abbacy in exchange for certain manors, and thenceforward dropped the title of Glastonbury. He applied for, and as it seems received, the authority of Honorius III. to style himself of Bath and Wells, but never used that title, describing himself as “of Bath” alone. He did much for the fabric of the cathedral and gave many gifts to the Chapter, which he largely reorganised. For his gifts to Bath see No. 808. He d. Nov. 19, 1242. For his episcopate see an excellent paper by Canon Church in Archæologia, LI., 281 sqq.

„ Brug Walter or Bridgwater, so called from its Domesday owner, Walter de Douai. The hospital there was founded by William Brewer for thirteen sick poor, besides religious and pilgrims, Monasticon, VI., 662.

No. 63. Simon, archdeacon of Wells, called Simon of Wells, consecrated bishop of Chichester July 11, 1204, d. 2207 (Ann. of Tewkesbury, pp. 57, 58; Ann. of Waverley, pp. 258).

Nos. 64-66. See Nos. 52, 59.

No. 67. Taddewicha, i.e., Tatwick, a hamlet of Swainswick, near Bath: the manor at the time of the Survey belonged partly to William Hosat, and partly to Ralph de Berkeley.

No. 72. Gerard de Atthia, one of John's Flemish mercenaries and evil counsellors (Wendover, III., 238, Eng. Hist. Soc.); his wife and all his relations were ordered into banishment by the Great Charter (Matt. Paris, III. 604, Rolls ser.). He was sheriff of Gloucester, in 1206. Peter and Gyan de Canceles were his kinsman. For the grantee, see No. 92.

No. 74. This is a slip in numbering, and should be No. 73; nothing is left out. Sustok, i.e. Southstoke, two miles S. of Bath; Corston, in the hundred of Wellow, given to the convent by King Edgar, see No. 808. Baieus, i.e. Bayeux, a family of that name held knight's fees in Saltford, Backwell, and other places in Somerset, see Collinson's Somerset, II., 306, 431; Kirby's Quest (S. Record Soc.) pp. 62, 69, 70. Baalun, this baronial family, of which the founder built Abergavenny, was settled at Eastington, Gloucestershire, and held property in the hundred of Wellow, see Dugdale's Baronage I., 453; Kirby's Quest, p. 61.

No. 75. Peter, called des Roches, a Poitevin, was chief justiciar in the reign of John, and one of the guardians of the Kingdom on the accession of Henry III. He was consecrated bishop of Winchester, Sept. 25, 1205, and d. June 9, 1238. Paneylli or Paganel, see note to No. 117.

No. 77. Tokinton or Tockington, a hamlet of Olveston. Comp. n. to No. 53. Here Sir Nicholas Pointz, lord of Curry Mallet, was lord.

No. 79. Chapels apparently were of South Stoke, and Widcombe. Palton, i.e. Paulton near Midsomer Norton.

No. 80. Engelard de Cigony, one of John's foreign favourites, was sheriff of Gloucestershire 12-16 John. For Cancel, see note to No. 72.

No. 82. This grant was to secure the King from any demands of restitution arising from his oppressions during the interdict. It was of course extorted from this and other religious houses by his lords and officers. The monks had no choice in the matter for the King was now reconciled to the Pope. Comp. for a like grant Memorials of St. Edmund's Abbey (Rolls ser.) II., 112, 113, which the Editor oddly believes to have been a proof of enthusiasm for the King. S. is Seiher de Quincy, Earl of Winchester, died in Palestine Nov. 3, 1219. W. Briwer, the famous baron and judge, held Bridgwater (see note to No. 59), the honour of Odcomb, and other places in Somerset. He d. 1226, see Dict. of National Biogr. VI., 297.

No. 84. Bamptona, i.e., Bampton Ufculm in Devon, see n. to No. 58 and No. 171.

No. 86. Abbedeston, possibly Abston, or Abson, in Gloucestershire.

No. 87. Roger de Sto Laudo held Newton, called from his family Newton St. Lo, and Publow, in the reign of John, and later. The family, which was settled at Newton in 1122, see C.C.C. MS. No. 54, died out in the male line with John St. Lo, whose daughter and heiress Elizabeth, married William, Lord Botreaux, d. 1392.

No. 88. Norrensis, these Richard, William, and Gilbert, were, perhaps, members of the family of Noreys of Wells, of which was Thomas Noreys, the mason, of the time of Bishop Jocelin, see the interesting note by Canon Church in Archæologia, LI., 11, 346.

No. 92. Susbech, so written, may perhaps be Seaborough near Crewkerne.

No. 95. Lamesdun or Lantesdun, i.e. Lansdown, near Bath.

No. 96. G. de Burgo, i.e. Geoffrey de Burgh, archdeacon of Norwich, whose election to the see of Ely was quashed by Honorius III. in 1220. He was re-elected to the see on the death of John Pherd, was consecrated June 29, 1225, and d. Dec. 8, 1228.

No. 98. Bruge, i.e. Bridgwater, see n. to Nos. 59 and 82.

No. 99. Hanam, so it appears here and in witnesses in No. 103, though in other places, and in the Wells documents, the precentor is called William de Hamme. Hanham is in Gloucestershire, five miles from Bristol, see n. to No. 275.

No. 100. Gilbert, was this the younger son of William the Marshal, Earl of Pembroke? Gilbert Marshal, who received minor orders, and held church preferment, succeeded his brother Richard as marshal and earl in 1234, and d. 1242.

No. 103. Damdray or Dundry in the episcopal manor of Chew. Date July 16, 1217. Peter, see n. to No. 58. Richard of Kenilworth, chancellor of Wells in 1206 and 1235, and afterwards treasurer.

No. 104. Golclive or Goldcliff Priory in Monmouthshire, a cell of the Abbey of Bec in Normandy. Wlamnt, i.e. Woolavington near Bridgwater, the church there, and that of Puriton, were given to the Priory of Goldcliff by the founder Robert de Chandos, temp. Henry I.; Robert's wife, Isabella, was daughter and heiress of the English thegn, Alured of Spain, the Domesday holder of Nether Stowey, Woolavington, and other lands. See Eyton's Domesday of Somerset, I, 65, and Monasticon VII., 1022. Pucklechurch, Gloucestershire, was one of the manors ceded by Glastonbury to Bishop Jocelin by the composition of 1219. Date of charter, Aug. 25, 1217.

No. 105. Yle or Ile Brewers part of the possessions of William Brewer see n. to No. 82. William, precentor, see n. to No. 99. William, archdeacon, apparently William de Bardenay, archdeacon of Wells. Alard, sub-dean of Wells 1213, and chancellor. Date of bishop's charter, April 8, 1219.

No. 106. William de Montacute, sheriff of Somerset in 7, 8 and 9 John one of the confederate barons of 1215, d. 1216, granted the church of Siepton or Shepton Montague, to the Austin canons of Bruton. Feast of SS. Peter and Paul, June 29. Year of charter, 1215.

No. 108. The priory, or hospital, of St. Bartholomew, Smithfield, founded in the reign of Henry I.; Hugh, the chaplain, granted the advowson of the church of Heanton, or Hinton St. George, to bishop Jocelin. Date of charter Aug. 1, 1219.

No. 109. Duza, probably of the family of Roger Witen or de Corcelle, see n. to No. 4, who in 1086 held 108 Somerset estates. See Eyton's Domesday of Somerset I, 59, 60.

No. 110. Duddukes croft, no doubt called after Duduc, bishop of Wells, consec. June 11, 1033, d. Jan. 18, 1060.

No. 111. Lamiet, or Lamyatt, near Bruton. This annual mark was retained by the Convent until the Dissolution. Hugh of Wells, bishop of Lincoln, in whose diocese Godstow was, appears also as a benefactor. The Convent of Benedictine nuns was founded about 1138, see Monasticon IV., 357, 375, 377.

No. 112. Sellar, comp. No. 107.

No. 113. Sir Robert de Hurley, possibly lord of Woolley near Bath.

No. 114. Date 1230.

No. 115. Nighenhide or Nynehead, near Wellington, belonged to the family of Flory, whence it is sometimes called Nynehead Flory. The church belonged to the Priory of Taunton, and the place appears as Nyghenheade Monachorum; part of the parish is still called Monks Nynehead, see Somerset Archæol. Soc.'s Proc. (1859) IX., ii., 19. Date, May 10, 1223.

No. 116. Hubert de Burgh, earl of Kent, and chief justiciar, d. 1243, granted the church of Queen's Camel to the Cistercian Abbey of Cleve, see Monasticon, V., 732. G., i.e., Galcher de Ochies, abbot of Longpont, elected abbot of Citeaux 1218, resigned 1234, see Ann. of Waverley, pp. 291, 316. Date of charter, Oct. 25, 1223.

No. 117. Newport Paenel or Pagnell in Buckinghamshire, where a Cluniac priory was founded in the reign of William II. by Fulk Paganell or Paynell, who inherited Huntspill, Bridgwater, Pawlett, and Bampton in Devonshire, from his mother Juliana, grand-daughter, and heiress to the estates of, Walter de Douai. Auda or Ada was the widow of another Fulk. In 1209 her son William paid 200 marks for livery of his lands, and that his mother might not be compelled to marry again. She was heiress to her brother Gilbert of Avranches, but her grandsons lost their Norman possessions (Matt. Paris iii, 197). The Priory of Newport Pagnell, or Tickford, was in the reign of Henry III. appropriated to the Abbey of St. Martin, or Marmoutier, near Tours. After having been seized as an alien priory in the reign of Edward III., it was restored in 1400, and was subjected to the Priory of the Holy Trinity at York, see Dugdale's Baronage I., 431, sq. Monasticon VI., ii., 1097; Tanner's Notitia, p. 24; Collinson's Somerset ii., 390, 394. Compare this document with No. 390. Date of bishop's charter, April 14, 1226

Nos. 118, 119. The appointment of these proctors is the first notice that we have here relating to the great dispute with the Wells Chapter about the election of bishops, of which more further on.

No. 120. John de Butthon, or of Bitton, in 1257 provost of Combe (see No. 161), was a member of the family that in that century gave two bishops to the see. On the office of provost of Wells, see Freeman's Cath. Ch. of Wells, pp. 33, 39, 150. Careberi, i.e., Cadgbury. Date, Aug. 1, 1260, see Wells Cath. MSS., p. 68.

No. 121. Another mode of life, i.e., take monastic vows, comp. No. 138.

No. 122. Court-house, no doubt at Long Ashton, where there are tithings called Ashton-Dando and Ashton-Alexander, see n. to No. 3A. Baious see note to No. 74: Marmyun, this was probably a younger son of Robert "Marmiun" d. 1241, see Matt. Paris IV., 174, Dugdale's Baronage I., 377. The family had an estate in Gloucestershire, and land which came by marriage in Somerset, see Feet of Fines (Somerset Record Soc.) p. 376. De Alta villa, this family, it is said, gave its name to Norton-Hauteville near Dundry, and it is supposed may have been akin to the conquerors of Southern Italy and Sicily, the line of Tancred de Hauteville in the diocese of Contances. As, however, the Domesday name of the place is Norton Hauckewella, it seems quite possible that the name may, on Norman lips, have been softened to Hauteville, and have been used as the family name of its owners. Maureward, the owners of Norton Malreward, also possessed estates in Devonshire, Dorsetshire, and Wiltshire. Sir William Malreward gave the church of Twerton to the nuns of Kington St. Michael, Wiltshire, and the grant was confirmed by his grandson, Sir Geoffrey in the reign of Henry III. See Monasticon, IV., 400. Lutlethon or Littleton, a hamlet of Wellow.

No. 123. Feast of S. Augustine "Anglorum Ap." May 26.

No. 124. Matilda, this was Matilda de Champflur. On this grant see Feet of Fines, p. 208, for Fine between Walter, prior, and Matilda, in the quinzaine of S. Hillary, Jan. 27, 1262.

No. 127. W., i.e., Walter de Anno, previously cellarer, elected prior, June 26, 1261, d. Jan. 1290. See Nos. 257, 258, 394.

No. 128. Allowanced, Lat., panis precatus, which is equivalent to a "commons" of bread at a college.

No. 130. Clemens P. and Mar. Nov. 23. W., is William Button or de Bitton II., bishop of B. and W. (nephew of bishop William Button I.), arch-deacon of Wells, consec. 1267, d. Dec. 4, 1274, see Dict. of National Biogr. VIII., 101.

No. 131. Michaelmas, 1231. The manor was Compton Dando. Godfrey de Anno, or d'Alneto, d. 1257-1258. Wendnesdich, or Wansdyke is traceable through Newton Park, and near Compton Dando, see Somerset Archæol. Soc.'s Proc. VI., ii., 101; VII., ii., 9; XXII., i., 62.

- No. 133. Trans. of S. Martin, July 4.
- No. 135. Date, Sept. 16.
- No. 136. Though this document is not easy to read, the meaning is quite plain. Muchelney was not a place where water was likely to have been scarce, but the convent evidently had nothing save surface or stagnant water, and were in want of water to drink. The document is interesting. I do not know whether the offer of the Bath monks induced anyone to make a conduit to Muchelney. Date, Aug. 7.

- No. 154. Henry de Soilli, prior of Bermondsey, was appointed abbot of Glastonbury in 1189, was consec. to the see of Worcester Dec. 12, 1193, and d. Oct. 24, 1195. As Bishop Reginald d. on Dec. 26, 1191, an approximate date may be given to this charter. Muncketun, is West Monkton near Taunton.
- Hugh de Puiset*, treasurer of York, consec. to the see of Durham Dec. 20, 1153, rebelled against Henry II. 1173, appointed justiciar by Richard I. 1189, d. Mar. 3, 1195.

No. 155. Robert, was prior of Bath 1198-1223, see n. to No. 16. For this charter see Monasticon I., 31. Date, Sept. 30, 1230.

No. 156. Heantun or Henton, where Ela, widow of William Longwood, earl of Salisbury, settled a convent of Carthusian monks. The priory was called Atrium, or Locus, Dei. The name of the prior appears an addition to our knowledge. Ludicumbe is Lyncombe within the present limits of Bath. Date, Dec. 1, 1246.

No. 158. Innocentius, i.e., Innocent IV., succ. June, 1243. For his letter with reference to the collation to benefices referred to in this document, see Matt. Paris, VI. (addimenta), 260-264, and for this case also Nos. 163, 250.

No. 159. See No. 238. John de Cheam became archdeacon of Bath, and was in 1259 postulated to the See of Glasgow by Alexander III. Giles, was Giles de Bridport, elected dean of Wells 1253, consec. bishop of Salisbury, March 12, 1257, and d. Dec. 13, 1262. Date of charter, Feb. 17.

No. 160. W., is for William Button, or de Bitton, sub-dean in 1237, and afterwards archdeacon of Wells, consec. bishop of B. and W. June 14, 1248, and d. April 3, 1264. See No. 130, and Dict. of National Biogr. VIII., 100.

No. 161. Berliz, i.e., Barlinch, an Augustinian priory, founded by William de Say in the parish of Brompton, near Dulverton, in the reign of Henry II. The donor here mentioned was John Moryn, lord of Hillfarrence. See Monasticon VI., 384 sq.; Somerset Archæol. Soc.'s Proc. (1883) XXIX., i., 72. Walter of St. Quintin, sub-dean of Wells 1241, and archdeacon of Taunton 1242, took a prominent part in the dispute between the Chapters of Bath and Wells, d. Dec. 18, 1263. Cumbe, the provostship of Combe, or Combe St. Nicholas with the churches of Wellington and Chard, was instituted by Bishop Jocelin, who divided Combe into ten prebends, one of the prebendaries being appointed provost by the bishop. Date of bishop's charter, April 25; of inspeximus, Oct. 28.

Nos. 164, 165. See No. 124.

No. 166. Martin probably of the house of the husband of Matilda, lady of Bath Easton. Cotel, this family in 1286 held as sub-tenants Nunney, Camerton, Crocombe, and Priestley in Doultling.

No. 168. Hokeday, the second Tuesday after Easter, see Hampson's Medii Ævi Kalendarium, I., 203, 204; II., 198.

No. 170. Sutcherd or South Chard, a hamlet of Chard, Somerset. Same year, i.e. Jan. 1262, N.S.

No. 171. Cogan, John, of the house of "Milo Coganensis," one of the conquerors of Ireland, held of the King in 1286 Burnham, Weare, Brean, and Huntspill in Somerset, and Bampton with Ufculm in Devon. These lands came to him as heir of his grandfather, Sir Miles de Cogan, who married Christian, heiress of the Paganells. The Paganells inherited from Walter de Douai, the Domesday holder, see n. to No. 117. For Miles de Cogan, see Orpen's Song of Dermot ll. 1602, 1653, and Giraldus, Expug. Hibern. passim.

No. 173. Nyweton, i.e., Newton St. Lo. See n. to No. 87. Wyttoksmede, a hamlet of Wellow.

No. 175. Blacford, or Blackford in Wedmore.

No. 177. Ottaviano, of the Ubaldini of Mugello, was chaplain and sub-deacon of Gregory IX., was made bishop of Bologna in 1240, and cardinal-deacon by Innocent IV. in 1244, was legate in Lombardy 1247-1252, attempted to relieve Parma, and made a successful campaign against Enzo, and in 1248 over-ran Romagna. He was sent as legate into Apulia, and in 1254 commanded the Papal army there against Manfred, who put him to flight. In 1255 he was sent by Alexander IV. to Henry III. to invest the King's son, Edmund, with the kingdom of Sicily. He d. in 1273. He was an able and magnificent prelate. Much is told about him by Salimbeni, Malespina, and Matt. Paris, see also Dante's notice of him in the Inferno, Canto X., and an excellent account of him by Sig. Guido Levi in the Archivio della R. Società Romana di Storia Patria, XIV., 231, sqq. The Register of Cardinal Ottaviano is in the Fonti per Storia d' Italia, No. 8, 1890.

No. 181. G., for Gregory IX., pope 1227-1241. O, for Otho of Montferrat, bishop of Porto, raised to the cardinalate by Gregory soon after his accession, employed as legate in 1229, sent to England at the request of Henry III., in 1237, published constitutions in a national council, d. Dec. 1244. Much is told about him by Matt. Paris. For notice of this sea fight, see Preface.

No. 184. Ferenton, i.e., Farrington Gurney. Date, Dec. 29.

No. 185. Johanni, i.e., John Saracenus, dean 1241-1253, a Roman and a papal chaplain. See Archæologia li, ii, 341. Date, Jan. 30, 1243.

Nos. 186-189. Date of No. 186, Feb. 6, 1243; of No. 187, Feb. 15; of No. 188, Feb. 26; of No. 189, Feb. 28.

No. 190. P. for Peter Chaceporc (see No. 192), treasurer of Henry III., and one of his Poitevin favourites. As Mr. Vincent pointed out in the Genealogist II., N.S. (1885) 161 sqq., it is evident that the King directed the Bath Chapter to elect Peter. He became archdeacon of Wells, and d. at Boulogne, Dec. 24, 1254. See Matt. Paris V., 535, and Dict. of National Biogr., IX., 430.

No. 192. W., for Walter de Gray, archbishop of York, chancellor of England 1205-1214, bishop of Worcester, Oct. 4, 1214, translated to York, March 27, 1216, d. May 1, 1255. At this date regent during the King's absence. The chapter of Wells had already written to him as a fellow canon for his help. Archæologia lii.

No. 194. A. for Alianora, or Eleanor of Provence, queen of Henry III., d. 1291.

Nos. 195-199. Date of No. 195, June 6; of Nos. 196, 197, 199, Sept. 17; of No. 198, Aug. 30.

- No. 196. ymnus Dominicus, i.e., "Veni Creator."
- No. 201. At this date, Aug. 25, 1244, the See of Canterbury was vacant, for Abp. Edmund died Nov. 16, 1240, and Boniface of Savoy, abp. elect, was not consecrated until Jan. 15, 1245. The convent of Christ Church was therefore exercising archiepiscopal jurisdiction, and a new bishop would receive his instrument of consecration under the convent's seal.
- Nos. 202-206. Date of Nos. 202-205, Oct. 27; of No. 206, Jan. 26.
- No. 207. John of Axbridge, sub-dean of Wells in 1255. W. for William Button I, see n. to No. 160.
- No. 208. Pope, i.e., Innocent IV, whose demands on the Church of England were then very heavy. The subsidy was to enable the bishop, William Button, to pay what he owed to the Pope, perhaps on account of his promotion to the bishopric.
- No. 209. W. for William of York, provost of Beverley, and a justice itinerant, consecrated bishop of Sarum, July 14, 1247, died Jan. 31, 1256. See Matt. Paris V., 545.
- No. 210. Date, Jan. 12.
- No. 211. Waterford, in 1204, Peter, master, and the brethren of the hospital of St. John, agreed with Prior Robert, and the convent of Bath to surrender their house to the convent, thereby making it a cell of Bath with a prior appointed by the superior house, Cal. of Documents (Ireland) 1171-1251, nos. 219, 220, 250. King John, who confirmed this annexation to Bath (Warner's Bath, App. xl), is often spoken of as the founder of this house, and of the priory of St. John at Cork, also a cell of Bath (see No. 218) as Benedictine convents. The Cork house was a mere appendage to the Waterford priory; both were under the rule of the same prior. For the Irish possessions of Bath, see Archdall's Monast. Hibern., pp. 700-702. Philip, dean of Waterford, postulated to the bishopric 1252. The King ordered restitution of the temporalities, June 14. He died before April 15, 1254. ib., u.s., 1252-1284, Nos. 46, 347.
- No. 213. Keynesham, or Keynsham, where an Augustinian abbey was founded by William, earl of Gloucester (d. 1183). Brislington, Publow, and Felton or Whitchurch are all in the near neighbourhood.
- No. 215. Sir William Dene appointed lord justice of Ireland in 1260, died in 1261. Date, 1260.
- No. 220. W. is Walter de Anno, see No. 127. This charter and No. 222, refer to the land which was the site of, or adjacent to the site of, the London house, or inn, of the bishops of Bath and Wells. This house, called Bath-place, fell into the grasping hands of Thomas, lord Seymour, executed in 1549, and was afterwards granted to the earl of Arundel, whence it was called Arundel House, and whence comes the name of the present Arundel Street.
- No. 223. Murilinch, or Moorlinch, in the hundred of Whitney, includes the chapelries of Catcot, Chilton on Polden, Edington, Stawell, and Sutton Mallet.

Robert, formerly prior of Bath, see n. to No. 155. Date of charter, July 7; of inspeximus July 8.

No. 250. Comp. Nos. 158, 163. Vigil of St. Leonard, Nov. 5.

Nos. 251-259. The order of the election was therefore—At the request of Prior Thomas, who was then no doubt sick, and the convent, the Bishop William Button I, granted licence on 19 May, 1261, to elect a prior when a vacancy should occur (251). The prior and convent on 5 June, sent to Edward de la Cnolle, the dean, and the chapter of Wells, requesting confirmation of the bishop's grant (259), and the grant was confirmed the same day (252). Prior Thomas died on June 23, and on the same day the sub-prior wrote to inform the bishop and request leave to elect (253), which was granted on the 24 (254). Seven electors were chosen to make the election via compromissi. They chose the cellarer, Walter de Anno, and their choice was confirmed by the bishop on the 26 (237, 258). On the 27, the convent agreed to accept the person chosen (255), and the election of Prior Walter was announced (256). On the same day a record of the process was drawn up (257).

No. 260. Dodlinch, the canons regular there were moved by William de Courtenay to the priory that he founded about 1210, at Worspring, or as it is now written Woodspring, in the parish of Kewstoke. They were under the Augustinian rule, and were of the Order of St. Victor; the priory was dedicated to the B.V.M. and St. Thomas the Martyr, see Monasticon VI., 414. Lock, i.e., Locking, near Weston-super-Mare.

No. 261. Northon Comitis, i.e., Norton St. Philip, called Comitis, because the prior held it in alms of the earl of Lincoln. Date, Nov. 17. Walter de Lechlade, succentor of Wells, 1268, 1277.

No. 263. Earl of Gloucester, viz., at that date Gilbert de Clare, called the Red, eighth earl of Gloucester (1243-1295), see Dict. of National Biogr., x., 378.

Date, Aug. 30.

No. 266. O. for Ottoboni, sent as Cardinal-legate to England by Clement IV, landed in 1265, suspended the bishops of London, Winchester, Lincoln, Worcester, and Chichester, excommunicated the dead earl of Leicester, and his adherents, and laid twenty-seven towns under an interdict. He was an able man, highly unpopular in England, and is said to have been rapacious. He was elected Pope, July 9, 1276, and took the name of Hadrian V, but died at Viterbo, on Aug. 18 following, without consecration.

Nos. 267-269. Date of No. 267, Aug. 28, of Nos. 268, 269, Jan. 2.

No. 273. Benedict Prior, is said, on the authority of this document, to have held office in 1151, Monasticon II. He occurs in C.C.C.C. MS. No. 76, in 1155. Eustace and Martin, archdeacons, are also to be found about that time in the same book, Martin in 1135.

No. 275. William was William Button I, 1248-1264. Hanam, see n. to No. 99, the attestations of the members of the Button family, of Bitton, make it fairly certain that the grantee was of Hanham, and probably that the precentor of No. 99 called de Hanam and de Hamme, was of the same place. Fitz Payn, this family held Cary Fitzpaine and other lands in Charlton Makrell. John de Butthon, see n. to No. 120.

Nos. 437-439. These entries refer to the collection of the tenth granted by Pope Nicolas IV to Edward I, in March 1291, for six years, from all ecclesiastical and religious revenues for a crusade. The grant was the occasion of the new assessment called the "Taxation of Pope Nicolas," which remained in force until the reign of Henry VIII. See Fadera (Record ed.) i, 747, Cont. Flor. Wig., p. 264, where the chronicler notes "Dominus papa domino regi Angliæ decimam omnium proventuum ecclesiasticorum, omnium etiam bonorum virorum religiosorum quorumcumque, Hospitalariis tamen etiam Templariis exceptis, per vi annos in subsidium contulit terræ Hierosolymitanæ." B. Cotton, pp. 183-199, who gives the bulls, speaks of the strictness with which the tax was assessed and collected. The bishops of Winchester and Lincoln were commissioned to make the assessment and collect the money. O., i.e., Oliver Sutton, dean of Lincoln, consecrated to that see, May 17, 1280, died Nov. 13, 1299. J., i.e., John of Pontoise, from a false derivation of his name sometimes called Sawbridge, chancellor of the University of Oxford, and archdeacon of Exeter, was appointed bishop of Winchester by the Pope, who quashed two conventual elections. No. 469. Date, Jan. 29, 1293. Bishop Robert Burnell died Oct. 25, 1292.

No. 471. The sees of Canterbury and Bath and Wells were both vacant. The date of this presentation was between Dec. 8, 1292, when Archbishop Peckham died, and May 17, 1293, when William March was consecrated to Bath and Wells.

No. 478. B. Mary, this was the church of St. Mary "intra muros" or "intra portam borealem," see Warner's Hist. of Bath, pp. 287, 288.

No. 479. Kelveton, i.e., Kelston, near Bath.

No. 482. Leton, or Lenton, and Muleford, i.e., Lymington and Milford in Hampshire.

No. 485. Engelisbache or Englishbatch, a hamlet of Englishcombe near Bath.

No. 486. Standondru, i.e., Stanton Drew in Keynsham hundred, see Wells Cath. MSS., p. 92.

No. 487. Wooton or Wootton, for the Wells land there see Wells Cath. MSS., p. 18, where the grant from Bishop Gisa to the church of Wells of land at Wootton is recorded from Liber Ruber, fo. 31. Assart, a clearing in a wood. Thomas de Button, elected dean, Nov. 15, 1284, consecrated to the see of Exeter, Mar. 16, 1292, died Sept. 26, 1307. Philip de Stanton, died 1295. Walter de Halschalghe, or Haselshaw, elected dean, Dec. 17, 1297, consecrated bishop of Bath and Wells, Nov. 4, 1302, died Dec. 11, 1308. Sir Elias Cotele at Croscombe, Sir Richard de Ripariis at East Horrington, and Sir Geoffrey de Stawell, of Stawell, near Bridgwater, at Priestleigh in Doulling, were in respect of these lands all near neighbours of the bishop, and indeed of the tenants of Wootton in Pilton.

No. 488. the Lord Maurice may have been Maurice II, 5th Baron de Berkeley, who died in 1281; for he married Isabella, daughter of Maurice de Creon by Isabella, sister of William de Valence, earl of Pembroke, and daughter of Hugh le Brun, count of Marche and lord of Valence, by Isabella of Angoulême, widow of King John. Or the reference may be to Sir Maurice, eldest son of the Lord of Berkeley, who was slain at a tournament at Kenilworth in 1279. See Smyth's Lives of the Berkeleys, ed. Sir J. Maclean, i., 145.

No. 490. Twyverton, i.e., Twerton, two miles west of Bath. Sir N. was probably the parish priest.

No. 496. Castle Cary, see No. 180. Clatford near Andover.

No. 499. Taxation, the taxation of Norwich was made by Walter Suffield, bishop of Norwich in 1256, in obedience to a command of Alexander IV., and remained in force until the new valuation called the Taxation of Pope Nicolas of 1291. This inquisition was evidently held to prove whether the patron's nominee was of canonical age; the presumption was against it as he was only in acolyte's orders, inferior to the subdiaconate.

No. 502. Thomas Cantock, one of the king's clerks, was appointed chancellor of Ireland, Oct. 28, 1291; he was a canon of Emly and prebendary of Mollagymon, dio. Cashel, was elected bishop of Emly in Sept. 1306, and consecrated, still keeping the chancellorship. He died Feb. 3, 1308. See Sweetman's Irish Docs., 1285-1292, No. 977; Ware's Works, ed. Harris, i., 496.

No. 504. T. prior, i.e., Thomas de Winton, 1290-1301. Robert Burnell, bishop of Bath and Wells, 1275-1292. William de Gyvele, or of Yeovil, abbot of Muchelney, 1274-1293. E., i.e., Edward de la Cnolle, dean, 1256-1284. Philipp de Stanton, died 1295. Thomas de Button, archdeacon, see n. to No. 487. N., i.e., Nicholas, son of Nicholas, rector of Martock, treasurer, Wells Cath. MSS., p. 198. W., i.e., Willham le Rus, sub-dean. W., i.e., Walter de Lechlade, succentor.

No. 514. John, abbot of Glastonbury, was John of Kent, who held office from 1294 until his death in 1303. Commendation, Lat. Commendatio, that part of the service following the Mass now generally called the "Absolution" (Absolutiones). Galilee,—at Glastonbury the church of St. Mary, which occupied the site of the venerated wooden church (lignea basilica; vetusta ecclesia) stood to the west of, and was a separate building from, the great church, and is now called St. Joseph's Chapel. The Galilee which ranged with it on the outside and connected it with the great church, consisted of three bays. Pike, a Richard Pyke held part of the manor of Ash, near Martock, in 1315, see Nomina Villarum, ap. Kirby's Quest, Somerset Record Soc., p. 67; the name was closely connected with the history of the abbey, a William Pike having been elected abbot in 1199, see John of Glaston, ed. Hearne, i., 185, 189.

No. 515. Westbury on the Mendip Hills, near Wells; the church was appropriated to the monastery of Bruton (Brytonia), and the convent was bound to pay three marks a year to maintain a wax candle before the high altar in the cathedral, and a like sum to the abbey church of Bath, see Wells Cath. MSS., pp. 14, 71.

No. 523. SS. Cosmus and Damianus, Sept. 27.

No. 525. Scherwereton, i.e., Shurton in Stogursey, see No. 391. St. Martin's Day, Nov. 11.

No. 527. Walter Haselshaw, bishop, 1302-1308, previously dean of Wells.

No. 527A. Ralph of Salop, bishop 1329-1363. Byndus, probably de Bandenelli, here written de Banewell, see Wells Cath. MSS., p. 139.

No. 530. Clunacense, an instance of one of those unions for prayers which were not uncommon between different religious houses, here extending to a different congregation. The Cluniac like the later Cistercian Order was a branch from the main stem of the O.S.B. This memorandum exemplifies the doctrine of ecclesiastical indulgencies. Apart from the guilt of sin, remission of which can be obtained only by the sacrament of penance, sin is held to entail temporal punishment, either here or in another state. In old times the church meted out the measure of this punishment, canonically ordaining so much for one sin, so much for another, and excluding the sinner from church for certain fixed periods. The Church claims the power of remitting the temporal punishment, which is the consequence of sin, by the application of the merits of Christ and His Saints, and uses this power in the case of those who perform certain good and acceptable works. Thus here the punishment of exclusion from church for fourteen years is, in the case of the benefactors of Bath, remitted to seven years and a third of seven years. Again, such benefactors received the same amount of remission of the temporal punishment of sin as those who visited the stationes of the churches at Rome. The sum of the psalters was apparently the number of psalters said for these benefactors. Scribantur,—let the names of those who give a ring, a brooch, or at the least a penny be written down that every year on the anniversaries kept by the monks the absolutio may be said on their behalf.

No. 534. Robert is Robert Clopcote, elected prior 1301, on the resignation of Thomas de Winton (No. 580) on April 10 of that year. Robert died Feb. 26, 1332, see No. 704.

No. 539. R., i.e., Robert Winchelsey. For this synod see No. 444.

No. 540. When the clergy of the southern province in obedience to the bull "Clericis laicos" refused in Jan., 1297, to make the king a grant, he put them out of his protection. Many of them, and among them this Jordan, submitted each on his own account, and obtained protection. By so doing they were of course involved in the censure pronounced by the Pope on all who disobeyed the command contained in his bull.

No. 543. Walter, i.e., Walter de Sideling elected in 1292 abbot of Middleton, or Milton, Abbas in Dorsetshire, a Benedictine monastery founded by King Athelstan, see Monasticon, II., 345.

No. 544. Andrew de Sacro-Fonte (of Holywell) in 1279 became abbot of Athelney, founded by King Alfred, and apparently died in 1297, Monasticon, II., 403.

William de Colerne, abbot of Malmesbury, died 1296, for whose doings see Registrum Malmesburiense (Rolls ser.), II. passim, and also Monasticon, I., 256.

William de Woodforde, abbot of Peterborough, 1295-1299, ib., I., 357.

No. 549. Gentile, i.e., Gentilis Partino Montefiore, a Franciscan, was made cardinal priest of SS. Silvestro and Martino ai Monti, by Boniface VIII., in 1298, was legate in Hungary where he did good service to the House of Anjou in 1308 and 1309, defended the character of Boniface VIII. at the Council of Vienne in 1311, and died Oct. 27, 1312. He was an eminent decretalist.

Chodderne, written Chedderne in the duplicate on p. 209 of MS. (No. 572) and therefore no doubt Cheddar. The insertion of the notices referring to John Godmer is due to his brother (?) Hugh being a monk of Bath. Like so many other entries this document refers to the dispute between Edward I. and the clergy, who were forbidden by Boniface VIII. to grant the king any contribution or tax from themselves or the revenues of their churches. Date Aug. 8, 1300.

No. 550. St. Edmund, K. and M., Nov. 20. King of the East Angles, d. 870.

No. 552. Mileford, i.e., Milford, see n. to No. 3a.

No. 554. John Symonis, or son of Symon, or Symons.

Nos. 556, 557. St. Martin, bishop and confessor, Nov. 11. St. Cecilia, V. and M., Nov. 25. St. Andrew, ap. Nov. 30. These two entries are interesting, for they refer to the celebrated parliament of 1295. Edward on Sept. 30, by writs directed to the archbishops and bishops, summoned the clergy of the kingdom to parliament as an estate of the realm, his letters containing the clause "Præmunientes, &c.," by which the attendance of the proctors was commanded. The parliament was first fixed for Nov. 13, "die Dominica proxima post festum Sancti Martini" (No. 556), and on Nov. 2 its meeting was postponed until Nov. 27 (No. 557). The Bath monks, however did not recognize the constitutional character of the assembly, and elected their proctor under the "Præmunientes" clause to appear in a "generalis convocatio," see Bishop Stubbs's Select Charters, pp. 474, 475, and Cons. Hist., ii., 200, n. 4; Parliamentary Writs, i., 34; B. Cotton, pp. 298, 299.

No. 558. G., i.e., Godfrey Giffard, see n. to No. 308.

No. 560. St. Tecla. Sept. 23.

No. 568. Translation of St. Thomas. July 7.

No. 569. St. Margaret, V. and M. July 20.

Nos. 575-577. Excommunication of a material, not of an explicit or special, kind had been incurred by the convent by complying with the King's demand in opposition to the bull "Clericis laicos." Date Nov. 9.

No. 577. Penitentiary, the chief disciplinary officer and judge of the papal court.

No. 580. Quasi Modo, the anthem sung on the Sunday after Easter Day, or Low Sunday. Is it allowable to call to mind Victor Hugo's Notre Dame de Paris? Date April 11. Date of election of Robert Clopote, April 14, 1301.

No. 581. Evesty, or as in Domesday Evestia, an obsolete name of an estate which in 1086 was in the demesne of the abbot of Bath, and which is noted in the Survey between Corston and Ashwick. This document is of special interest as fixing the situation. Eyton observes that it must have been in the old Frome hundred and assumes that it was in the Wellow portion of it, Domesday Studies, Somerset, i., 151, 153. Cirencester, an abbey of regular canons founded by Henry I., or rather by Rainbald the priest, the chancellor of Edward the Confessor, who with King Henry's aid converted the collegiate church into an abbey. It may be assumed that the tithes of Evesty passed to Cirencester with the churches of Frome and Wellow, Monasticon, VI., 176, where the name of the abbot in 1302 is given as Henry de Hamptonet.

No. 582. Adam de Brokenberewe, an old form of our Brackenbury, was elected abbot of Cirencester, Nov. 13, 1307, and died 1309. Monasticon, u.s.

No. 584. The King here exercised a fundatorial right which often took the form of a demand for a corrody, see post.

No. 587. Kerleye may perhaps stand for Herley or Warlegh, a hamlet of Bathford. SS. Gordian and Epiniachus, May 10.

No. 588. John de Everdon was in 1318 forced to resign the rectory of Wraxall as holding it contrary to the constitution against pluralities, see Register of Bishop Drovensford (Somerset Record Soc.), p. 12. A J. de Everdon was chancellor of Exeter in 1308, and 1323-1337 dean of S. Paul's.

No. 591. Bishop William March died June 11, and was, as here, buried on the 17th June, the Day of St. Botolph, abbot and confessor.

No. 593. Dean, apparently Peter de Insula, archdeacon of Wells. Thomas de Gorges of the Wraxall family, died cir. 1320. Henry Husee, chancellor 1291, dean 1302, died 1305. William de Cherleton received a pension from the dean and chapter in 1322, in lieu of the firm of Cheddar which he obtained in 1301, Wells Cath. MSS., pp. 78, 90.

No. 594. Lugovere, or Lugore, Thomas de, chancellor of Wells in 1310, Wells Cath. MSS., p. 73.

No. 598. Richard de Rodeney, see Wells Cath. MSS., p. 75 and passim. He was one of the executors of the will of Bishop William March. At the date of the charter, Dec. 13, 1303, he does not appear to have been knighted, an honour which he afterwards received. He seems to have virtually been the founder of the family, though his father William held lands of the dean and chapter at Mark. Mr. Hannay in his delightful Rodney (English Men of Action) notes how the Rodney family remained in continuous possession of Rodney Stoke "through the great storms of English history" for four hundred years, from Sir Richard Rodeney, who was born in the reign of Henry III, down to Sir Edward, who lived into the reign of Charles I. After Sir Edward's death Rodney Stoke passed by the marriage of one of his daughters to the family of Brydges of Keynsham, of which were the Dukes of Chandos of the eighteenth century.

No. 604. Sevenhamptone or Seavington St. Mary, near Ilminster.

No. 605. Tynterna, or Tintern on Bannow Bay, co. Wexford, a Cistercian abbey founded by William the Marshal, earl of Pembroke (d. 1219), and colonized from the abbey at Tintern, Monmouthshire, of which he was patron, Archdall's Monasticon Hibern., p. 752. Tysfrino Christopher probably a merchant of Lucca, see Sweetman's Cat. of Irish Docs., 1294.

No. 608. Robert Burnel granted the chapter of Wells the churches of Yeovilton, Burnham, Stanton Drew, and Chelwood; for his chantry see No. 625, Wells Cath. MSS., p. 293, and Reynolds's Wells Cath., Pref., p. xxxi.

No. 609. The manors of Pucklechurch, Winscombe, Blackford, and Cranmore, in accordance with the composition of Jan., 1219, remained to the bishop when the union between the see of Bath and the abbacy of Glastonbury was dissolved.

No. 611. John Symonis, or the son of Symon, was sub-prior, see No. 564, Date of parliament Dec. 2. This appointment seems to refer to the parliament of 1311, which, after the enactment of the ordinances of that year, was prorogued, the commons to reassemble on 12th and the clergy on the 18th of Nov. The clergy were dissatisfied at the short notice given them, and were granted an extension, being re-summoned for Dec. 2, see Bishop Stubbs's Cons. Hist., ii., 331, n. 4.

Nos. 612-622. These entries refer to the election of John de Drokensford as bishop of Bath and Wells in succession to Bishop Walter Haselshaw, who died Dec. 11, 1308. The date of No. 613, Dec. 21; of No. 614, Dec. 17; No. 615, St. Lucy's day, Dec. 13; No. 618, 4 Nones of Jan., i.e., Jan. 2 (1309). John de Drokensford, probably born at Drokensford or Droxford in Hants, was keeper of the wardrobe of Edward I, and was much employed in what may be described as commissariat work during the wars with Scotland. Besides holding livings in various parts of England, he was a prebendary of Lichfield, Lincoln, and Wells. He had large secular estates. In the first year of Edward II he sat in the exchequer as chancellor. He was consecrated bishop of Bath and Wells on Nov. 9, 1309. His register is extant at Wells, and has been calendared for the Somerset Record Soc. (vol. i), by Bishop Hobhouse. He died May 9, 1329. See Dict. of National Biogr., art. Drokensford, John de.

No. 624. Burnham, the advowson was given by Robert de Ewyas, temp. Henry I., to his priory at Ewyas, about 12 miles south-west of Hereford, that the convent there might form a priory at Burnham, but the condition was not fulfilled, and in 1222 the advowson became a matter of dispute between Roger de Clifford, who had married the heiress of Robert de Ewyas, and the abbey of St. Peter at Gloucester, for Ewyas was itself a cell of Gloucester. The advowson was adjudged to Gloucester in 1280. The abbey parted with the advowson to Bishop Robert Burnell in 1285, who gave it to the dean and chapter of Wells, but the appropriation was not effected until (as by this entry) Mar. 18, 1306, see Monasticon, I., 545; Wells Cath. MSS., pp. 102, 176.

No. 625. Foundation of the new chantries of Bishops Burnell and Haselshaw, as a return for the gifts of Burnell to the dean and chapter of the churches of Yeovilton, Burnham, Stanton Drew, and Chelwood, carried out after his death by Haselshaw. These grants were made to help the chapter in their work of building. The substructure of the chapter house was finished in 1286 under Dean Thomas de Button, see Canon Church's Rise and Growth of the Chapter of Wells, Archæologia, 1893 (at this moment unpublished).

No. 626. T., prior, i.e., Thomas Crist, appointed prior by Pope John XXII. in 1332, in the room of Robert de Sutton, deposed, see Nos. 525, 527, 737.

No. 636. Stocklond, i.e., Stockland Bristol, seven miles N.W. of Bridgewater, was appropriated to the House of St. Mark, by Bishop Drokensford. The hospital was founded by Robert de Berkeley, a son of Robert Fitzharding, at Billeswick, then a suburb of Bristol, and the foundation was completed by Maurice le Gaunt, whence the house was often called Gaunt's hospital. The chapel is now the Mayor's chapel.

No. 637. Woky, or Wookey, near Wells. The church was given by Bishop Robert to the deanery. In 1209, however, the sub-dean had to take it in exchange for his estate at Wedmore, and so the rectory became attached to his office. In 1310 the dean, John Godelee, disputed the right of the sub-dean, then William de Yatton (Galton in the text is a misprint for Jatton), to spiritual jurisdiction in Wells, Wookey, and other parishes. The dispute was decided as by this entry, and further, in 1321, Bishop Drokensford decreed that Wookey, where the episcopal manor extended over nearly the whole parish, should be under the immediate jurisdiction of himself and his successors, and fined the sub-dean ten casks of wine, or their value in money, for the benefit of the dean, see Rev. T. S. Holmes's History of Wookey, p. 80.

No. 641. Confirmation, the Bishop reproved prior Robert for granting "mischievous confirmations to letters" of the Bishop's predecessors, and the prior on Nov. 30 gave a promise that for the future he would be careful to take council with the Bishop in such matters, see Register of Bishop Drokensford (Somerset Record Society), p. 196.

No. 642. Corston, the rectory had been appropriated to Bath by Bishop Walter. The vacancy and presentation were made the opportunity for the institution of the vicarage, see No. 647, and Register, u. s., p. 195.

No. 643. High Littleton, in the hundred of Chewton. For the losses of Keynsham Abbey, "tithes of Chewstoke lost on award, damage to Irish and Welsh property by raids and murrain," see Register, u. s., p. 178.

Nos. 650-652. Ynglescomb, i.e., Englishcombe, about two miles S.W. of Bath. The rectory was given to the priory of Bermondsey, in Surrey, by Hawisa de Gournay, wife of Roger de Baalun, in 1112, and was afterwards alienated to Bath, with a reserve of an annual payment of fifty shillings to the monks, and two marks and ten shillings to the prior of Bermondsey, see Annals of Bermondsey ap. Annales Monastici, III., 431. Bermondsey Priory was founded in 1082 for Cluniac monks by Ailwin Child, a citizen of London, and was peopled by monks from La Charité de Dieu, on the Loire. It received large endowments, and had several possessions in Somerset. J. Chancellor, i.e., John le Fort, died in, or about, 1291, and left books to the Dean and Chapter of Wells, Wells Cath. MSS., pp. 42, 65, 72. J. de Axebrugg, i.e., John of Axbridge, sub-dean of Wells, died in, or about, 1266 (History of Wookey, p. 87). A chantry was founded for him by the hospital of St. John at Bristol, at the altar of St. Mary Magdalen in Wells Cathedral, see Wells Cath. MSS., p. 36. 15 Kalends of April, 1239, i.e., March 18, 1240.

No. 653. St. Nicholas, Bishop and Confessor, December 6.

Nos. 660-665. These entries of 1323 seem to refer to the troubles of 1322, when Edward II. took arms against the Earl of Lancaster and other lords. Lancaster was defeated at Boroughbridge in March, and shortly afterwards beheaded. Two of the minor insurgents belonged to families more or less connected with the Bath Convent, viz.; Henry de Wylynton, and Henry de Montfort, who were hanged at Bristol on April 3.

No. 664. Bishop of Exeter, i.e., Walter de Stapledon, precentor of Exeter, elected to that see in November 1307, consecrated October 13, 1308, appointed treasurer of the exchequer, 1320, was slain by the London mob, October 15, 1326.

No. 666. Berton, the King's Barton, on the N.W. of the city, was granted to the convent by King John in his 5th year, "cum toto hundredo forinseco ad predictam Berthonam pertinente," at a fee-farm rent of twenty pounds, which rent was from time to time assigned to various queens, and other ladies of the royal house, as part of their dower, see No. 382. For the grant of the city see C.C. MS. No. 38.

No. 667. 3 R[ichard]. The compiler is in error, for Jocelin was not consecrated until 1206. It was Bishop Savaric who appropriated the church of Chew to Bath, see No. 808. Prior Robert surrendered it to Jocelin in 1214, (Wells Cath. MSS., p. 208), who charged it with two pensions of ten marks, one to the church of Wells (ib., pp. 25, 71), and the other to Bath (ib., 192). In 1299 the prior gave a receipt for five marks, see No. 491. For further reference to this plea, see No. 867.

Nos. 669, 670. These licences were probably given at the time of the early crusades of Henry of Lancaster (died 1361) "in Prussia, Rhodes, Cyprus, and Granada," Capgrave, De Illustr. Henricis (Rolls ser.), p. 161. Nubbeley, i.e., Nibley, in Westerleigh parish, two miles W. of Chipping Sodbury.

No. 671. 18 Edward II., the regnal years of Edward II. began July 8, 1307.

No. 683. Wydecombe, see No. 34.

No. 684. For forty read four.

No. 686. Radestoke, comp. Nos. 23, 24, where Radstock is called "Stokes of Helias de Clifton," after the donor of the church, comp. No. 808. A record of this fine will be found in Mr. E. Green's Feet of Fines, Somerset, p. 43.

No. 687, sqg. These entries apparently refer to the subsidy levied by Edward III., in 1332, 1335, on the occasion of the marriage of his eldest sister Eleanor to Reginald, Count of Gueldres, Fœdera (Record ed.), II., 852, 853.

No. 691. Sodbury, i.e., Chipping Sodbury, Gloucestershire.

No. 691. Sir John de Moun, Lord Mohun, 3rd of the name, sat as a peer, had part in the execution of Piers Gaveston in 1312, married (1) Ada, daughter of Payn, or Robert, Tiptoft, and (2) Sibilla, died 1330. This entry shows that, contrary to Mr. Lyte's belief, John was buried at Dunster, and not at Bruton with his ancestors, Lyte's Dunster, pp. 18, 19. He was not of course the founder, but is so-called here, as the representative of the founder, William de Mohun. At the time of the Suppression there were only three monks at Dunster, Tanner's Notitia, p. 467.

No. 696. If this entry refers, as its place suggests, to Ralph of Salop, consec., December 3, 1329, J. is Pope John XXII.

Nos. 699, 700. It seems probable that Prior Robert Clopcote, who had been rebuked by Bishop Drokensford for maladministration in 1321, was in 1331 in some trouble for a like cause, and that a process was pending in the Roman curia, that he sent proctors to defend himself, with power, if necessary, to proffer his resignation, and that he died February 27, 1332, before his resignation had been received at Bath, see No. 704.

No. 701. Acton Turville, near Chipping Sodbury. Midford, about four miles S. of Bath. Warleigh, four miles N.E. of Bath.

No. 703. Prior, when this declaration was made Robert de Sutton had not been elected, see next entry. The compiler seems to have given the heading that he correctly used for later entries.

No. 710. John de Schordich, or Shoreditch, D.C.L., a famous lawyer, a member of the King's council, and later a knight, had been employed by Edward II. as an envoy to France in 1324 (T. Walsingham, I., 175), was similarly employed by Edward III. in 1329-1331 (Fœdera II., 772, 777, 791), and as proctor with reference to the marriage of his sister Eleanor in 1332 (ib. 834), is styled knight, and received commission to treat with France in 1334 (ib. 880), was employed about the marriage of the King's daughter, Juliana, in 1335 (ib. 915), in 1337 was again carrying on negotiations with France, and was sent by the King to represent his need of money to the clergy of the province of York (ib. 964, 1005), in 1343 he was appointed one of the King's Judges in Aquitaine (ib. 1236), and was sent to Pope Clement VI., residing at Avignon, with letters from the King and magnates complaining of the abuse of provisions and of papal exactions, and there candalized the cardinals by his plain speaking. He was murdered in 1345 by four of his own people near Ware, see Adam of Murimuth's Chron. (Rolls ser.), pp. 143, 149, 171, 229, 239. Thomas Cryst. As Robert de Clopcote's resignation was made in the Roman court (at Avignon), the pope, Clement VI., in accordance with a usurpation of immemorial antiquity, appointed his successor, annulling the election of Robert de Sutton, who on Oct. 24, 1332, received from the convent a pension of twenty pounds, and the office of prior of Dunster, see No. 736, where the sums are not correctly stated; the pension appears to have been made up thus—from Bridgewater, five pounds, from Shurton two pounds fifteen shillings, from the portions of chamberlain and pitancer, seven pounds six shillings and eight pence, from Bampton, eighteen shillings and four pence, and from the common fund four pounds, see MS. Register of Ralph of Salop, f. 71, verso.

No. 722 sqq. Corrody. In monasteries of Royal foundation the Kings claimed to have the fundatorial right of compelling the convents to receive and support as a guest a person nominated by them, and often used this claim as a means of providing for old servants. This practice was mischievous, for it diverted to the livelihood of a secular person substance that should have maintained a member of the religious community. When a house was prosperous the royal demand was of no great importance, but in bad times, such as had come on Bath, a convent would if possible resist it, or petition against it. The plea of the convent (No. 727) was good. In 1304 on a similar demand on the part of Edward I., the convent of Athelney sent the King a letter praying him to excuse them, Monasticon, II., 407.

Henry I. crossed to Normandy in Aug. 1111, in order to compel Fulk V. of Anjou to acknowledge him as over-lord of Maine. He remained over sea for two years.

No. 732. Note the reference to the Bishop's palace originally built by Bishop John de Villula, comp. No. 779.

No. 765. Dreycote, i.e., Draycot, near Cheddar.

No. 767. Date is that of the prior's grant.

No. 768. Sir Walter de Mereyet, or Meriet, youngest son of Sir Simon de Meriet, Knight, of Brompton-Ralph, Somerset, by his wife Lucy, daughter of William Malet, came of a younger branch of the Meriets of Meriet. He took orders, became chancellor of the church of Exeter in 1323, and in 1327 was collated to a Wells stall (Drokensford's Register, p. 267). He was one of the lords of Wydecomb, or Withycombe, in the hundred of Carhampton, and patron of the church there, to which on Oct. 25, 1334, he presented Reginald de Buggewelle, afterwards dean of Exeter. He held much land in Somerset. He died May 17, 1345, leaving his nephew Simon his heir, see Mr. Greenfield's learned paper on Meriet of Meriet and of Hestercombe in Somerset Archæol. Soc's. Proc. (1882), XXVIII., ii., 99-215.

No. 780. This looks as though Robert de Sutton died in 1337, see n. to No. 710.

No. 782. Edith Cryst, probably the mother or sister of the prior.

No. 784. William de Littelton, precentor, 1335-1350; T. de Retford, see n. to No. 338; Wybert al. Wilbert de Littelton, elected canon of Wells 1334, died 1335, Wells Cath. MSS., pp. 102, 281. St. Boniface, bishop and martyr, June 6. 1337, i.e., 1338, N.S.

No. 785. St. Barnabas, Ap., June 11. Elias de Sto. Albano, collated chancellor of the church of Sarum 1340, see No. 800, and Le Neve's Fasti (ed. Hardy), II., 650. Margaret, daughter of Richard de Clare, Earl of Gloucester (1222-1262), by his wife Maud, daughter of John de Lacy, Earl of Lincoln, married in 1272 Edmund "of Almaine," fifth son and successor of Richard Earl of Cornwall, the second son of King John. Edmund, died Oct. 1, 1300, and in 1301 the parliament held at Lincoln allowed his widow an annuity of five hundred pounds. Robert de Clopote was prior in 1302, not at the time when this memorandum was written. John de Sobbury, see n. to No. 892.

No. 786. Weteresfeld, comp. No. 787, apparently Wethersfield, a parish in Essex, 6 miles north-west of Braintree.

No. 789. Aysshlegham, i.e., Ashley, a hamlet of Box in N. Wilts.

No. 795. St. Dionysius, Oct. 5.

No. 797. Ferscheford, i.e., Freshford, about 4 miles south-east of Bath.

No. 808. In this long entry are contained matters that are more usually found in a Consuetudinary than in a Chartulary. First come the rites and customs to be observed on the death of a brother of the house, then those to be observed on the death of one to whom have been granted the benefits of the brotherhood. Next we have the commemoration of benefactors and their gifts, first kings, then bishops, lastly monks and laymen. The first subject is noted in the preface to this volume. Cappa, a cope. Disciplina, a scourging. De Profundis, Ps. 130. Dirige et Placebo were "Dirige," the first word of the first antiphon of matins, and "Placebo" of vespers for the dead, respectively. Tricennale or trental, the service for the dead which was held continually for the thirty days immediately succeeding the funeral; on the thirtieth day, which was specially observed, the whole office was to be sung. Brevitoris, the brevillator, was generally the bearer of a brief, here of a "breve depositionis," a notice of the death of a monk which was sent round by the convent of the deceased to many monasteries and other churches, and specially to those which were bound to pray for the souls of its brethren deceased. Cæna Domini, i.e., Holy Thursday. For a year the commons or rations of the deceased were given out and appropriated to the poor, and on the Maundy Thursday after his death the deceased equally with the other brethren had his poor man allotted to him who received in his name the offices of humility and charity. At Dunster, and in the Irish cells, the commons of deceased monks were given to the poor of the place.

Classicum, the bell was to be tolled. Martyrologium, the book in which were recorded the names of deceased brethren and benefactors with their obits.

Athelstan, son of Edward the Elder, reigned 925-940. Edwinus, i.e., Edwy, son of Edmund and successor of Edred, 955-959. Edmund, son of Edward the Elder and successor of Athelstan, 940-946. Diddenham, see C.C.C. MS. No. 5 n., and so in same part of this volume for other places. Edgar, younger son of Edmund, reigned over the whole people 959-975. Ethelred, apparently first of that name, the fourth son of Ethelwulf, and successor of Ethelbert, 866-871. Evestia, see n. to No. 581. Kenulf, or Cenwulf, King of the Mercians, son of Cuthbert, succeeded Ecgerth in 796, conquered Eadbert Præn, King of Kent, and made Kent subject, founded the monastery of Winchcombe, Gloucestershire, d. 819, was reckoned a saint, and was succeeded by his son, Kenelm, a child of seven, who a few months later was murdered by his sister Quendryth, and was buried with his father at Winchcombe. He was sainted, his day being July 17, see William of Malmesbury's G. Pontiff (Rolls ser.), p. 294; Acta SS. (Bolland), Jul. iv., 297, C.C.C. MS. No. 19. Henry, for this charter see C.C.C. MS. No. 43.

Johannes, i.e., John de Villula, consecrated 1088, d. 1122. casulum, i.e., chasuble, the special sacrificial vestment. manipulum, an embroidered scarf, worn on the left arm of the priest. samito, silk. testudines, vaulting or arches. turribulum, al. turibulum, a censer. cochlear, al. cochlearium, a spoon, here one used for the sacred elements. acerra, a boat-like vessel for incense, Fr. navette. ex onichino, of onyx. dorsaria, al. dorsalia, hangings for the choir. tapetia, al. tapeta, covering-cloths, seldom, if ever, in the Middle Ages for carpets.

Cum aurifrisio, with a welt of gold embroidery, Fr. orfrais. pallia, palls for covering the high altar. subumbratæ, chalice-veils.

Oblationem Pentecostalem, on Whitsunday all Christians were by the law of the Church bound to communicate, not each in his own church, but in the mother churches in cities (Council of Orleans, Labbe, iv., 1408). Hence the "Pentecostal," or Whitsun offering, was made to the mother churches. The entry is important as bearing on Bishop Jocelin's relations with Bath in reference to the dignity of the church. B. Eufemia, V. and M., said to have been martyred at Chalcedon about 307, especially revered in the East. Her day is Sept. 16, see Acta SS. (Bolland), Sept. v., 252, amictum, the amice, a rectangular piece of fine linen worn by clergy of the higher orders above the cassock. St. Peter, archbishop of Tarentaise, was one of the consecrators of Bishop Reginald. He was consecrated 1141, d. Sept. 14, 1171, and was canonized May 10, 1191, see Gams's Series Episcoporum, p. 829.

Thesauri, for the seizure of the treasures of churches to make up King Richard's ransom in 1193, see Hoveden's Chron. (Rolls ser.), III., 211; W. of Newburgh's Hist. (Engl. Hist. Soc.), lib. iv., c. 38. calices, chalices.

Exameto, i.g., samito, vide supra. cum morsu, &c., with a clasp, or pin, of sardonyx, camani for camæi, Fr. camaiieu. lemiculis, perhaps for lamellulis, with thin plates of metal, here of gold. tunica, a cross-shaped vestment worn by sub-deacons, like the dalmatica, or dalmatic, of the higher orders, which however had fuller sleeves, was longer than the tunicle, and also had two red bands before and behind; it is worn by sovereigns at coronation. Bishops wear both tunicle and dalmatic at Pontifical Mass. in transverso virgatas, apparently with threads worked crossways. pelves, dish-shaped lamps. corporalia, "corporals," cloths for covering the Corpus Domini, the consecrated elements, on the altar.

Cyrothecis, gloves. pontificalis [liber], a service-book containing the order of the sacraments and rites, with the changes made when performed by a bishop, together with rites only performed by a bishop or his commissary, e.g., confirmation, benediction of an abbot, monk, or nun, coronation, consecration of an anchorite, et sim.

Seysyna, seisin, or possession as of freehold. vivaria, fish-stews, or ponds, where fish were kept alive. lavendria, the laundry. Loteghet, Ludgate, which has of course nothing to do with a King Lud, and means a postern. frontale, al. frontellus, a frontal, or cloth hung in front of an altar. sindon, fine cotton, muslin. aspersorium, a sprinkler for holy water. fratres minores, Franciscans, minorites. tualla, napkins, whence our twill. de opere paganorum, this and the curtain of camel's hair were memorials of King Edward's crusade; it is extremely uncertain whether R. Burnell accompanied the King, see Dict. of National Biogr., VII., 387.

Superhumeral, the same as the amictus, or amice, vide supra.

No. 809. Cantuaria, the masses are here given which were to be sung for the religious of other houses. Certesia, the Benedictine monastery of Chertsey, in Surrey. Wynchelcumba, Winchcombe, in Gloucestershire. Dina, the Cistercian abbey of Dene, or Flexley, in Gloucestershire founded by Roger, Earl of Hereford (died 1154). Cadom', St. Stephen's at Caen, founded by the Conqueror. Lewes, in Sussex, where William Earl of Warren founded a Cluniac priory in the reign of the Conqueror. Bradenstoka, an Augustinian priory in Wiltshire, not far from Dauntsey, founded by Walter of Evreux in 1142.

No. 810. camera, stands for all the effects of the deceased. quinque tricennialia, five masses a day for thirty days. The last words of this entry are hopeless.

No. 811. de Anna, i.g., de Anno, see n. to No. 3A. conversi, serving brethren. St. Katherine, V. and M., Nov. 25. St. Alphege, archbishop and martyr, April 19. St. Leonard, abbot, Nov. 6. St. Egidius, St. Giles, abbot, Sept. 1. St. Johannes [Evang.] ante portam latinam, May 6.

- No. 817. Henry de Sandwich, instituted archdeacon, 1309. Foxley in N. Wilts, near Malmesbury.
- No. 824. Translation of St. Thomas, July 7. Edwyth, i.e., Edwy, see C.C.C. MS. No. 13.
- No. 831. Henpton Monachorum, the church of Henton (see n. to No. 156), was about 1344 given to the convent there by William de Littleton (admitted precentor of Wells 1335), who held it of his own right, Wells Cath. MSS., p. 173.
- No. 834. Kyngesbury, Kingsbury Episcopi, four miles south-east of Langport. The vicarage and a manor there belonged to the chancellor, Reynolds's Cath. Church of Wells, pref., p. civ.
- No. 839. Schefton, i.e., Shaftesbury. The convent held land at Kelston.
- No. 842. Kelveton, i.e., Kilton, see n. to No. 56.
- No. 849. Luk, i.e., Lucca.
- No. 854. Elias, see n. to No. 785.
- No. 862. Stat. is "A Statute for the Clergy," made 1344.
- No. 863. Lutton, i.e., Lytton, a prebend of Wells.
- No. 864. Lovintona, for this grant of Robert de Cary, lord of Lovington, see Wells Cath. MSS., p. 23.
- No. 878. Minhevede, see No. 812.
- No. 879. J., i.e., John de Grandison, prebendary of Lincoln and of Wells, and archdeacon of Nottingham, was provided to the see of Exeter, and consecrated at Avignon in 1327. He built the nave of his cathedral church, and died July 15, 1369, in his seventy-seventh year. He was a magnificent prelate, nobly born and rich. His mother was co-heiress of Baron John de Tregöz (see n. to No. 354), and he held lands in Somerset, see Dict. of National Biogr., XXII., 371, Oliver's Bishops of Exeter, pp. 75, 87, 444, Freeman's Exeter (Historic Towns ser.), p. 189, Wells Cath. MSS., pp. 87, 94.
- No. 887. Bishop, Richard Francis, succeeded to the see of Waterford 1337, received the temporalities April 6, 1338, died 1348, Ware's Works (ed. Harris), I., 552, Cotton's Fasti Eccl. Hibern., I., 4.
- No. 888. Raymond Pelegrini, chaplain of Clement VI., who employed him in England, was instituted prebendary of London Oct. 1337, and of Lincoln 1350, and died 1386, see Fædera (Record ed.), III., 133, 202, 269, 610, 637, Le Neve's Fasti (ed. Hardy), II., 134, 189, 369. Hugh de Calce, chancellor of St. Patrick's, Dublin, Cotton's Fasti Eccl. Hibern., II., 114.

No. 892. John de Sobbury, or Sodbury, prebendary of Combe IX. in Wells, and rector of Shepton Mallet (see No. 764) on the presentation of Sir John de Beauchamp, exchanged livings in April, 1332, with William de Clopcote, rector of Cold Ashton, apparently brother of prior John, MS. Reg., Ralph of Salop.

No. 894. Reginald de Buggewell (see n. to No. 768), dean of Exeter, 1353-1364.

No. 897. St. Laurence, martyr, Aug. 10.

No. 899. Clement VI., Peter Roger, of a noble house of the Limousin, prior of St. Baudile at Nîmes, abbot of Fécamp, archbishop of Sens, archbishop of Rouen, and a cardinal, elected pope May 7, 1342, died Dec. 6, 1352. Annibal de Ceccano, a canon of Paris, archdeacon of Arras, and a famous canonist, was highly esteemed by John XXII., who made him archbishop of Naples, which see he vacated in 1327, when he was made cardinal-bishop of Tusculum, or Frascati. He was sent to France as legate by Clement VI. in 1344 and 1347, and was also sent to uphold Charles, the emperor-elect, and to Naples, where he arranged a three years' truce between Lewis of Hungary and Queen Joanna. In 1350 he was made prefect of Rome, and on Aug. 17 of that year died at the castle of S. Giorgio in the Campagna, being, it was thought, poisoned, see Cardella's Memorie de Cardinali, II., 122. Stephen, i.e., Etienne Aubert, a Limousin, and a canonist of note, bishop of Clermont 1340, cardinal-bishop of Ostia 1342, pope as Innocent VI. Dec. 18, 1352, died Sept. 12, 1362. For the letter of Clement VI. counselling Edward to make peace with France, dated Jan. 15, 1347, and for the king's reply, as in No. 900, see Robert de Avesbury's Gesta (Rolls ser.), pp. 377-382, and for other notices of the mediation of these nuncios, Baker's Chron. (ed. Thompson), pp. 80, 250, 253, 258.

No. 902. The vicars choral of Wells lived in private lodgings in the city until Bishop Ralph of Salop built the Vicars' Close for their common habitation, on land where Alan de Hotham had his house. This Alan was collated to the prebend of Dundon in 1327, and in 1328 to the house in question, late Alre's, sometime canon, see Reynolds's Wells Cath., pref., lx., John of Drokensford's Reg. (Somerset Record Soc.), pp. 279, 293.

No. 903. John, prior, i.e., John of Iford, see n. to No. 939.

No. 917. Sub-prior, was not the priorship vacant by death of John de Iford?

No. 937. This entry refers to the result of the mediation of Pope Innocent VI., who early in 1354 sent Cardinal Guidon de Boulogne (archbishop of Lyons, cardinal 1342, and bishop of Porto 1350, died 1373) to Calais to arrange terms between England and France. A truce was made on April 6 to last until April 1, 1355, and it was agreed that both parties should send ambassadors to the papal court to arrange a lasting peace. The only result of the negotiations was a prolongation of the truce until midsummer. Edward entered France in August, see Fœdera (Record ed.) III., 276, 283, Baker's Chron. (ed. Thompson), pp. 123, 126, 289, 290.

No. 939. The date of the bond, which was an offence under the act of 1346 against maintenance, was Feb. 22, 1352, so John de Iford was still prior then, and had not either resigned or been deposed, as believed by Wharton, Browne Willis, Dugdale, and others. It may be that he died prior in 1359, see No. 917. The bond evidently had to do with the king's claim to present to the church of Olveston.

No. 940. Humphrey Stafford, son of William Stafford, and heir to Sir Humphrey Stafford of Hooke, was descended from Harvey Bagot and Milicent Stafford his wife, the ancestors of the Barons and Earls of Stafford. He was born in 1439, and was summoned to parliament among the peers 1461-1463, as Humphrey Stafford de Suthwyck, Knt.; in 1464 he was created Baron Stafford de Southwicke by patent to him and the heirs male of his body, was appointed constable of Bridgwater Castle, and in 1469 was created Earl of Devonshire. In which year he was, after the defeat of King Henry's army at Edgecote, taken prisoner in Somerset, and beheaded at Bridgwater on Aug. 17. His body was buried in the abbey church of Glastonbury. He married Isabel, daughter of Sir John Barre, by whom he had no issue. He died seised of eight manors in Somerset, and other estates elsewhere, see Doyle's Official Baronage, I., 578, Dugdale's Baronage, I., 173, Nicolas's Historic Peerage (ed. Courthope), p. 446, Warkworth's Chron. (Camden Soc.), pp. 6, 7. John, prior, seems to be a prior of whom no other notice has occurred. We may probably place him between Thomas Lacock and prior Richard.

No. 941. John, prior, was either John of Iford, or perhaps John of Berwick (see Nos. 85, 344), who occurs prior in 1377.

No. 942. Prior, perhaps prior Richard who occurs 1476. John Cantlow, prior, died May, 1499.

No. 943. Bridde, or William Bird, elected prior Aug. 31, 1499, died May 22, 1525.
